If?

If you want to preserve apples, don't cause a break in the skin. The germs of decay thrive rapidly there. So the germs of consumption find good soil for work when the lining of the throat and lungs is bruised, made raw, or injured by colds and coughs. Scott's Emulsion, with hypophosphites, will heal inflamed mucus membranes. The time to take it is before serious damage has been done. A 50-cent bottle is enough for an ordinary cold.

ELOPED WITH HERSELF.

It was a pity Lila Roberts was not contented with her pleasant home, her piano, her canary, her serene domestic life, and the good husband fate had awarded her in the lottery of marriage. She should have remembered the women to whom such a home would have been a haven of rest, and the merest fraction of a husband a satisfactory allotment.

But Lila desired to live her own life, and not so completely merge it into that of another as to lose her own identity, as she was now in danger of doing. Besides her present mode of living simply meant to her ambitions spirit stagnation. True, she had a certain social position. She visited all the places where young matrons congregated, and her husband compelled himself to call for her, and accompany her home, as he did not care to have some other man acting as his wife's escort. But the duty bored him and he did not hesitate to let her know it. This spoiled her enjoyment, although he did not intend it should.

For Fred Roberts did not really plan to make anyone unhappy, least of all his own wife. He was selfishly following his own inclinations according to his ideas of the eternal fitness of things. Like other fools, he rushed in where angels feared to tread, formulating rules for "the woman whom thou gavest to be with me," forgetting that times had changed since the days of Adam, and that Eve herself must be held responsible for the change.

So Fred's little scheme of representing the universe to his wife did not work. Lila regarded his wishes and immured herself on the domestic altar, without complaint, but she did a great deal of thinking and came to look upon her husband as a petty tyrant. She had a gift of music, and before her marriage had played and sung at church sociables and amateur theatricals with the hearty appreciation of her father and mother.

But the creed of the young man of the period is that fathers and mothers do not know how to bring their daughters up, and the wife must unlearn all the lessons they have taught. What was charming and endearing in the sweetheart, becomes unbearable in the wife. Fred, not to be overdone in wisdom, began the making-over process, and hoped in time to model Lila into a sort of composite wife—when he should have grafted on her budding nature all the virtues which are popularly supposed to belong to perfect womankind.

When he saw her dissatisfied, he said:—"You have a good home, Lila. Your time is your own—you have your music—and you have me. What more can any woman want?"

But Lila only grew more discontented with her life of clipped wings, the monotonous routine of long days spent in trying to be something she was not, and she fretted over the mistake she had made in tying herself down to matrimony, when she might have made a career for herself with her music and other accomplishments. She felt in her soul that in her domestic employment she was taking the bread out of some other woman's mouth. And any cheap girl could have done the work better than she. Even Fred acknowledged that.

So after duly considering the matter, and taking no one into her confidence, Lila made a decision. One morning when Fred was going to business she asked him to wait a moment, and standing on the top stairs of the veranda, she pinned a knot of purple and yellow pansies in his buttonhole. Then, because his face was so near she kissed him.

"Good-by, sweetheart," she said with a little nervous laugh, and he wondered if the neighbors saw them, and if they would think him spooney.

But the incident had another effect upon him before the day was over. That forced look into his wife's face had showed him hollows under the pretty eyes, and tense lines about the sweet mouth which he had never noticed before in the perfunctory glances bestowed upon her. It is no less true than sad, that it is the family physician who usually first calls attention to the ravages of ill health, and he is usually too late.

Lila's pansies worried Fred all day. He put them in water to keep fresh, as he wanted to wear them home; a concession that foretold much good, if Lila had only known.

"Pshaw, I'm sentimental as a woman," he said to himself. "I dare say it is dull some times for Lila—without me. I'll plan a trip somewhere, in business interests, and take her along."

So he satisfied himself, and placated conscience.

How many important steps we decide to take—just too late. The letter that was never written; the apology that was withheld until death, the great reconciler, came; the word of appreciation spoken to deaf ears—how are our eyes holden that we may not see the angel at our side. The cruelty of heedlessness is often greater than the cruelty of crime.

