Short Sermon for Students.

Twenty-five years ago the following sermonette to students was printed on the last page of a popular copy book published by T. J. Day, bookseller, etc., Guelph. It has influenced the lives of many of the pupils of the public schools for good, and has created in their minds healthy hatred for the senseless and sometimes superstitious use of the world "luck": "You are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your motto: Self-reliance, faith, honesty and industry, and inscribe on your banner; luck is a fool—pluck is a hero. Don't take too much advice; keep at the helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Don't practice too much humility; you can't get above your level. Put potatoes in a cart over a rough road, and the small potatoes go to the bottom. Think well of yourself—strike out—assume your position—fire above the mark you intend to hit. Civility costs nothing and buys everything. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that move the world. Don't deceive. Don't tattle. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Be generous. Read the papers. Advertise your business. Love your God and fellow man. Love truth and virtue. Love your country and obey the laws."

Fireside Happiness.

The late Oliver Wendell Holmes once said that his idea of perfect happiness was when four feet were on the fender. During the latter part of his life a friend, coming in and finding him in a dejected state of mind, asked, "What is the matter, my friend?" Mr. Holmes looked up with a look of sorrow and said "Don't you see? There are only two feet on the fender now." How much of the happiness of marriage relation is suggested by his idea, so touchingly expressed, and the pathos of after time! It seems startling to think how much may be, perhaps unheedingly, done by ourselves to destroy our fireside happiness.

COLD DAYS ARE HERE.

How is your wardrobe? Has it been replenished with good warm clothing to protect you from winter's surly blasts? If it has not it is time you were making a start. As well to buy them now and have the good of them, as to buy them when the winter is half over. The next qustion is where is the best place to buy? That question is settled once you see our stock and prices.

In Readymade Clothing We Lead

$30.000 is a low estimate of our stock. Have you seen the men's full length heavy frieze ulster we are selling at $3.95? If it is not the best ever sold at the money, we'll take a back seat. We have also the best values in overcoats, reesers and suits to be had. Also warm under clothing, warm shirts, warm caps in abundance.

Dont Forget the Boys.

The boys that play leap frog and slide down the roof of the house on their pants We have suits made especially for these kind of boys, suits that wear and dont tare. Also reefers, ulsters and overcoats for all sizes of boys. Our prices on all children's clothing is away down, our stock away up. We again repeat, don't forget the boys.

when your clothing is interlined with the light and durable Fibre Chamois. It positively keeps out every breath of cold wind and frosty air and keeps in the natural warmth of the body, because it is a complete non-conductor. You'll enjoy genuine fall and winter comfort with it through your clothing, for only a few cents extra expense.

The Real Fibre Chamois sells now for 25c, with a label on each yard and there is also a label on every ready-to-wear suit which is interlined with it. Always look for them.

It Pleases Us

To have people critically examine our furniture. It stands critical examination. It stands the wear. It's made to wear, not merely to sell. We won't sell anything that people won't satisfied with after they get it home and live with it. There is no profit in such selling. A dissatisfied customers will spoil lots of business. We won't allow a customer to feel dissatisfied either with what he gets or what he pays for it. Many people buy all their furniture here—DO YOU?

HORACE HASZARD.

Charlottetown, 22nd October, 1896.—3i eod

SPOKE FROM A FULL HEART.

The Words Were a Tribute to a Wife's Faithful Companionship.

The Illinois Central train was half a hundred miles from Chicago, headed for the city, and at a little station an old farmer came aboard. He was a little, weasened man, with a sensitive mouth half concealed by an iron-gray beard. His ill-fitting clothes were evidently his most uncomfortable best. He slid softly into a seat occupied by a grave stranger, reading a newspaper. Two or three times the old man turned his face toward the brown flying landscape. The stranger was struck with the troubled expression and glanced wistfully at his companion.

The latter spoke at last with a strange huskiness in his voice.

