Brackley Pt. Road Home Saved By Quick Action

The quick action of an unidentified little girl is credited with preventing what might have been a very serious fire at the home of U.G. Douse, Brackley Point Road early Saturday evening.

According to Sherwood fire department officials, the little girl ran over to the airport and notified the airport fire department. The fire officials also give credit to Paul MacKinnon, fire chief at the department of transport, Charlottetown airport, for extinguishing the fire, which was of unknown origin.

The officials report that Mr. MacKinnon has been "a great assistance, with expert advice since the inception of the Sherwood Fire Department".

The Sherwood fire department answered a call early Saturday morning when fire leveled a large two storey house owned by John Ashley on Union Road.

Neighbors responded to the fire call and despite a lack of water were able to save the furniture and other buildings.

Neighbors responded to the fire call and despite a lack of water were able to save the furniture and other buildings. The barn roof caught fire but was quenched by the men. The barns were grouped close to the house. Lack of wind was said to be the prime factor in the saving of the barn and buildings.

The house was said to be partly covered by insurance.

NDP SEMINAR CONCLUDES

"Can government action and planning help solve our maritime problems?" was the topic of an address Saturday night as the seminar of the New Democratic party concluded. The speaker was Allen O'Brien, Halifax, (left) seen above talking to Alex MacLean, Parkdale and William Handrahan, Tignish. The seminar which lasts two days was held in the Charlottetown Hotel.

New Bid For Fleet Street Job Turns Unhappy For Snowdon

By ALAN HARVEY LONDON (CP) - They told him to get a job. So he got a job. And then they told him to quit.

That's the short unhappy story, so far, of the Earl of Snowdon's bid to get back into Fleet Street.

It's been a rough week for former society photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones, the commoner who married Princess Margaret in Westminster Abbey May 6, 1960.

When it was announced two weeks ago that Tony was to join The Sunday Times as artistic adviser, thus resuming the kind of work he did before joining the periphery of royalty, it seemed a logical appointment.

After all, hadn't there been some cocktail-circuit comments about Tony and Margaret leading the soft life?

For example, didn't John Gordon in The Sunday Express was sarcastic over their recent Caribbean tour to recover from the strain of "their almost workless year?"

So, hardly an editorial muscle twitched at the news that Tony would trundle out his camera on behalf of The Sunday Times, which is introducing a color supplement Feb. 4.

For a week, practically no reaction. Fleet Street usually looks the other way when rival papers are hiring new hands.

Tony probably thought it was too good to be true—and it was. On Sunday, Jan. 14, The Observer broke the silence. It suggested that the appointment was a bad one because it would involve the Royal Family, directly or indirectly, in the "savage" war of Fleet Street economics.

Jack (Spy) Reedy, this province's representative on the new National Advisory Council of Fitness and Amateur Sport, will attend the first meeting of the group, scheduled to be held in Ottawa February 5 and 6. Announcement of the meeting was made in the national capital Saturday by Health Minister Monteleith.

The 30-member council has been given the job of handling the $5,000,000 a year federal fund for promoting fitness and amateur sport in Canada.

Borden Lady Passes At 74

SUMMERSIDE - The death of Mrs. James V. MacDonald of Borden occurred in the Prince County Hospital last night. Mrs. MacDonald was 74 years of age, and had been confined to hospital for the past two months.

The former Mamie MacIntyre of Clermont, Mrs. MacDonald had resided in Borden since her marriage 49 years ago, taking up residence there when construction began on the present pier.

Mrs. MacDonald was a graduate nurse and served her community in this capacity.

She is survived by her husband James V. MacDonald, Borden, and by three daughters, Genevieve, with the department of northern affairs in Ottawa; Peggy, Mrs. Henry Ceretti, Borden, and Ruth, Mrs. F.D. O'Connor in Montreal.

Also surviving is a sister Nora, Mrs. Leo Coyle, Lynn, Mass. A son Alex predeceased her 25 years ago.

The funeral will be held Wednesday morning, Jan. 24, at 9 a.m. to the Sacred Heart Church Borden, for Requiem High Mass. Interment will be in the Seven Mile Bay cemetery.

Leaders attending were: Basilica Troop, James O. Murray, Vincent King; Holy Redeemer Troop, Fred Duncan; John Walsh, Allan MacPhee, George-town; Barry White, Montague; Pius Sutherland, Frank Dunn, Morell; Derrell MacLure, Floyd Strickland; Murray River; John MacDonald, North Wiltshire; Samuel Condon, Bonshaw; Harvey MacLean, Cornwall all of the New Haven Troop; Even Stewart and John D. Stewart of Charlottetown's Spring Park Troop; Capt. C.D. Molins, 2nd Summerside (Y's Men's) Troop and Desmond Gaudet, 5th Summerside (K of C) Troop.

Three race fans claimed $438.80 each, the highest payoff in Halifax Comfops harness racing this season, on the exactor of Money Royal and L. C. Spencer in the tenth and final race of a Saturday afternoon card.

