TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER. A Cotton Ring—Broken.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 30. A large number of operators and others interested in the cotton market gathered in the Cotton Exchange at a much earlier hour than usual this morning, expecting the greatest crisis of late years, owing to the corner in September option engineered by Streenstrand. The market for that option opened quietly at the decline, of one point. The prices immediately dropped two points more, then steadied and went out at 62,264 sellers, thirty points under the highest price for that month. A steamstrand holds 70,000 to 100,000 bales of American cotton, the price of which to-morrow will be one halfpenny below the price obtained on Saturday. If the spinners close the mills for a fortnight, the accumulation of cotton will further depreciate the prices. The new crop is pouring in rapidly, and will lessen Streenstrand's opportunities for disposing of his stock. The general opinion is that the cotton ring is utterly smashed.

PROWSE BROS., THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MEN.

We would like to make closer figures, but we can't do it. There is no more room for reduction. To cut down the selling price a little more would be to cut into the cost price, and that would be digging the ground from under our own feet. Already we are too close for comfort to the cost mark, and must sell lots of goods at those prices to make it pay, but the more we sell the cheaper we can sell; so if you want the price cutters to rule, patronize the price cutters.
