

They took Seats.

Two young dudes who are acquainted with a country schoolmaster, having a school about twelve miles from the city, were invited out to a spelling-school a few nights since, and they took a horse and buggy and drove out. There was a large gathering of farmers, and an exciting contest was looked for. Just previous to the beginning of the exercise a young fellow, whose head would have bumped a six-foot mark, and whose weight was about 160 pounds, called one of the dudes aside and asked:

"Are you two fellers going to spell?" "I guess so." "Purty good at it?" "I think we can down you all." "You do, eh? Now you look a-her! I've come here to-night to spell this school down. My gal is here to see me do it. I hain't no objections to your spellin' along till we come to the word catarrh, but after that you can't drop down any too soon! If either one o' you chaps beat me you'd better have the wings of a dove to fly out o' this, for I'll gin ye both the all-fredest lickin' two dudes ever got!"

They stood up with him until all the others were down, and then at a look full of deepest meaning both missed and left him victor. When he had carried off the honors he came around and said: "Much obleeged, and I hope you don't feel hurt. Shouldn't have cared about it, but Susan had her heart set on it, and Susan's got eighty acres of land and a drove of sheep."

What Boys Should Learn.

Not to tease girls and boys smaller than themselves. Not to take the easiest chair in the room, put it into the pleasantest place in the room, and forget to offer it to the mother when she comes in to sit down. To treat their mother as politely as if she were a strange lady who did not spend her life in their service. To be as kind and helpful to their sisters as they expect their sisters to be to them. To make their friends among good boys. To take pride in being gentlemen at home. To take their mother into their confidence if they do anything wrong, and, above all, never to lie about anything they have done. To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, chew or drink, remembering that these things cannot be unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good men and necessities to bad ones. To remember that there never was a vagabond without these habits. To observe all these rules and they are sure to be gentlemen.

He Took the Others.

A gentleman who paid the best prices for his provisions and who liked to live as well as did his neighbors, was once deceived by his poultryer in the age of some poultry he bought. Meeting the dealer a few days afterwards he walked up to his wagon and enquired: "Got any geese to-day?" "A dozen—nice ones." The customer turned them over, and then he added: "Now, you see, I've got a pesky lot of boarders at my house, an' they eat a great deal of poultry. Havn't you got any tough ones?" "Well, yes," said the dealer, picking them over. "There's one, two, three, four, five of 'em." "Is that all the tough ones you've got?" "Yes, yes; that's all," said the dealer, separating them. "Well, then, I reckon on the whole," continued the buyer, "that I'll take the other lot." The poultryer looked thoughtful, and like most thoughtful people, said nothing.

Dogs and Temperance.

One bitter cold day this winter the policeman walking up and down Fairmount Park saw a faithful dog sitting beside a sack of flour. His drunken master had left him to guard it, and then had gone away to forget all about it. Pitying the poor fellow they tried to call him off to a more sheltered place, but he would not move, nor would he suffer anyone to touch the bag. Hour after hour passed by, and the shivering, faithful watcher was nearly frozen at his post, yet he would not desert. Finally his head dropped, and it was plain that he was insensible; so human hearts had him quickly taken into the guard-house, while willing hands helped to restore him again to life. If they could have given him a better master it would have been a double charity. If that dog could vote, do you not think it would be on the side of prohibition?

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored.

We have recently published a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
