A Lesson in Pronunciation.

Long time he'd been away from home.
The Reverend Mr. Harris,
When he returned he told his wife
That he had been in Paris.

And when he asked his wife about
His little girls and boys,
She said that they were visiting
An aunt in Illinois.

She said she was in failing health
And if she had the means,
She'd like to take a trip herself
As far as New Orleans.

He said: "My dear, you'll have the trip"—
The proper thing to do is
To go together and we'll take
The steamer at St. Louis.

THE NEWS OF THE DAY.

Carefully Collected by "The Examiner's" Reporters.

The Dominion Government has decided to vote $7,000 for the relief of the sufferers by the Hull fire.

The Pope has consented to be the god father of Queen Christina's child, the future King of Spain.

The models who pose for the school of design, Pittsburg, Pa., are the latest strikers. They demand 25 cents per hour.

A justice, who makes a specialty of re-marrying divorced couples who have become reconciled, hangs out the sign "Re-paring nearly done."

Mrs. Muldon—Mrs. Mulcahey, have you heard the new rindly of hydrophobia? Mrs. Mulcahey—No, faith. What is it? Mrs. Muldon—Plaster of Paris, begorra!

The next examination of candidates for entrance to the Royal Military College will take place in the 12 Military Districts of the Dominion on the 15th June. The maximum number of candidates is 24, two from each district.

At a recent woman's suffrage convention, where it was found necessary to pass the bonnet instead of the hat, not one of the delegates would consent to give up her headgear for fear somebody else would discover where the bonnet had been fixed over.

It is asserted by several German newspapers that the Queen is desirous of bringing about a marriage between the Grand Duke of Hesse and the Duchess of Albany. The duchess originally met her late husband at Darmstadt during the autumn of 1881.

An article in a health magazine shows that printers die young. May be good printers die young; but the compositor who converts a word of five syllables into new words of one and two syllables each, without trying very hard, doesn't die so early as he should.

Shakespeare didn't know everything, after all. He says: "But love is blind and lovers cannot see." Can't, eh! Two young, inexperienced lovers can get along Sunday night with less gas and less room to move around in than the oldest man with the biggest spectacles in America.

A judge, in pronouncing the death sentence, tenderly observed: "If guilty, you richly deserve the fate that awaits you. If innocent, it will be a gratification for you to feel that you were hanged without such a crime on your conscience. In either case you will be delivered from a world of care."

An Atlanta cow fell into a deep well on Sunday, and her owner was unable to hoist her out, so he brought many loads of shavings from a neighboring planing mill and dumped them into the well. As fast as they fell the cow trampled them under her feet and thus she came to the surface and walked away.

In Scotland recently a woman went to register the birth of her child and had to answer the usual questions. To the one, "Were you present at the birth?" the astonished woman answered: "I am the mother of the bairn." "But that is not an answer to my question," replied the registrar. "Were you present at the birth?"

The pathetic side of far Western journalism comes from the Wallows (W. T.) Chief, as follows: "For the first time in the Chief's existence its woodpile has got down to chips. Any subscriber who is long on wood and short on money can bring a load of the first named article to this office. The wood should be dry, and must be cut into two foot lengths."

Colonel Hewett, R. E., Commandant of the Royal Military College at Kingston since its establishment, sails very shortly for England. He has been appointed to the staff, commanding the Royal Engineers in the west of England and South Wales. The royal naval dockyards of Plymouth and Milford are in the district. The appointment is for five years, at about $6,000 per year.

A well known New York lawyer while addressing a country jury got down on his knees to illustrate the manner in which his client prayed. The awkwardness of the effort provoked some laughter among the spectators, which the judge promptly rebuked, saying: "This commotion is disrespectful to the court and unfair to the counsel. It is probably his first experience."

Jonesville, New York State, has a very absent-minded citizen. Two mornings in succession after milking the cow he set the milk in a corner and carried the milking stool into the house. On the third morning he took a basket of turnips to the cow, emptied them before her, and then began to milk into the basket. He had presence of mind enough to stop when about half through milking.

A priest in Patterson, N. J., tracked a lot of his parishioners up a back alley into a tavern on a recent Sunday night, walked in, planted his back against the door, took out pencil and paper, and noted the astonished parties as they jumped through the windows, tasted the unfinished drinks at the bar, that he might swear to their quality, and walked out. A few more such men would put law and order leagues to blush.

