Delightful Concert By Quintette Of Harpists Five very attractive and competent young harpists presented an enjoyable and most unusual concert last evening at Prince of Wales College.

Music in Spanish styles opened the program - a sixteenth century pavane, Granados' Spanish Dance No. 5, "Cancion en la Noche", by Salzedo, who has transcribed most of the compositions performed by the quintet, and Malagena, a Spanish dance arranged by Lecons.

The major work heard was Bach's Sixth French Suite, originally written for the harpsichord. The movements, Allemande, Sarabande, Gavotte, Minuet and Bourree, represent dances of the period.

These are arranged by permission of the Mayor and it was felt that when a minor financial drive was put on by an organization selling window cards they should not be permitted to hold a tag day shortly after. No decision was reached.

The matter of charges for cleaning clocks in parking meters and several suggestions were of German origin, including training their own man; another was that a jeweller be hired who could also be a policeman. Decision on the matter was left to the Police Committee.

Garage Heating The street committee deplored working conditions at the city garage through lack of heat and suggested the ceiling and part of the walls be double insulated with heat reflecting aluminum foil and that a suspended heating unit would cost less than $2,000 with a coal saving annually of approximately $600. Tenders will be called for a suitable unit.

Dr. W. L. MacDonald, city health officer reported a house on Pownall St. containing 16 persons unfit for human habitation. Councilor McCormac and Mayor Stewart suggested that contact be made with Social Service agencies and the Public Health and Welfare officer of the Provincial Government to place the residents elsewhere in order that the building be demolished. Steps to this end will be taken.

Farm Surpluses Continued from page 1 the loss of foreign markets. But it's doubtful the Eisenhower administration will want to go into a broad give-away food program.

Much has been said, and probably more will be, about encouraging exports by lowering tariffs and lifting other restrictions on imports. The American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, two strong farm organizations, believe reduced trade barriers would help foreign countries to sell more goods in the United States and use the dollars to buy farm surpluses.

Farmers Want Supports In advocating lower price supports and greater efforts to sell crops abroad, Agriculture Secretary Benson has run into sharp opposition from some farmers and farm organizations. The House agriculture committee, after touring farming sections of the northeast, south and midwest, concludes that farmers want the support programs continued. Yet these supports tend to price crops out of overseas markets.

At the same time proposals to set up a so-called two-price plan for moving cotton and wheat into world markets appear to be winning little support from growers. Under this plan, the government would support the price of only those portions of the two crops used in the United States. The remainder would be available for sale abroad at competitive prices with other countries.

Finds Verdict of Death By Drowning

A Coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "death by drowning" when they assembled last evening to inquire into the death of Robert Stewart, 78, a patient at the Provincial Infirmary, whose body was found on Nov. 3rd floating in the water along the west side of Paoli's wharf.

Coroner L. E. Prowse presided. Mr. John P. Nicholson represented the Crown.

Mr. Glennie MacLean, supervisor of the male division at the Infirmary, told of the late Mr. Stewart's request, which was granted by Dr. Murchison, to visit a cousin in Summerside. The deceased left on the morning of November 2nd presumably to catch the 10 o'clock bus to Summerside but was seen uptown by an attendant of the institution, Don MacNaughton, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. MacLean testified that Stewart had only one dollar on his person when he left the institution and had 53 cents on him when the body was found.

Mr. Nicholson questioned the witness as to whether $1.00 was enough to take the man to Summerside on the bus, to which he replied "No". Mr. MacLean expressed the opinion that the deceased had intended to pick up his old age pension cheque at the office of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Mr. Nicholson inquired why he would be looking for the cheque at the office when it had been coming regularly to the Infirmary. Mr. MacLean could offer no explanation to this question.

Other witnesses heard were Messrs. Simon Paoli, William MacNeill and Robert King, all of whom told of finding the body floating in the water. How they removed it covered it with a tarpaulin and notified the police. Sergeant Duncan MacPhail of the City Police force recalled having been called to Paoli's wharf on Nov. 3rd where the body of a man lay covered with a "Tarp".

Coroner Prowse in addressing the jury explained that the autopsy which he performed at MacLean's Funeral Home, showed that from the condition of the lungs, drowning was evident. The stomach revealed undigested food. No alcohol was present. He instructed the jury that the cause of death was from drowning. After short deliberations the jury returned the aforementioned verdict.

Interesting Talk On Curiosities Of History

"The glory of man is that we don't know what we are going to do next - this is the glory of his freedom," said Rev. Dr. Clarence M. Nicholson, Principal of Pine Hill Divinity College and former Moderator of the United Church of Canada in an address before the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday.

Dr. Nicholson was speaking on "Curiosities of History and the 'strategic ifs'." "Events cannot be measured mathematically," the speaker said, as he went on to describe outstanding world events which had been diverted from the planned intention by seeming trifles.

The speaker dwelt on the military genius of Robert Clive who had been a "problem child", shipped off to India under the East India Company and who full of loneliness and a feeling of utter failure, twice attempted to take his own life, the gun missing fire both times.

His life was spared and he became serious about his future. He struck his real place in the scheme of things when he was gazzeted an ensign in the army. His victories brought India within the British Empire for more than 200 years.

Similarly with Wolfe at Quebec. The deflection of certain reinforcements through the jealousy of the civil governor thwarted the well made plans of that military genius, General Montcalm, and left the way open overnight for the British to take the advantage of and drew his men up on the Plains of Abraham.

"Had the French regiment been there, British troops would not have been victorious. The canker of jealousy in a man's heart may have changed the whole course of history," the speaker said.

Chairman Ernie Reid introduced the speaker who was thanked by President W. W. Reid for an outstanding address. Walter Hyndman acted as song-leader with O. K. Presby at the piano.

Earlier, Prime Minister Churchill called his cabinet into consultations on Trieste. The British government clearly is angered and worried over what it regards as the increasing violent anti-British trend of Italian demonstrations.

Trieste itself was quiet Monday but millions of Italian workers staged a 10-minute "memorial" work stoppage to honor the riot victims.

In Rome, a spokesman for the Italian government denied Eden's charge that Italian extremists had "deliberately provoked" the disorders.

The spokesman also denied reports emanating from the Italian capital Sunday that Pella had asked for the removal of Maj.-Gen. Sir John Winterton as Allied military commander in Trieste.
