REPORT ON THE LORNE HIGHLAND WHISKY:
"We have visited the bottling stores of Greenlees Brothers, and have selected from the vats, samples of their Lorne Highland Whisky, and have subjected them to careful examination and analysis. Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Settlement of Boston.

[From the Examiner's Special Commissioner.]

The 250th anniversary of the settlement of Boston was celebrated on Friday, Sept. 17th, with ceremonies and pageantry very appropriate to the occasion. The great procession, which, without doubt, was the most popular feature of the celebration, included in its ranks the military of the Commonwealth, and organizations from other States.

THE TRADES' DISPLAY
was an object lesson that could not fail to leave its impress upon the minds of all who witnessed it. The sight exhibited was one of which the city might well be proud, and will be remembered long by those who had the privilege of witnessing it, as it was magnificent in the extreme. The programme for the observance of Boston's 250th anniversary was complete. The weather was most delightful, with a fair sky. On the route of the procession there were many elegant displays of decorations.

THE OFFICIAL OBSERVANCE
took place at 9 a. m., in the Old South Church. His Honor Mayor Prince delivered an appropriate oration, when other exercises took place.

At 9 o'clock the Rev. Dr. Ellis opened the proceedings with prayer, after which there was some excellent music from the Boston Cadet Band. The Mayor then read the following Ode, which, he said, had been handed to him by Hon. Robert C. Winthrop:—

THE ANNIVERSARY ODE.
God save our City loved,
The Pilgrims' refuge proved
In darkest hour,
Home of our fathers' choice,
Home where Religion's voice
Still called them to rejoice
Unchecked by power.

Home of a simpler creed,
Home in our father's need,
Holy and pure,
Free new from bigots' rule,
God save the Church and School,
Ne'er let a tyrant's tool
From truth allure.

God help our sons to bear
Onward the work and prayer
Of those who sleep,
God help our daughters here
In reverent love and fear
The future race to rear,
His laws to keep.

So shall the land we prize
Up to true glory rise
In goodness great;
So shall all nations come
To make our land their home,
No more o'er earth to roam;
God save the State.

One of the great dry goods establishments of the city—Jordan, Marsh & Co.—furnished a display which, for uniqueness and extent, excelled everything else in the line, and Gilmore's famous band headed their exhibition. Among other things in the course of the procession of the trades, we observed practical exemplifications of pottery-making, brick-making, the process of tailoring (by a family), printing now and as it was 250 years ago, the manufacture of leather, hair-dyeing in various styles, illustrations of the six mechanical powers, soap manufacture, cider-making, and riggers implements. These are but few of the noteworthy displays which it was our pleasure to behold. It will not be necessary for us to give

THE ROUTE OF PARADE,
but will merely state for the information of our readers that its length was a little more than six miles, and the time it took the procession to pass a given point was fully three and a half hours. The

GRAND CONCERT ON BOSTON COMMON commenced at 8 o'clock, by Gilmore's famous band, comprising sixty-five performers and the full drum corps of the twenty-second regiment of New York. This grand musical entertainment being cordially tendered to the public by Jordan, Marsh & Co., already referred to.

THE GERMANS' NIGHT PARADE
was one of the greatest features of the celebration, and the procession of tableaux, mounted in finished style, was something quite unique, and which we would not have missed on any account. About one thousand of the Boston Turners paraded with German Torches. After the

REVIEW OF THE MILITARY
by Governor Long, from Berkley street through Columbus Avenue, Park Square, Charles and Beacon streets, the procession moved at the report of the signal gun.

MAYOR PRICE'S ORATION
was an exhaustive and eloquent review of Boston's history, and the procession was a grand and imposing display.
The first division was composed entirely of military organizations from other States.

The second division was composed of the members of the city government, under escort of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and the city's distinguished guests.

The third division comprised the several posts of the Grand Army of the Republic taking part in the procession, the Boston school regiment, the surviving school boys of 1830, the cadet battalion, Massachusetts Agricultural College, the United States soldiers and sailors' Pensioner's Union; the Magoun battery of Medford, and detachments from the Boston and Quincy fire departments.

