THE PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

Ministers and Laymen of the Maritime Provinces at St. James Church.

ABSTRACT OF THE RETIRING MODERATOR'S SERMON.

Business Before the Synod.

The Synod of the Presbyterian Church of the Maritime Provinces opened its session last evening in St. James Church. About a hundred and fifty ministers and elders had arrived before the close of the meeting. After devotional exercises the Retiring Moderator, Rev. Dr. Morrison, of Halifax, preached an admirable sermon.

The Rev. gentlemen took for his text 2 Cor. 5:14, "For the love of God constraineth us." He said this was the principle which controlled Paul's whole conduct. It is the regulative principle of a true life. The man who has it cares only for others. Whatever is necessary to compass their good, he will do. If rigor is necessary, he will be rigorous; if it needs passion, he will be passionate; and if it needs gentleness, graciousness, a hiding of himself, he will manifest these virtues without stint. In like manner also, he is willing to live under the pressure of much bodily weakness and suffering, and constant exposure to death, through the schemes of the hounds of persecution, and labor for the cause of God amidst such trials as these, although for him to depart would be to be with Christ, and—from a self-enjoyment point of view—much better. He would be out of the reach of all trial, and all persecutors. He would be at home with the Lord. But, as his work was not yet completed, he was anxious to stay, and work, and suffer if necessary, that men might be saved. What, asked the preacher, is the secret of it? Whence comes this freedom from by-ends and ambition, in working for the Lord? The answer is this: "The love of Christ constraineth us." My estimate of Christ's love for me, as I look at it, in its height and depth, its length and breadth, although it passeth knowledge, is such as to constrain me, to seize me on every side, and to carry me onward in the line of its own great and beneficient activities. I shall no longer live unto myself, but unto Him who died for me and rose again. My life cannot be a selfish one, but an unselfish and grateful life. This is ideal Christianity—Christianity as it should be. Christianity as it would be, if only every christian were as single minded and as sincere as Paul—and with such Christianity how soon the world would be converted! But, far short of this ideal as Christianity has fallen, yet so far as it has been real, to that extent it has been unselfish—it has been beneficient, because its constraining principle has been appreciation of the love of Christ.

The preacher then referred to the forces that are working for the renovation of society, and dwelt upon the great necessity in these days for the exertion of those forces and for self-sacrifice on the part of the ministry of the gospel of Peace and Good Will. Beloved brethren, he said, contemplate "the love of Christ." Devoutly meditate upon it. It must surely, if you do, lead you to repentance. It must make you ashamed of hardening your hearts against such compassion. It must show you the infinite beauty of that Saviour, whom, perhaps, you have been despising. It must wean your hearts from that absorbing love of the world, which has kept you chained to earth, and turn them upon that which is worthy of the love of a human soul. It must compel you to lay yourself and your all upon the altar of Christian service. You will work eagerly for Christ, and you will give freely and gladly that His name may be poured forth as ointment. Then will our mission treasuries be filled and the word of the Lord prosper. Brethren in the ministry, have an ambition to be able ministers of the New Testament? Then let us enswathe our souls in this love of Christ. It will constrain us—constrain us to love, to self-denial, to earnest preparation, by study and prayer, for our work, to pity for lost souls, to patience in dealing with them,—to be unsatisfied till on the best of evidence we can number them among the disciples of our Lord. It will make our preaching what Paul's was, fragrant—"a sweet savour of God." In the words of Denny, let me ask, "Where we proclaim the Gospel, do we always succeed in manifesting it as a savour? Or is not the savour—the sweetness, the winsomeness, the charm and attractiveness of it—the very thing that is most easily left out? Do we not catch it sometimes in the words of others, and wonder that it eludes to our own? We miss what is most characteristic in the knowledge of God, if we miss this. We leave out this very element in the Evangel which makes it evangelic, and gives it its power to subdue and enchain the souls of men." Brethern, to ensure for our preaching this success, we must yield ourselves fully to the love of Christ. Our own self will—however sweet—must make complete surrender to Jesus. He must lead unresistingly in triumph. We must not only feel the power, but also the sweetness of His redeeming love; and then, with our own hearts and lives sweetened, the mighty Visitor will make known, through us, "not only His might, but His charm, not only His greatness, but His grace," and so men will be saved, and our ministry will be accomplished.

At the close of the sermon the roll was called, and the various changes which had occurred in the Presbyteries were noted.

The election of Moderator resulted in the choice of Rev. J. McGregor McKay, one of the veterans who has done manful work in some of the hardest fields of the Synod. Mr. McKay has retired from the active duties of the ministry, and his brethren have testified to their high appreciation of his life and work by raising him to the Moderator's chair. Mr. McKay made a first-rate speech, replete with not a little humor, thanking the Synod for the honor.

Rev. Dr. Morrison, retiring Moderator, alluded in touching terms to the deaths which had occurred during the past year.

After some routine work, the Synod adjourned to meet this morning.

THE MORNING SESSION.

The morning session to-day was opened with a half hour's devotional exercises, after which routine business was disposed of.

The report of the Hunter Building Fund and of the Halifax Ladies' College, were submitted. The prosperous state of the latter gave great satisfaction to the members of the Synod.

An earnest and interesting discussion upon the Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund and the necessity of making membership in it compulsory upon all young ministers, occupied the Synod up to the hour of adjournment.

This afternoon the first business will be the determination of the time and place of the next meeting of Synod.

The members of Synod are loud in their praises of the City of Charlottetown for its beauty, and of the citizens for their generous hospitality. Admiration of the handsome church in which the sessions are held is heard on every side.

This evening session will be devoted to foreign missions and a most interesting meeting may be expected. The public are invited to all sessions.

KING'S COUNTY EXHIBITION

A Highly Creditable Show.

