MILESTONES WEAR The Milestones on the road of life Are silent - yet they speak. The crown they wear the story tells Of victory or defeat. For some are crowned by pleasure, And some by sin and strife, While more are crowned by noble deeds That stand for truth and right For many are the milestones With radiant beauty crowned, By human love and sacrifice Upon life's battle ground. And when the book of life is closed The record true will stand, The good therein, may far outweigh The evil of the land. When at the end of life's rough road The last milestone is found The crown it wears our story tells - God grant a victor's crown. -E. M. C.