"I am going to the city for the second time in my life," he said, half startled at his own words.

"Yes."

"Thirty years come July I went there for a wedding suit and I am going back there to-day for a coffin and a shroud for the little woman that married me.

"You don't know what it is, mister, to live and work 'longside a woman for thirty years, day in and day out, to find her always patient and willing and working, and then leave her laying dead and cold with her worn-out hands crossed on her breast. It was just a little after the turn of the night, and nobody but me was watching, when Mar'gie kinder woke up.

"'David,' says she, 'it's restful, so restful, and I am so tired.' And so she went to sleep again and waked up in eternity. You know, stranger, these words of hers has set me to thinking. Poor, tired soul. I never knew how much she needed rest. We never thought of it while we were working and skimping and saving, trying to lay up something for the children. She never had any pleasure; she never took any holidays or visited the other women. She raised the children and slopped the pigs and milked the cows and churned and cooked for harvest hands. I never knew or thought how she did it all with those poor crossed hands of hers.

"Some folks say it won't do any good, mister, but I am going to see that she is put away in something rich. We wasn't skimping and saving for thirty years for this, but I'm going to have the best money can buy. She's earned it, God knows."—St. Louis Republic.

Electrical Soap.

A battery has been patented consisting of a source of electrical energy placed inside a cake of toilet soap. The device is reputed to be intended for curative applications of electricity to the human body. The inventor says that his invention is based on the fact that the chemical decomposition of soap is such that when dissolved in water it produces a liquid having an exciting effect upon certain metallic electrodes placed in proximity to form an electric battery. In other words, you can soap yourself and get an electric shock. There are probably people who will buy the "electrical soap."

White Men Mustn't Marry Squaws.

The squaw men in the Seminole Indian reservation are in open revolt and threaten to exterminate the "full bloods." At the last session of the Seminole council a law was passed ordering all white men who married Indian women to leave the nation. There are 800 squaw men. White men marry the squaws in order to obtain 60 acres of land.

First Sensations in Battle.

What are the first sensations of the battlefield? Zola, Tolstoi and Stephen Crane have imagined them, and combatants have written them. "Something whizzed past me like a big bluebottle on the wing," says Lieut. "Herbert" of Plevna fame, "and the current of air caused by its rapid passage touched my ear. Another—another. All at once I realized that these were the enemy's bullets, and, horrible dictu, the discovery brought on a sudden violent attack of cholera-like disposition." The passage may be compared with Zola's description: "The now constant hissing of the bullets, with their sharp ping or buzz whispering around, and sometimes into us, gave me a sickening feeling and a cold perspiration. I felt weak around my knees, a sort of faintness and lack of strength in the joints of my legs, as if they would sink from under me. These symptoms did not decrease when several of my comrades were hit." Says Mr. Lee Goss, a former private in the Army of the Potomac: "No one quite knows how he will behave. 'No man'—I am quoting Wilkeson's stirring narrative—'really enjoys a battle One has to string up his nerves and take a firm grip on himself morally, and hold himself in the battle-flames for a few moments until warmed to passion. The impulse is to run out of danger.'"

If the raw soldier is there and then led forward against the enemy, the trial to his nerves will be less severe than if he has to wait under a heavy shell and shrapnel fire to which he can make no reply. In the one case he will only have his danger to think about. This was, perhaps, the reason why, in the war of 1870-71, the German soldiers rushed impatiently against the French positions. "The beat of the drum went before the thunder of our guns, and our power was shattered by the fire of the foes' unshaken infantry." He was anxious to end the period of tension, and to come to hand-grips with his enemy. But he paid, and paid very dearly, for his impatience.—Fortnightly Review.

Danger of Lightning.

The safest of all places in a thunder storm is an iron bedstead. Lying on this one is in a kind of metal cage, which acts as a lightning screen. This is contrary to a very generally accepted theory, as metal of all kinds and forms is generally avoided, under the belief that it "attracts" the electric fluid.