The fourth division comprised the Caledonian Club, Scott's Charitable Society and Temperance organizations.

In the fifth division we noticed the Pythian Knights, Tailor's Union, Italian Society, Little St. John, etc.

The sixth division was composed of the Irish and Catholic temperance societies of Boston and vicinity, and presented an excellent appearance.

In the seventh division was presented the finest Industrial Display ever seen in New England, and was the close of the grand procession.

We took up our position on Chester Park and as the column turned into the square the scene that presented itself was lively and animating. Between Columbus Avenue and Shawmut Avenue, at short intervals, flags had been run out on lines reaching from the houses to the trees in the square, while both sides of the square were densely packed with people, and through the kindness of Mr. Shapleigh we obtained a first-class position. Many of the private residences, having platforms erected over their front door yards, for the accommodation of personal friends of the occupants, and all were fully occupied.

It would be impossible for us to give even an outline of all we saw in one short letter, but the following were among the principal and most

ELABORATE DECORATIONS.

Messrs. Jordan, Marsh & Co., on Washington Street, made a most elegant display and was one of the best ever seen in Boston. A large painting of a view of the city in 1880, from the water front, with the shipping, warehouses, &c., and crowned by the State House, with its gilded dome, occupied the entire length of the building, and reached to the top of the second-story windows. In contrast with this was a small picture, at the top of the building, giving a view of the three hills on which Boston was settled in 1630. At each end of the large picture, was a figure, heroic size, one of an American Indian, and the other a female with a sickle and sheaf. Festoons of bunting were draped across the front from the centre to two shields at each side, one being the seal of Massachusetts, and the other that of the United States, both pictures being surmounted by glories of flags. The effect of the whole was striking and universally admired.

The immense front of R. H. White & Co.'s block, also on Washington street, was glowing with color. In every window of the upper story were small American flags, with bunting festooned down the pillars and between the windows of the second and third story, and to the large windows of the first story small flags of all nations were displayed. The appearance of the whole was most artistic.

A Sherman & Co., the Continental Clothing House, The Orphans Musical Society, Cobb, Bates & Zerva, Moulton & Bradley, Oliver Ditson & Co., and many others, too numerous to mention, had elaborate decorations, with life-size pictures, representing Liberty, &c., &c.

But we are growing wearisome to our readers, and will close by simply stating that among the many things we saw and heard, nothing gave us more pleasure than hearing one of

BOSTON'S MUSICAL PRODIGES.
By kind invitation we visited Boston Highlands to hear Master Allen Hunter perform on the piano. For a young lad, only fourteen, his performances were truly wonderful, producing the compositions of the great masters in a most artistic manner. We may have occasion to return to this subject at a future time.

There are many other things we should like to refer to on this occasion, but find we have already occupied too much space.

To-night we will be "on the wing" for New York, from which place we will send our next, if anything of special interest presents itself to our gaze.

Boston, Sept. 18, 1880.

A Montreal despatch of the 21st says the robbery in the Bank of Montreal, during the temporary absence of paying teller Padden from his stall, at midday, ranks high for impudence. A well-dressed stranger entered from a side door, and taking up a roll of bills in his hand marched out, while in the compartment the thief was noticed by a young clerk named McCulloch, but mistaken for the teller; on the latter returning to his place, McCulloch discovered his mistake and immediately stated that a stranger had been tampering with the money. Padden hastily counted it up and found $7,000 deficient. The alarm was given, McCulloch rushed out and saw the thief walking along the street, but before he got a policeman to arrest him he had disappeared. A reward of one thousand dollars has been offered for his arrest, but the detectives think he will get over the line before he is taken. A great number of thieves arrived in town since the opening of the exhibition.

WAS IT A CRIME?—A Bridgewater despatch to the Halifax Chronicle, 21st, says: "A barn belonging to Nat. Ullam, of Chelsea, was burned last night, containing his crop of the year. Human bones were found among the ruins to-day. It is supposed a man was burned in it." Chelsea, will be remembered as the scene of the recent murder of young Huey.

An old man named Robert Bowls, was killed by the accidental falling of a staging at St. John, N. B., on Monday last.