Fred Roberts went home that evening with a fresh flower about to bloom in his soul, and Lila's pansies worn at his breast. He was disappointed to find the door locked and the key under the mat—an occasional thing when Lila visited her parents. He at once felt aggrieved. That was always the way when he had tried to do a noble deed—there was no one to help him. Nor was there any supper for a tired and hungry man—that had never happened before. Then he saw a note in front of the little French clock which had been one of their wedding presents. He tore it open and read:—

"Dear Fred—Our marriage was a mistake. Better separation than hatred. Do not try to find me, as it will be impossible, and no one knows where I have gone. Believe me, I shall do nothing to bring a shadow on your name or the one I shall hereafter bear.

"LILA."

Fred went into a fury. The cat fled appalled from the room and the canary ceased to whistle and sing, and became dumb. Had it caught his eye he would have wrung its neck for reminding him of her. When the tempest had abated he went out and began a search for his wife. The search lasted a year. He placed his business in trusty hands, and pretended to be traveling in its interests. His hair turned iron gray, and became him well. Purpose lines developed in his face and the veneering wore from his character, showing the real substance beneath. Hope never once left him, although in all that year he caught no glimpse of Lila.

A friend who knew him at this period of his career said to him:—"The world is full of women; why compel an unwilling woman to be your wife? Accept your liberty and begin life over again."

"You have never loved," answered Fred. "I want my wife because—I love her."

"It would be more to the purpose if she loved you," retorted his friend, with that brutal candor which friendship permits.

"She does," said Fred, and the two words contained his whole litany of faith. Fred Roberts visited every town and village where he could gain the slightest clue of his lost Lila, but never by any chance found her. He was quarreled with by angry husbands for staring too freely at their wives, and thrown out of public places for impertinent meddling with strangers; but in no wise discouraged, he kept up his quest. He had gone to every theatrical performance in every place he visited, even to sitting out a wretched representation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in which Lila was playing the part of Topsy—with such success that Fred never knew her. Several times he had been so near that she could have touched him, but feared his just anger. She no longer found life monotonous. It has been said that in order to "sense the joys of heaven" we must stay awhile in the other place. Lila had to fight to protect herself from injustice, and from kindness that was worse than cruelty, yet there was a glorious kind of freedom, a feeling that she owned herself, that she was not the caprice of someone else, and it made her dry bread grateful and her hard couch restful, with a blessed sense of independence.

There had been vague messages in the newspapers from time to time, but she had never seen them.

"L. R.—Return and all will be forgiven. F."

"If 'Darl' will communicate with P. E. T. she will learn something to her advantage."

The poor fellow grew as thin as a shadow. He had long since parted with both pride and anger. At first he was a walking arsenal, for he determined that if Lila had eloped, the man in the case should die.

But Lila's flitting soon became a mere personal adventure in his estimation, much like the running away of a child from its home, and he was only anxious of a chance to forgive and be forgiven.

In this mood he reached a hotel in a small town, where he studied the register and asked questions about the guests—his invariable habit. This time there was a mysterious sick woman, who had her meals sent to her room. He questioned the clerk and learned that she was young and attractive and a lady, but cried a great deal.

If he could only get a glimpse of her. If it should be Lila, alone and ill, he could surely be of such service to her as to prove that he still loved her.

He wandered disconsolately about the halls and at last ran against a waiter carrying a tray.

"Where are you going?" he demanded in a peremptory tone.

"Taking a sick lady's dinner to her," said the man.

"Here," commanded Fred, slipping a coin into the man's hand, "give it to me. Now show me the way," and following the waiter, he was shown into a darkened room.

A slight form lay dressed on a sofa. A pale face scarcely distinguishable in the gloom, was turned from him, but oh, happiness! it was the face of Lila! And she was weeping.

Fred was at best a bungling fellow, and he bungled now. Smash went the tray, caught in its descent by a table, but making a noise that would have awakened the seven sleepers. Lila sat up with the shock.

"You careless fellow!" she said indignantly. "My head aches so now that I can hardly see—Fred!"