Trees, experience shows, are very dangerous places to shelter beneath in thunder storms, and isolated trees more so than a clump, especially if near water. An oak tree by the side of a pond is considered by electricians as particularly unsafe; but water and damp ground are to be avoided quite as much as trees.

If the storm is directly overhead it would be safer to lie on the earth flat than to stand up. Indoors the safest place—next to the iron bed—is the middle of the room, and a room in the middle of the house is safer than one at the bottom or top. All draughts and air currents should be avoided, and all bright objects, such as mirrors and picture frames, should be kept as clear of as possible.

Kaffir Dentists.

The methods of extracting teeth among the Kaffirs are barbarous in the extreme, and remind one of the tortures of the dark ages.

The patient is placed on the ground, and four men are employed to hold him down, two taking his arms and two his legs. Then the operator kneels down beside him, and taking a piece of sharpened ivory, steel or wood, he calmly proceeds to hack away at the gum until the offending tooth is loose. He then extracts it with finger and thumb, the patient having suffered naturally unspeakable agonies.

The time occupied in the operation is often of long duration, sometimes extending over as much as 30 minutes, but, of course, this varies according to the strength of the [illegible]

AT STITTSVILLE!

The Town's Leading Merchant Laid Up

Rheumatism in various forms is one of the most common diseases there is. It arises generally from impure blood and a broken down system. In the limbs it is painful; in most of the internal organs dangerous, and in the heart usually fatal.

The experience of Mr. S. Mann, the well known general merchant of Stittsville, is interesting:

"Last winter I was badly afflicted with rheumatism. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Pills. To my surprise, I got immediate relief, and before I had used one box my affliction was gone.

"I was also troubled with biliousness for years, and at intervals of three or four weeks would be laid up with a severe headache and sick stomach. Since using Chase's Pills I have not had an attack of either.

"I may add that Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles and skin diseases in just as effective as Dr. Chase's Pills for blood troubles. I have a clerk who suffered terribly from bleeding piles. He tried Chase's Ointment and in a few days was completely cured."

It is thought that the long continued rain of Saturday must have caused great damage by freshets in New Brunswick. The saw mill at Waterford, King's county, owned by James Moore, with all his lumber, a wharf and some logs were washed away. Loss probably $5,000. Many bridges were swept away and it is feared that some of the cattle pasturing on the lowlands are drowned.

LUCKY ENGLISHMEN.

Big Pensions Paid by the British Government on Account of Ancestors.

The Englishman most highly favored in the matter of pensions is the Duke of Richmond, whose predecessor was granted a pension of £10,000 a year, in perpetuity, in lieu of a duty of one shilling a chaldron on all coals exported from the Tyne, granted by Charles II. 1670. Up to 1799 the family had received, as proceeds of the duty, upwards of £2,000,000 sterling, and in July, 1799, the duty was commuted for an annual payment in perpetuity of £19,000 a year from the Consolidated Fund. As security for its payment, consols to the value of £633,333 6s. 9d. were purchased. In the following year £485,434 4s. 7d. worth of these consols were sold and the proceeds invested in land, and during the present reign the remainder of the consols was sold and the proceeds similarly invested.

Taking the actual payment on account of pensions at the present time, Earl Nelson is in receipt of the highest outside the royal annuities, viz., £5,000 per annum, payable in perpetuity to all and every the heirs male to whom the title of Earl Nelson shall descend.

The Duke of Wellington's annual pension of £4,000 is for life, and Lord Rodney's pension of £2,000 is, like that of Earl Nelson, perpetual. The amount of royal annuities, excluding the Queen's grant of £385,000, is £173,000. And together with pensions for naval and military services, £27,700; political and civil, £13,088; judicial, £70,705 besides a large number of miscellaneous pensions, brings the total up to £316,758 yearly. The largest pension on retiring from office is the £5,000 a year given to retiring Lord Chancellors.