Money Royal, 13-year-old pacer from the Daniels Stables in Truro, pulled the afternoon upset by winning the tenth. Straight win backers got $83.40. Magic Rapid and Tim Clegg, both owned in the Halifax area, were double winners.

Jewell Fingo, owned by Stan Mayhew of Kinkora, P.E.I., and Ima Direct S., owned by Don Ratchford of Newport Corners, N.S., took single wins.

Other single dash victories went to Argonaut, Jollity George and Tip Chief, all from Halifax area stables.

Five Ontario byelections, the NDP did raise its popular vote to more than 15,000 from the 11,159 votes won by the CCF candidates who ran for four of the five seats in the last Ontario election.

After the byelections, old hands at party politics said it was obviously that union workers haven't the same flair and intuition in judging political sentiment as men who have spent all their years in politics.

The outcome of the five provincial byelections—the Conservatives and Liberals each retained two seats and the Liberals took one away from the Conservatives—had repercussions in the ranks of the major parties here as well as in the NDP.

It was discussed among Conservative MPs who gathered for their usual caucus meeting Friday after the session's opening but it was not made an issue in the caucus itself.

The Conservatives were inclined to dismiss the result, emphasizing it was a provincial test and that federally it has been the experience of other governments with strong majorities that they lost byelections frequently.

However, the Liberals took great heart federally from the provincial result. They saw their increased vote as a swing to their party which will be needed to bring the Liberals back to power in Ottawa.

Neither Liberal leader Pearson nor Prime Minister Diefenbaker campaigned actively in the byelections.

But Mr. Douglas stumped some of the ridings as federal NDP leader in company with provincial leader Donald MacDonald. He had done the same last month in his old Saskatchewan riding of Weyburn, which the NDP lost to the Liberals in a byelection.

P.E.I. Young Liberals To Gather

Prince Edward Island's Young Liberals will meet Thursday, February 1 at the Charlottetown Hotel as they participate in the across Canada series which will have follow Young Liberals meeting in every other province on the same night, it has been learned from Dr. Douglas MacDonald, provincial president here.

Some 285 members attended the dinner here last year and an even larger group is expected this year, it was stated as members were warned to make reservations early with Liberal Headquarters, at 136 Richmond Street.

A New Brunswick man is being sought to speak to the group which will also hear Provincial Leader Alex A. Matheson. Last year National Leader L.B. Pearson spoke to the gatherings via a telephone hookup.

The motto for this year's cross Canada dinner "A Young Liberal for every poll in 1962" was adopted from the slogan the P.E.I. Young Liberals used for their dinner last year.

Smoke and embers from the burning shacks, located close to the shore, were carried over nearby residences.

Summerside police arrived at the scene as one of the buildings was being set afire, and the names of six boys, ranging in age from pre-teen to late teens, were obtained by the police who are expected to take further action concerning this fire-setting incident.

Parking Meters Stolen In S'side

SUMMERSIDE - Three Summerside parking meters on Central Street, just off Water Street, were stolen from meter posts Friday night, along with the cash containers from the newspaper honor box in front of the Guardian-Patriot office where the lock was smashed and the container taken.

Similar fines were meted out to a couple of other men after both had pleaded guilty to charges of driving while not the holder of a license and driving an improperly equipped motor vehicle.

Two charges of failure to stop at stop signs resulted in $5 fines and costs.

Summerside branch of Credit Investigating Collection Agency has been opened on Water Street by this Island company, owned and managed by Alex MacIsaac and David Walker of Charlottetown who are partners in the firm.

The Summerside office staff will include Mrs. Charles Monty who will be in charge of secretarial duties at Summerside.

This firm, in addition to all business accounts, also specializes in municipal and village tax collections.

In the weightless state of prolonged space journeys is a major enigma the Mercury orbital flights aim to solve.

On his 17-orbit flight last Aug. 6, Russian cosmonaut Gherman Titov reported that most of the time he suffered dizziness. He said it was especially pronounced when he turned his head sharply or observed swiftly-moving objects outside his Vostok II spaceship.

The first man to orbit the earth, Russian Yuri Gagarin, reported no such discomfort on his one trip around the globe on April 12, 1961. Nor did American astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Virgil I. Grissom on their brief 15-minute space rides on May 5 and July 12 last year.

Medical men believe weightlessness of several days of weeks duration might rob a spaceman of his muscle tone. In effect, make him flabby. They say exercises, perhaps as spring devices or merely pushing against the side of the spaceship, will be necessary on long trips.

Glenn plans regular periods of exercise on his flight to test his ability to do them.

During the flight, Glenn is to make instrument readings and call on his training in astronomy and geography to identify heavenly bodies and earth landmarks. He will attempt eating by squeezing food from a tube-like container.

The spacecraft's course, dependent on precision performance by the Atlas booster, is carefully calculated so Glenn will be in constant touch with a tracking network of 18 ground stations girding the globe.

Doctors, engineers and other experts will be at each station, listening to Glenn's voice, receiving and analyzing data radioed from scores of capsule sensors and instruments attached to his body.