"Lila!" and husband and wife were in each other's arms—where we will leave them, all difficulties being reconciled.

SKIN DISEASES!

One Remedy Which has Never Failed—Tried and Tested Ointment.

Because other alleged remedies for piles, scrofula, eczematic eruptions, scald head, chafing, black heads, salt rheum and skin diseases generally have proved useless, don't condemn Dr. Chase's Ointment. It has never been known to fail. For instance, Nelson Simmons, Meyersburg, Ont., writes:

"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Itching Piles, and can recommend it highly. Since using it I have had perfect freedom from the disease."

Peter Vanallen, L'Amable, Que., had the eczema for three years. He tried three doctors, but received no benefit. One box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and three boxes of Dr. Chase's Pills cured him completely. Large scales covered his legs and body, but the Ointment soon removed them. He will swear to these facts.

Chase's Ointment may be had from any dealer or from the manufacturers Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard street, Toronto. Price 60 cents.

Mother's greatest remedy for coughs, colds, bronchial and lung affections is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. The medicinal taste is wholly disguised making it pleasant to take. Large bottle 25 cents.

Don't Wait for the Sick Room.

The experience of physicians and the public proves that taking Scott's Emulsion produces an immediate increase in flesh: it is therefore of the highest value in Wasting Diseases and Consumption.

There seems to be little hope of a reconciliation between the Redmondites and Dillonites, and the Irish party is more hopelessly split than ever.

"To My Life's End."

Old age brings many aches and pains which must be looked after if health is to be maintained. This depends more than anything else on the kidneys. "I am 85 years old," writes A. Duffin, farmer, Aultsville, Ont., "and have had kidney trouble five years. My son advised Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I obtained immediate relief. I shall use them to my life's end." You will find Chase's Pills equally effective or that lame back.

The Albanians have petitioned the Porte for reforms, and if these are refused they intend to revolt to regain their former liberties.

A Child Cured of Eczema by Chase's Ointment.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. The doctor advised the use of Chase's Ointment, and since using the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured.

Kind Words from the Fred Victor Mission Bible Class.

On behalf of the Fred Victor Mission Bible Class I wish to express our gratitude to you for the box of Chase's Ointment which you supplied in aid of our charitable work to the infant child of Mrs. Brownrig, 162 River street. Ten days ago the child was awfully afflicted with scald head, the face being literally one scab from forehead to chin, and in that brief time a complete cure has been effected. Surely your gift was worth more than its weight in gold.

HEALTH ON THE FARM.

A farmer's life is proverbially a healthy one; but it is evident, in many cases, that the standard of health might easily be improved, were it not for the neglect of certain sanitary conditions. Fresh air and green fields do much to remedy what would in other surroundings, such as in a city, cause severe attacks of certain diseases; but even these aids to health fail occasionally, and the individual has to succumb at length to the insidious foe, disease.

Pure water is one of the most important essentials to good health. None but those who have wandered through other lands, where pure water was a scarce commodity can realize the blessing enjoyed by the man who has at his door an unstinted supply of good, wholesome water. In this country, as a rule, there is usually no lack of excellent water, which, if preserved free from contamination from surface drainage, sewage or stable liquids, presents a supply of first-class quality sufficient for all needs. In the care of our wells and springs, however, we oftentimes show a lamentable disregard of the interests of our health. Too often the well is located near to the stables, or in such a position that the drainage from the stables, both surface and through the ground, finds its way, sooner or later, into the water, and contaminates it. In other instances, frogs, rats and mice find their way into the wells, and die there, poisoning the water with their putrid bodies. Many cases of sickness can be traced to causes such as these, and it is, therefore, of the highest importance that our wells should receive considerable attention every year.—From Farming for May.

Science Triumphant at Last.

Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the outcome of the latest scientific researches. There was always a prejudice against taking Cod Liver Oil on account of its disagreeable taste, but Miller's Emulsion is agreeable to the palate, and that is one reason why it has become so popular with the medical fraternity, the hospitals of the country and the households wherever consumption or lung troubles prevail. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottles, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores.