A FAMOUS INSCRIPTION

Carved on a Stone Marking the Great Fire of London.

On August 20, 1876, was discovered in Pudding Lane, where the great fire of London began, the stone which bore the original English inscription that was placed on the monument erected close by in memory of that event. This great fire covered with ruins 396 acres, extending from the Tower westward to the Temple Church, and from the northeast gate to Holborn bridge, destroying St. Paul's Cathedral and 87 other churches, the city gates, the Royal Exchange, the Custom House, Guild Hall, Sion House, which was then by London Wall, and many other public buildings, besides 13,200 private houses, and laying waste 400 streets. About 200,000 persons were forced to encamp in the fields of Islington and Highgate: but only eight deaths were reported as resulting from this conflagraton.

The monument was erected according to the design and direction of Sir Christopher Wren between the years 1671 and 1677. The pedestal is 40 feet high, and the edifice altogether 202 feet, that being the distance of its base from the spot where the fire commenced which it commemorates. The staircase inside consists of 345 steps of black marble. It is the loftiest isolated column in the world, and therefore has proved a tempting position for persons of suicidal inclinations. In consequence of these fatalities a fence was placed round the railing of the gallery in 1839. But though this monument was rightly and worthily erected to commemorate the fire, inasmuch as it led to so little loss of human life, and, moreover, to the city being rebuilt on more favorable sanitary principles, at the same time the English inscription that the dread and suspicion with which Roman Catholics were then regarded caused to be placed upon it was, all now allow, a false and groundless accusation.

There were three other inscriptions in Latin; but it was the English one, cut in 1681, that propagated this slander. The words inscribed were as follows: "This pillar was set up in perpetual remembrance of the most dreadful burning of this Protestant city, begun and carried on by ye treachery and malice of ye Popish faction in the beginning of September, in ye year of our Lord 1666, in order to ye carrying on their horrid plot for extinguishing ye Protestant religion and old English liberty, and ye introducing Popery and slavery."

The burning at the stake for their religious opinions of 277 persons in England and Wales during the reign of Mary, the repeated plots by priests and other members of the Romish Church to assassinate Queen Elizabeth, which occasioned the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots; gunpowder plot, in the reign of James I., to destroy kings, lords and commons, all combined to make British Protestants dread Popery; and even if they did not suspect Charles II. of being a Roman Catholic, which he was in truth, and avowed himself upon his death-bed, yet they knew that his brother, the Duke of York, who would succeed him as James II., was professedly a member of that Church, and therefore they had readily believed in that "Popish plot," which was only a fiction of Titus Oates and others, but for which the aged Viscount Stafford was executed on December 29, 1680, besides 17 other Roman Catholics.

Naturally, this inscription was obliterated by James II., and though it was revived in the reign of William III., to assist in justifying his taking the throne of that former sovereign, his father-in-law, yet it was finally, as a falsehood, removed by order of the Common Council of the City of London on January 23, 1831.

"Taffy" From the New Cook.

After the long vacation the return to the duties of housekeeping is sometimes irksome to the house-mother, especially where new help—which is often a hindrance—must be employed.

A lady had a cook come to her the other day who demanded and was promised the high rate of wages her supposed efficiency could command. But after the first day's experience she was found to have but little head for her business, and the work lagged so much that the mistress went down to the kitchen to make a cake for tea. The result was all that could be desired, and the new cook praised her mistress' efforts to the skies.

"I'd like ye to give me the rule for the illigant cake, mum," she said, "till I be afther tryin' it 'tis so foine," and much more that was extremely flattering to her mistress' ability.

But the lady on leaving the kitchen happened to go through the china closet, and through the slide heard her flatterer say to the waitress:—

"Pooh, I only said that to taffy her a little; I can knock spots out of that cake meself."

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have "a magic touch."

"For over 12 years I suffered from sour with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS.