PARTIAL LIST OF THE PRIZES.

THE King's County Exhibition was opened this morning, at 9 o'clock. The weather is fine and clear, and there is a large attendance from all points in the County. Queen's and Prince County are also represented. Among those present are His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Howlan, Col. Moore, D. A. G., and Miss Moore, Mrs. B. Rogers and Mrs. Carrie Haszard, Col. Blair, Supt. of the Maritime Experimental Farm at Nappan, N. S., T. S. Dillon, Dairy Superintendent for P. E. Island, Father Burke, of Alberton; Dr. Taylor, John Newson, H. J. Cundall, L. L. Beer, and J Beales, of Charlottetown; Rev. Stephen Phalen, Georgetown; Rev. Dr. McMillan, Cardigan Bridge, Rev. J. C. McLean, St. George's, Rev. M. McMillan, St. Teresa's, Geo. Aitken, M. L. A., Murray Harbor, Jas. Clow, Esq., Murray Harbor North, S. F. Drake, Pownal, D. C. McKinlay, North River D. McCallum, Brackley Point Road, Dr. Henderson, Clyde River, S. M. Bent, Summerside, Walter Simpson, Bay View.

The exhibit of cattle is larger than at any former exhibition, and in every way creditable to the country. Jas. Clow, Murray Harbor North, exhibits a Guernsey bull, 'Gypsy', bred by E. R. Brow, of Charlottetown, his sire and dam being imported from Guernsey. John Cowan, Murray Harbor, shows a thorough bred Jersey imported from Mrs. Jones' farm, Ontario. F. G. Boyer, of Georgetown Royalty, exhibits a herd of Shorthorns, shown by him at the Provincial Exhibition, and which captured first prize there. Wm. Gordon, of Brudenell, has the thoroughbred Shorthorn bull Rosebery, from Rosetta Chief, on exhibition, as well as nine or ten head of Shorthorn and Ayrshire. Father Stephen Phelan shows a Durham heifer, two years old, and a Jersey cow. George B. Aitken has an Ayrshire calf, nine months old, and Angus McIntyre four head of cattle, Jersey and grade Ayrshire.

The horse show is also large and some splendid specimens are to be seen. Among the number shown is the favorite stallion Gem, exhibited by J. Leslie Poole, Lower Montague. Mr. Poole also shows the cart stallion General Burnett, and John Annear Lower Montague shows Hepburn Clyde. But where so many really good animals are shown it is unfair to particularize. There is also a splendid show of sheep and pigs.

Mr. Henry Beairsto, father of Mr. Robert Beairsto, of Charlottetown, is exhibiting an apparatus for sharpening mowing machine sections and guard plates. The machine seems to be a good thing of the kind.

The agricultural meeting in connection with the Exhibition takes place this afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock. His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Howlan opened the meeting, and was followed by Col. Blair and Mr. Dillon. Mr. John Hamilton, of New Perth, is to read a paper.

The display of roots and vegetables is perhaps the most striking feature of the exhibition. The tables set apart for this class are all filled, and many more are shown in baskets on the floor. The quality is excellent, being in the opinion of some who attended the Provincial Exhibition fully equal if not superior to what was shown there. The White Swede turnips are simply immense, while in field turnips there is one which tipped the scales at 25 pounds, and not a few others which wheighed but a few pounds less.

There is more fruit shown this year than at any former exhibition in Georgetown, and this is said to be an "off year" for fruit too. Concerning the quality of what is shown, it is unnecessary to speak at length. It is excellent.

There is a splendid showing of grain of good quality. The first prize red wheat weighed 66 lbs. to the bushel; the 2-rowed barley 52½ lbs.; the white oats 44½ lbs.; and the Buckwheat 60 lbs.

The quantity of fodder corn on exhibition bears testimony to the ever increasing interest in improved silos.

The judge in the butter and cheese department, Mr. Spillet, of the Vernon River Factory, experienced considerable difficulty in awarding the prizes. The seventeen samples of new butter shown ranked with the finest he had ever seen. The showing of factory cheese was smaller than it should be, but the quality was choice.

In the industrial department of the exhibition the ladies of Kings County make a showing that is in the highest degree creditable; but there is a very meagre show of paintings.

Mr. D. L. McKinnon exhibits household furniture made by himself, which is greatly admired; and in carriages and sleighs Messrs John McLean & Son, of Montague Bridge, make a splendid showing.

Mr. R. Stewart, of Brudenell, has 18 cases of stuffed native birds on exhibition. Mrs. R. Macdonald, of Souris, shows several maps of the Province; Mr. John McCormack exhibits a refrigerator; and Mr. William McConnell, of Georgetown, a Paris Green sprayer on wheels. All these exhibits are attracting considerable attention.

There have been several improvements made in the arrangements of exhibits upon which the managers of the exhibition are are to be congratulated. In the spaces set apart for roots and vegetables, for instance, the names of the various sorts shown are neatly printed on cardboard, so that the visitors can more easily determine the kinds shown.

The arrangements of the Secretary are very complete and are calculated to expedite the work. As an instance of the thoroughness of his arrangements it is only necessary to say that the checks for prize money were all made out and ready for delivery by nine o'clock this morning.

Following is the prize list of the exhibits so far as they could be obtained for today's issue.

Style and comfort meet in Cravenette in rare combination. The sober virtues sometimes have a drab appearance, which will tell against them. Cravenette keeps out the rain, defies the dust, and yet makes up as a stylish costume, which the most fastidious lady might desire. There are six shades, Navy, Myrtle, Brown, Grey, Castor and Black. Cravenette is the ideal dress for street and country. Gives long service, can be worn in all weathers, and is perfectly porous and healthy. Beauty first and foremost, and unique comfort superadded, that is Cravenette, which the ladies now prefer to anything else for street wear. 3 6