CARD PLAYING FORBIDDEN.—A gentleman tells a good story of his domestics. Having employed a new house-maid, he sat down in the dining room the evening after to a 'leiv game of whist' with his wife and a couple of neighbors. The next morning 'the help' observed that 'the card playing must be put a stop to or she would be obliged to leave—she didn't approve of the practice, and never allowed it in families where she lived!'

"Will you have a piece of pie, Mr. Good man?" asked Bobby's mother of the minister. "Thanks, no," he replied. "Will you, Bobby?" she enquired. "No, I guess not," said Bobby, rather hesitatingly. The minister looked at Bobby in surprise. "I thought all little boys were fond of pie," he said. "They are," replied Bobby. "I could eat that hull pie; but ma said if you didn't take any I musn't an' she'd save it for to-morrow."

Mrs. Stafford, of St. Louis, was spending the afternoon with a neighbor recently, when she saw a valuable setter dog of her husband's racing back and forth between the two houses, and attempting to jump up to the window where she was sitting. She at length decided that something was wrong, went to her house, unlocked the door, and found that the house was on fire. The dog's warning was in time, and the building was saved.

A story is told of a Boston doctor. In a crowded church the deacon with the contribution box made his difficult way up the aisle and held that receptacle for the cash of the charitable suggestively before the young man. "I am very sorry, sir," the doctor said, to the infinite scandal and astonishment of all about him, "but the woman with a pink feather in her bonnet has taken my purse and I can't have her arrested until after service, so you'll have to wait."

The proprietorship of love letters has been forever set at rest in England, three of the lords justices deciding that the letters belong to the writer, who in case of estrangement may demand and receive them back, provided they have not been destroyed. Ladies may write in them whatever nonsense they may like, with the full assurance that they cannot be published without their consent, nor can they be sold or disposed of contrary to the author's wishes.

They were a Boston couple, who had been married but a few weeks and had just gone to housekeeping. As the husband stood at the area door one morning, with the market basket in his hand, his bride threw her arms around him and said: "Do you indeed love me so very much, Bradford?" "Bunker Hill monument may fall," he answered with enthusiasm, "but my love will always stand." "Well, then," she exclaimed, kissing him, "don't forget the beans."

At last something new beside the bride is chronicled at weddings. A Baltimore "happy couple" knelt on a rug of pink and red roses when the clergyman pronounced them one, last week, and the bridal gown was not of conventional satin, but composed entirely of Valenciennes lace, caught with tiny white birds and natural orange blossoms. Now, if this isn't novelty, nothing at these fashionable ceremonies can be, and Baltimore deserves to be called the banner city, having thought of the floral rug.

The Scotch are proverbially a thrifty race. A short time ago the traveller of a well-known wholesale house in London called on a Glasgow trader for the usual annual account. [With many apologies this gentleman professed his inability to pay, but offered a bill at three months in place of the ready cash. After some demur this was accepted, and the necessary document drawn up and settled. Said the debtor, "No, my laddie, that's finished, I'll discount it for ye if ye weel!" And the bill was discounted.

Pierre Boudreau, a merchant of Laprairie, Que., failed three years ago. Amongst other assets turned over to the creditors was a policy of life insurance of $2,000. Six months after Mr. Boudreau died and the insurance company was notified, the creditors of course claiming payment. The Canada Life Assurance Company has refused payment on the ground that an assurance policy was taken out under a false pretence, he suffering from a melody at that time. An action has been entered against the company to obtain payment.

Sir Provo William Parry Wallis, G. C. B., the senior Admiral of the Fleet, has just attained his ninety-fifth year, having been born at Halifax, in Nova Scotia, on April 12th, 1791. The gallant veteran first went to sea in 1804, but he was born on the books of the navy since 1795, when he was only four years old, his father having occupied an official position in the naval yard at Halifax. He took a prominent part in the memorable action off Boston between the Shannon, of which he was lieutenant, and the American frigate Chesapeake, which was captured after a desperate struggle of fifteen minutes, on June 1st, 1813, nearly seventy-three years ago.

It is contended by the Americans that the treaty of 1818 being between the United States and Great Britain and the treaty of 1819 being an imperial statute, that the Imperial authorities have the sole right of acting under that statute. The statute of 1819 confers upon any properly commissioned officer in British North America, from the governor down to a sheriff, the authority to make seizures and confiscations of fishermen infringing the treaty of 1818. By the British North American act this right (section 12) is passed on and perpetuated to the officials of the Dominion of Canada. The position of Canada is absolutely unassailable.
