P.Q. Marketing System Is 'Broadcast In Canada'

While it has been recognized for some time that marketing of farm products in this province is a major problem, it has not been easy to develop farmer interest or to get public support tending towards improvement. Attempts to set up marketing boards have been fiercely resisted and there has been a notable lack of support on the part of different governments. We suggest there is a contrast in attitudes in this province and in the province of Quebec which is also facing major agricultural problems. To quote Dr. Mercier, deputy minister in Quebec, "So we've given farmers the tools they can use to control their marketing and improve their production, including adequate credit."

"Biggest change of all is a complete revamping of the marketing setup. The new policy, broadest of any in Canada, gives producers a chance to take over complete responsibility for marketing wherever a favourable vote of producers can be secured, under conditions laid down by the Quebec Marketing Board. This opportunity covers not only agricultural commodities but also forest products, with the power to zone woodlot areas according to their productivity, and to establish a quota which processors would be required to buy from woodlot owners in each zone."

ANNUAL MEETING

There are resolutions and resolutions and of the 30 some that were passed on Jan. 7 a number if implemented can be considered to be of major significance from a policy standpoint.

At the top of the list would be the federation committing itself to planning and carrying out a conference on matters related to the educational needs of farm people. Without elaborating it is quite evident to those who think about it that the special educational needs of farm people have not been receiving very special attention.

Farm machinery problems were approached in a new way by asking the minister of agriculture to set up a committee to study problems in this area. Continued reluctance here can only indicate that a major area of concern to farm people is being disregarded for fear of infringing on the privileges of free enterprise.

The federation also sees the need of setting up a committee to study and make recommendations on matters related to land use in this province. This is a long overdue matter and one that is important only in the light of where we may land in 10, 20 or 30 years unless positive concern is shown. The federation stands committed to assisting in the formation of a Highway Safety League in this province as a means of moving towards saner and more rational attitudes in the use of highway and motor vehicles.

The editor of the Maritime Farmer is also a practicing dairyman and in his issue of Jan. 7 outlined his New Year's holiday. It consisted of little sleep, a great deal of work, frozen pipes, and succession of frustrations. The experience leads the editor to moralize on some of the contrasts in the economic system.

"This may be one of the reasons why there are so many of our farms closing down. The younger generation cannot see why one section of the community has to work for 15 hours a day for six days of the week, with all the usual chores to be done on Sundays and holidays, while others work for eight hours a day, five days a week and have more to show for their efforts at the end of the year which included holidays with pay and all public holidays thrown in.

"It cannot truthfully be said that farmers are inefficient as no other industry can show such a high rate of production per man or a larger rate of increased investment in mechanical aids in an effort to replace the vanished farm labor population. Most Western and other countries indicate that there is a waiting-list of young men who desire the opportunity to farm. Such is not the case in this country. Why?"

During the week of Jan. 13 the department of agriculture will be holding farm management meetings as follows:

Tuesday, Vernon Bridge School; Wednesday, Alberton Regional High School; Thursday, North Rustico-Stella Maris School. All meetings start at 8 p.m. Topics to be discussed—include farm records and inventories. The success of these meetings depends to a large extent on interest shown by farmers. The two matters under discussion are important and merit the attention of all keen farmers.

MARITIME FEDERATION

Today, Friday, the Maritime Federation of Agriculture holds its annual meeting in Moncton. This province will be represented by six delegates. This is a meeting which brings representative farm people from the three provinces together to coordinate ideas on matters of farm policy. Matters on which agreement is reached at this meeting and are then brought forward at the eastern agricultural conference which meets in Charlottetown on Jan. 17-18 this suggests that when a resolution on a matter of farm policy finally arrives at the Canadian Federation of Agriculture meeting it has had a very thorough screening.

Today the first officials of the Dairy Farmers of Canada are arriving in preparation for the annual convention which starts on Monday. Open to the public will be the general meetings on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Hospitality is being provided by the government of the province, by the city, by the Dairymen's Association, and by different dairy companies. By Friday the Dairy Farmers will be back in stable camp and the field will be taken over by the Federation of Agriculture. Certainly the two weeks in questions will be one of the most intensive efforts in an organizational way for agriculture that the province has witnessed.

ACROSS THE ISLAND

Strong Man Stories, Some Are Fantastic

By NEIL A. MATHESON
Provincial-Farm Editor

"STRONG MAN" stunts are told across the Island and Cairns MacCallum. Brackley Beach told me one recently about Adolph MacCallum who was a double first cousin of Edward MacCallum who was Cairns' father.

All of us have heard some fantastic stories of feats of strength that were evidently impossible, but Mr. MacCallum assures me that he has been told of these feats by men whose truthfulness and reliability were unquestionable.

One concerns the lifting of a 200-pound anvil by Adolph MacCallum. That is not unusual in itself but the real story is how he lifted it. The powerfully built man who was five feet, eight inches in height and weighed 190 pounds stuck his thumb in the square hole in which the "hardy" set and lifted the weight shoulder high in that manner. The "hardy" was the piece of steel that set in the anvil and had a sharp-flat-edge top which the blacksmith used for cutting off the ends of horse shoes, and many other pieces of iron with which he worked.

ON ANOTHER occasion Mr. MacCallum carried two 200-pound bags of salt, one under each arm, from the wharf at Covehead to a point some 50 yards away. The wharf would be in the area alongside the Covehead bridge which had a section washed out in the fierce storm on December 10 of last year. The man who told Cairns that story was Robert Shaw, father of Gordon Shaw who runs Shaw's Hotel, he told me.

