2 Communisms Emerge Following Red Fight

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Only a month ago a Communist Chinese delegation arrived in Moscow to discuss Peking's quarrel with the Kremlin. For Communism, an age has passed since then.

The talks ended in monumental failure. The Communist camp will never be the same again.

As of now, in reality, there are two camps—and two Communisms are emerging.

One is the revolutionary movement sponsored by Moscow. Its support comes from most of the European Communist camp and party members in advanced countries. It contends that the Western way of life will eventually be wiped from the face of the earth. But it holds that this must be achieved short of igniting global war.

The other is the revolutionary movement sponsored by Peking. Its support comes from parties and wings of parties in the underdeveloped world. It contends that Communist power must be seized aggressively and violently without regard for risk. It holds that compromises with the West, inspired by war fears, betray the world revolution.

REDS SHUDDERED

With the departure — in a surly mood—of the Red Chinese from Moscow in mid-July, a profound shudder ran through the Communist world movement.

Confusion, bitterness and rivalry are evident between the two blocs and within individual parties inside the blocs.

A survey by Associated Press correspondents produces a picture like this:

Inside the Communist orbit:

Communist-ruled nations in Europe, except isolated Albanai, support Khrushchev. But Moscow's troubles have increased. Moscow's lead has been questioned by the Chinese, and this encourages satellite leaders to try for more independence and to wheedle concessions.

The parties of North Korea and North Viet Nam follow Peking. They envisage Red domination of the whole coast of Asia from Korea to Viet Nam in the foreseeable future, and see a distant promise of Communist domination of the whole continent.

FRENCH PRO MOSCOW

The French Communist party, long a bell-wether for European Reds, is solidly behind the Kremlin.

One reason for the French party's attitude is that it operates within a public which is aware of what goes on in the world. It is also one with an increasingly high living standard and which is thus peace-minded.

In Italy, the AP Rome bureau reports repercussions from the split were noisy at first, with some belligerent support of Peking. This has subsided. However, it is symptomatic of the impatience of younger Communists who see their hope for power in the tough line.

Italian Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti orients his party of 1,500,000 toward Moscow, but he cannot appear to be too much a creature of the Kremlin. Thus, he opposed Khrushchev's attack against liberal tendencies among artists and writers—apparently fearing to antagonize intellectuals in Italy.

In the smaller countries of Europe, though most Communists are on the Kremlin side, there are evidences of uneasiness. Pro-Chinese elements pop up, propagandize, proselytize. The example of Chinese defiance of the Kremlin has encouraged some in the rank and file in Western Europe to resist certain aspects of Moscow policy which have had little to do with the Peking - Moscow split.

SLITS IN LATIN AMERICA

There is evidence of split in many Latin American parties, more pronounced wherever there exists what Communists regard as a revolutionary situation.

Cuba's Communists are in a curious position. There has long been a split between the "new Communists" who came in with Fidel Castro, and the "old" Communists, owned by Moscow. Castro now professes to follow Moscow, although Khrushchev's performance in the Cuba crisis last October annoyed him.

The Castro regime cannot exist without Moscow's support, and is hardly likely to oppose Moscow openly.

The heaviest impact of the split seems to have been felt in Brazil. A correspondent Edgar Miller reports from Rio de Janeiro that the party is torn to shreds. A recent Communist-sponsored student meeting brought an open battle between the pro-Russians and the pro-Chinese wings.

ASIANS VACILLATE

The Chinese attack on India's borders in October, 1962, brought an explosion inside the Indian Communist party. Officially, it condemned the Chinese. But pro-Chinese wings remain, notably in the Calcutta area. Many of these have gone underground because of an Indian government crackdown.

For the Japanese party, the split was painfully embarrassing. The party tends toward Peking. It has clamped down on discussions of the dispute, but its language sounds like that of the Chinese.

Indonesia's huge Communist party of 2,000,000, biggest outside the Communist blocs, is obviously troubled. Its words support the Chinese, but its leaders have been trying to serve as mediators. But with the prospects for a Moscow-Peking reconciliation seeming dimmer all the time, the Indonesian party may finally side with the Chinese.

B.C. Professor Makes Plea For More Gracious Living

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

GENEVA PARK, Lake Couchiching, Ont. (CP)—A plea for more gracious living was made at the closing session here of the summer conference of the Canadian Institute of Public Affairs.

The plea came from Kaspad Naegele, professor of sociology at the University of British Columbia, and he made the suggestion as one way in which people might find a more satisffing way of life in a world in which old values have been destroyed or are changing.

"For instance," said Prof. Naegele, "to me cocktail parties are barbaric, because they have become a way of discharging social obligations on a large scale."

Contrasted with such a practice, he continued, is the Norwegian dinner party where the host and guest of honor make little speeches, skols are exchanged, people get to know one another and the occasion becomes a memorable one.

DISCUSSIONS 'SERIOUS'

The subject of the five-day conference, which opened Saturday, was "conflict in values" in various spheres, but discussions centred largely about the inner conflicts felt by individuals.

This, some felt, made the discussions rather introspective, od as Prof. Naegele described them, "terribly serious." Others maintained that inner conflicts are a part of life and they enjoy them.

Prof. Naegele said that with the conflicts there is a bit of paradise, too. Canadian society had been good to him since, as a German-born resident of Britain, he first arrived as an internee on a Polish liner to live fod a while in internment camps.

William Nicholls, professor of religious studies at the University of British Columbia, asked: "Is there not a maturity in which some r ...... which some stability comes about in one's conflicts?"

And Father Gregory Baum, of St. Michael's College, Toronto, said many personal conflicts would lessen or be healed if one turned to larger matters outside one's self.

Conflicts within women, a subject which came up from time to time and generally brought a gayer tone to the discussions, got another brief going over.

Paul Lacoste, professor of philosophy, University of Montreal, commented:

"I think that if there are conflicts in women they reflect conflicts in men. Modern man somehow appears reluctant to develop the more masculine qualities and women don't feel too proud to be complementary."

Mr. Lacoste, commenting on the beatnik—theteen-ager who decides not to conform at all—said: "In all of us is something of the beatnik and the values to which we still adhere leave us in a state of uneasiness."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

Let's say you're declarer at five hearts and West leads the jack of diamonds. You certainly don't have to be a genius to recognize the lead as a singleton. West surely must have had a safe spade lead, having bid the suit twice and having been raised twice by his partner.

On the surface the only losers are a spade and a heart, but, with the singleton lead, there is now a substantial danger of being defeated by a diamond ruff.

You can't afford to sit idly by and let the ruff take place, so you start to think of ways and means of trying to prevent the ruff.

You could win the diamond in dummy and lead a heart, trying to take the trumps out as soon as possible, but this is hardly likely to head off the ruff. If East has the ace of hearts, he'll take it and return a diamond, while if West has the ace of hearts, he'll win it and put his partner in with a spade in order to get a diamond return.

This method of play obviously won't work, so you have to look for some other way of salvaging the contract.

The best way of playing the hand is to win the diamond with the ace and then cash the ace of clubs and continue with the queen. When East follows low, you discard the seven of spades. Once you do this, the contract is made. East can not possibly obtain the lead and the only tricks you lose are the queen of clubs and ace of hearts.

It is true there is an alternative line of play which would succeed in the actual hand, but it is not recommended in this case. You could win the opening lead with the queen of diamonds and finesse the queen of clubs, in an effort to make the contract, but if, by any chance, East had the king, you might suffer a three-trick defeat.
