St. John, N. B.

JAMES W. THOMPSON, Proprietor.

THE Proprietor of the above HOTEL takes this opportunity to return thanks for the liberal patronage hitherto received, and most respectfully solicits a continuance of the same.

This HOTEL is very pleasantly situated, and commands a view of King Square, and other parts of the City.

In connection with the Hotel, is GOOD STABLE, and a careful Hostler in attendance. Parties coming from Prince Edward Island with horses will find this establishment the most comfortable in the City, and a person always at the Cars on their arrival.

St. John, Sept. 10, 1868.

CRAWFORD'S HOTEL.

NO. 9, KING SQUARE,
SAINT JOHN, N. B.

THE subscriber having thoroughly refitted and enlarged his HOTEL and STORE, is now prepared to accommodate Permanent and Transient Boarders on the most reasonable terms.

ALSO, in connection, a GROCERY STORE, where every article required for house use may be had.

J. CRAWFORD & SON.
Sept. 10, 1868.

Point Du Chene House!

THE Subscriber would beg to call the attention of the traveling public to this well-known and favorite Hotel, situated at the head of the Railway Wharf, at Point Du Chene, N. B.

Its advantages as a residence for parties in quest of health cannot be surpassed. The air is pure, bracing and invigorating, while there is every facility for deep sea-bathing.

The trains for St. John leave the door twice every day. The charges will be found moderate, the table good; and the subscriber hopes by strict attention to the requirements of his customers, to ensure general satisfaction.

PETER SCHURMAN, Proprietor.
P. S.—Being himself a P. E. Islander, the subscriber would hereby respectfully request a share of the Island patronage.

POETRY.

THEY SAY.

A WORD TO TALE-BEARERS.

They say—Ah! well, suppose they do,
But can they prove the story true?
Suspicion may arise from nought
But malice, envy, want of thought;
Why count yourself among the "they,"
Who whisper what they dare not say?

They say—but why the tale release,
And help to make the matter worse?
No good can possibly accrue
From telling what may be untrue?
And is it not a nobler plan
To speak of all the best you can?

They say—well if it would be so,
Why need you tell the tale of woe?
Will it the bitter wrong redress,
Or make one pain of sorrow less?
Will it the erring one restore,
Henceforth to go and sin no more?

They say—Oh! pause and look within,
See how thine heart inclines to sin;
Watch, lest in dark temptations hour,
Thou, too, shouldst sink beneath its power;
Pity the frail, weep o'er their fall,
But speak of good or not at all.

CHAPTER IV.

"Do you mean to hire that old man?" said Luc Leroy to his mother. "He is a fool, and past work."

"He can work hard enough," returned madam, "and his age is in his favour; old folks are scarcely such fools as young ones."

"Words grew high between them; but, after a bitter dispute, the widow had her own way, and hired me for a year."

"Look here," said Luc Leroy to me the next day, "whose servant do you mean to be—hers or mine? If you are her's I'll put you bones under the harrow every hour of the day; if you are mine, and you please me, you may have as much drink as you like, and we'll cheat the old woman together."

"I am yours, young master, body and soul," I answered; "give me a drink now."

"I never touched anything but water, monsieur, and I had a hard time in striving to deceive Luc Leroy with regard to my drinking propensities; yet, nerved as I was, not knowing but failure would be death, I succeeded in this as in all else."

"I grew apparently so helpless and drunken that the villain at last put his life in my hands."

"See here," he said to me one day, "seizing his little step-brother by the arm, 'isn't it hard a man should be cheated out of his inheritance by a weazel like this? Why don't you take the fever and die, little miserable? Pshaw! not you! there's no such luck as that for me!'"

"I watched him more narrowly after this, and twice I saved the child's life, when a seeming accident would have crushed it to death. First, when stumbling against the boy, he flung him beneath the heavy wheel of a loaded wagon; and again in the mill, when only a desperate exertion of strength on my part extricated him from a frightful fate."

"But this constant watch over the child wore out my nerves and strength, and I resolved to let it end to it. Some night late, when Madame Leroy and I sat up together, waiting for her dissipated son, I said suddenly:

"Madame, if you wish to save your little child's life, send it away."

"What do you mean, imbecile?" she cried, angry. "Are you drunk again tonight?"

"I thought, madame, you knew by this time that I am not so fond of drink as I pretend to be. I tell you, your son Luc is resolved to kill the little Henri."

The women turned pale and looked at me in ghastly terror.

"I believe you," she said; "I know Luc is capable of any wickedness."

"I am worn out with watching the child," I returned; "and I will not promise you that I can save his life again."

"Here I told her what had happened, and though she had heard this before from the child's imperfect speech, yet now that it came to her circumstantially she trembled."