Cairns' uncle, Robert MacCallum, told him that Adolph drew two men's pay when he worked on railroad construction job through British Columbia because of the useful manner in which the powerfully built Islander could lift a rail—the weight at that time was 700 pounds—and place it in position on the track. I have seen four men struggle to unbolt and carry one end of such a rail, though I have also known one or two men who would carry an end on a shoulder casually.

MacCallum returned home from B.C. and then went to the Klondike in 1898 and never came back home. He went from there to California. Relatives here never heard whether he had struck it rich in the Klondike, but it is probable he may have had success there, for he was reputed to have died a rich man, his relative Cairns MacCallum told me.

As I have said, the reports of the feat of strength credited to MacCallum came from reliable people, and there seems to be no question as to their authenticity. But many of the feats reported in the past have been fantastic tales that grew with the telling.

One From Personal Experience

I RECALL the late Arthur Gaudet used to relate some of those fantastic tales, when I started with the Patriot as a young sports writer some 30 years ago. And often the farce story endings was "he was a giant of a man, Tiny. You would be only a child alongside him."

My favorite retort was "never mind Mr. Gaudet, just wait until I am 20 or 30 years older and they'll be telling the same kind of yarns about me". The report was only a defensive mechanism to reply to some of these fantastic and utterly impossible feats of strength suggesting that the tales grew with the passing years, but later I found my prophecy had been correct.

I met and talked with many former Mt. Allison, Acadia, Dalhousie and other university men in Ottawa during a four-year period there in the middle 50's, and often the talk turned to old Maritime football games and unusual feats of strength. Imagine my surprise one day during a noon-day meal chat, to have one of them recall the time I had intervened in a developing fight on a football field in a Maritime rugby final at Antigonish and held a husky Cape Bretoner off his feet at the full length of my arm, while I talked to him.

The funny part is that I couldn't convince them the story was almost completely unfounded. I recalled the instant readily. One of our team members—I was playing with Mt. Allison—kicked one of the Caledonia players while he was lying on the ground. The act was inexcusable and the Glace Bay boys naturally resented so violently that a wholesale fight was shaping up. Stan Scott was, I believe, the captain of the team, and he seemed to be in the centre of the melee. I had a great admiration for the big fellow and quickly barged my way to the centre of activity, caught him by his sweater over the chest, shook him once so he would listen to me and proceeded to tell him what was on my mind.

We felt as bad over the dirty tactics of our man as they did, and having explained that to him the fight stopped quickly. But nobody ever thought of holding the big fellow off the ground, particularly for any length of time. I am recalling this story now only to illustrate the type of impossible feats of strength many old stories do describe. I cannot hurt anyone else's feelings when the joke is on myself, as it was that time. But I assure you there are still some otherwise wise and completely reasonable men who still believe that fantastic yarn.

Centennial Essay Competitions

A GUARDIAN newspaper story Tuesday told of the two Centennial year essay competitions that invite stories dealing with earlier days in this province.

One group of essays, open to grandparents 70 years and over will deal with the topic "when I was very young". The other is a bit more difficult and the theme will be "Rural life in Prince Edward Island in 1864."

The first group should offer no difficulty and Mrs. Eric Kipping who is convenor of the essay competition committee—the others are John Martin, district officer National Film Board and myself—is hoping for a large number of entries. There is a prize of $100 available for the essay selected as the best in each of the two categories, and the subjects themselves should offer an unusually strong challenge to many of our people.

I gather that the essays will be judged on their accuracy in so far as the period described is concerned, as well as for their literary content. For example the stories of rural life here 100 years ago will necessarily have to refer to the correct farm implements used at the time.

There would be no binders, for example, the first one came here around 1890, Cyril Shaw, Brudenell told me recently. His father had cut grain with a cradle-scythe when he was a boy, he said Mr. Shaw who recalled for me that one farm in the York Point area grew 40 acres of grain and all of it was cut with the scythe. Was there a threshing machine then, or did they still use a flail? Did driving wagons exist?, etc.

I hope to do a story on Mr. Shaw's information in a few weeks time and it will answer some of those questions for you, but it will not answer all of them, and I have no intention of trying to provide too many answers. Digging up the information will, I suggest, be part of the fun of getting the essay material together. The deadline for entries is March 31 and they should be mailed to Centennial Essay Competition, Federation of Agriculture, P.O. Box 546, Charlottetown.

Incidentally J. Lincoln Dewar, federation secretary is the chairman of the overall committee on "Agriculture, fisheries and community". Mrs. Kipping is the chairman of the subcommittee on essays.

Judges will be Mrs. Harold Laird, Kensington, Lt.-Col. Leo F. MacDonald, Charlottetown and I believe I am the other one.

Decorative Lights To Remain Aglow

Originally scheduled to be turned off at the close of the Christmas holiday season the city's Centennial lights are likely to continue to remain in temporary operation, Mayor A. Walthen Gaudet said yesterday.

Plans to turn them off until activities were in full swing later in the year were shelved in view of the big farm conventions coming here next week. It was thought the decorative scheme should be in action for the visit of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the Dairymen's Association of Canada.

Since these will be follow ed in short order by an electrical convention it is doubtful the lights will be put at all.
