

MR. AND MRS. HENRY WALDO HOYT

Couple Pledge Vows At Beautiful Church Wedding

First United Baptist Church was the scene of an attractive spring wedding on Saturday afternoon, May 17th, at three o'clock, when Elizabeth Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Jones of Moncton, became the bride of Henry Waldo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Clement Hoyt of Charlotte, P.E.I.

Rev. Malcolm Harlow, the assistant minister of the church, united the young couple in marriage with the double ring ceremony. The organist, R. C. Bayley, played the nuptial music and accompanied the guest soloist, George P. Andrin, of Oshawa, Ontario. Mr. Andrin sang the Lord's Prayer during the ceremony, and "You'll Never Walk Alone," when the register was signed.

The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of white and yellow shasta poms and standards of jade ferns. The guest pews were marked with white shasta poms tied with white satin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Mrs. Robert Hollingum as matron of honor, Miss Jacklyn Macdonald, Moncton, and Miss Helen Fletcher of Fredericton, as bridesmaids. Little Miss Karen Ostler of Riverview, the bride's cousin, was flower girl.

The groom was attended by Norman Wilson of Charlottetown. The ushers were Keith Beaton, Montreal, Earl Beaton and Macdonald Johnston of Charlottetown.

The bride wore a Bianchi model gown, slightly en traine, of white peau-de-soie, over a bell hoop and a nylon crinoline. The fitted bodice closed in the back with self-covered buttons from neck to waist, and the Italian style neckline was bordered with embroidered net bands of pearls and mother-of-pearl sequins in a leaf and flower design. On either side of the flowing skirt and applied from waist to hem were matching double scrolls of the same pearl and sequin embroidery. The elbow length sleeves were shirred. Her white satin shoes featured needle toes.

The shoulder length veil of silk illusion fell from a crown headpiece encrusted with sequins and pearls resembling miniature orange blossoms. She carried an arm spray bouquet of white anemone orchids and stephanotis. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of her groom.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in white nylon chiffon, ballerina length, with an all-over floral pattern in primrose yellow and willow green. They wore willow green satin cummerbunds looped into wide bows at the back. The scoop necklines and the arm-holes were piped with matching satin. They wore yellow satin pumps and yellow poms, and carried bouquets of yellow snapdragon and white shasta poms. Their hats were crownless cartwheels of white horsehair banded with yellow velvet ribbon caught in the back with white shasta poms.

The flower girl wore a white nylon organie dress with full skirt over a small crinoline. The tucked blouse had a satin Peter Pan collar, satin bands on the short sleeves and a satin belt. She wore white kid slippers with pink, green and yellow trim, white gloves with a pearl design, and a halo of fresh yellow and white shasta poms. She carried a garden basket of shrimp gailoli and yellow shasta poms.

The bride's mother was wearing a model dress of orange beige faille in sheath style. It featured a low, wide collar ending in a large bow of the material at the neckline. She wore matching shoes and a picture that covered with small silk chiffon poppies in shades blending from beige to dull copper. White gloves and a white satin bag beaded with pearls completed her ensemble. Her corsage was of white Killarney roses.

The groom's mother wore a Di- or gown in navy blue, a chemise styled sheath, with V back and empire effect in front. Crescent-shaped folds of the material were

ELIEN'S DIARY

Shut-ins' Day Is Here - We All Remember Friends

"Folks who lie in bed late miss so much Ellen. They know nothing of this," James said stopping a moment in the yard this morning to look along the reach of our valley, which like every other rural area island-over, is adorned richly now with the myriad shades of the spring.

"I don't believe I ever saw a will reside in Halifax where Mrs. MacLean will resume her position on the staff of the Child Guidance Clinic and Mr. MacLean his theological studies at Pine Hill, Divinity College.

Out of town guests included: Mrs. Chester Edwards, Milford, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crooks; Mrs. Ward MacLean; Miss Jane MacLean; Mr. Clifford Gates; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Crooks; Mr. Gordon McMurtry, Halifax, N.S.; Miss Joan Gilroy; Mrs. Leith Stetson, Truro, N.S.; Miss Audrey Hamilton, Montreal, P.Q.; Miss Teresa McIsaac, Antigonish, N.S.; Miss Myrtle Moffitt, Fredericton, N.B.; Rev. and Mrs. George MacLean and family, Glace Bay; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Roberts, Kensington, P.E.I.

Prior to the marriage of Miss Wilma Wood a kitchen shower was held in her honour at the home of Mrs. Ward MacLean, Halifax, where Mrs. MacLean and Mrs. Robert Crooks were joint hostesses.

Also entertaining for Miss Wood were Miss Ann Lou MacPhail, Halifax, Mrs. Earl Ross, 10 Grafton St., Charlottetown and Miss Kathryn Beck, Central Royalty.

A community shower was held at the bride's home on Saturday May 17th, where she was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

spring more beautiful" he smiled, turning away to his chores. The air was clean - washed from yesterday's damp, and perfumed with a million blossoms, underlaid for us at Alderlea with the fragrance of the spruce and fir, that in grove and woodland decorate the hillsides and mark with other company the windings of the millstream down toward the river.

The sun had already risen, and northward was lifting the silvery gossamer mists of morning off the far homesteads. It was beautiful. And so still. Not a vehicle passed yet, for in the heat of the cropping as now, our farmers meet their day in good time. Hushed and solemn it was. A new morning is a sacred affair.

Today? This was that, which brought James to the first of the sowing. It took sacks of cleaned grain to be dropped at intervals on a fresh stirred headland of field, and then a man and his horse off to "the other farm" past Rob's and the sowing. "I thought you'd come too, Ellen," James said about to set forth. "Just by way of an outing" he twinkled. "I can never understand why people must travel to strange places to find entertainment" he offered, "when if they could only appreciate it, they could find it as near as their own farm. . . You could enjoy yourself and 'tend grain' for me too."

How appealing the invitation was. Just to be outdoors for a long sunny spring day, away from all the petty cares of the house, so enchanting that would be.

"If this wasn't Saturday" he said putting the tempting thought aside. "I understand," he nodded. "I will get one of the children—like Gage—to help me" he said stepping off after his horse down the driveway.

What a rite the sowing is! And how dedicated the born farmer is to it, and mostly blest the seed that he scatters.

By this, the eve of Shut-ins' Day is here. Tomorrow we visit someone—kin maybe or friend, fated to be among that great company of those now laid aside from the active round they once enjoyed — to give them of our sympathy and cheer and also to gain inspiration from them.

And we who have experienced the trials of a shut-ins' day, will appreciate the bravery of spirit it takes to endure even a short period of inactivity. And in our inability to read the Master's part of life, the query, "Why must this be?" will again come to mind. But we shall remember: "There must be thorns amid life's flowers you know And you and I wherever we may go,

Can find no bliss that is not mixed with pain — No path without a cloud. It would be vain For me to wish that not a single tear

Might dim the gladness that you hold so dear. I am not wise enough to understand All that is best for you. The Master's Hand Must sometimes touch life's saddest chords to reach Its sweetest music, and His child to teach

To trust His love, till the long blessing night Is all forgotten in the morning light.

Trust—trust him, then, and thus shall good or ill Your trustful soul with present blessing fill. Each loss is truest gain if, day by day,

He fills the place of all He takes away." Until Monday — — Diary — Goodnight. . . .
