

WOOD—MacPHEE WEDDING

Dorothy Theresa MacPhee Marries Ft.-Lieut. Wood

On Friday, October 24, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. G.J. Steele in a double ring ceremony at the Parochial House, Summerside, when Dorothy Theresa, daughter of Lt. Col. J.A. MacPhee, M.D. and Mrs. MacPhee, became the bride of James Ramsay Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Wood, Goderich, Ontario.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her ballerina length wedding gown of white nylon net over satin, featuring a very full skirt with lace and hoop, lace bodice with cap sleeves, sabrina neckline, and matching long mitts. Her shoes were of white brocade. Her finger tip veil of French illusion was held in place with a seed pearl tiana and she carried a cascade bouquet of Better Time roses, with large bow background.

Miss Janet MacPhee, her sister's maid of honor, was gowned in Royal blue nylon over taffeta ballerina length with matching shoes, white feather hat and white gloves. She carried a nosegay of yellow shasta mums.

FO J.H. Doucet was groomsmen.

Mrs. MacPhee chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of moss green crepe with green satin panels, white accessories and black seal cape. Her corsage was of pink sweetheart roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's table, encircled with yellow and white shasta mums and yellow tapers, was centered with a three tier wedding cake, topped with wedding bells.

For a honeymoon trip to the Eastern States and Ontario, the bride travelled in a beige knitted (coins) for this patterns (stamps cannot be accepted) to Charlottetown Guardian, Household Arts Dept., 60 Front St. W. Toronto. Print plainly NAME, ADDRESS, PATTERN NUMBER.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Timely Repairs Are Made Before Winter Sets-in

"Oh dear, what-ever shall we do this morning, I wonder!" Granddaughter exclaimed, coming by in a shower while we at this house were at breakfast. No longer does a door remain open to the world without while we eat. No more do we enjoy the summery trills of the song-birds nor love all the bright flowerings and leafiness about. Autumn has closed the volume of Summer, fastened tenderly the golden clasp and set the enchantingly book away.

"We can't cycle to school", she commented, "not in weather like this." There were clouds of damp rolling down the panes, and mist of rain on the hills. She sat down with us at table and nibbled at a piece of toast.

"You got troubles" we chuckled. "All God's chillens got troubles." She laughed. "But mine aren't serious" she said. "I can't seem to find Daddy at the stables. He must 'ave gone back to the field to see the stock and it won't be too long until school-time. Perhaps" she suggested to her grandfather with a smile, "you would take us out in the truck?"

"I could" James nodded, "when the time comes to go."

"Oh goody!" she said rising and hurrying off home to the house across the lane to make ready.

"Couldn't they walk it, Ellen?" James offered. "Many a time I did in my day, rain or shine. What's a mile to youngsters? It's only a step. Just good exercise, I'd say. Yes walked it, or" he grinned remembering "when I delayed my going too long, run most of the way! But I guess I'd better take them—the poor little things."

We smiled. James is not one to deny any of the grandchildren or indeed any youngster's requests.

And all through its hours it continued to be a day of lowering skies.

"It's just a question" James said noting them, "whether or not we'll get those turnips of Rob's harvested this Fall. We could be just a day too late for the Fair!"

This was a day then to make Fall-repairs in the barns—to have unfortunate window-panes replaced, to look to broken hinges on shutter and door, to drive a linely nail here and another there, all in respect to Winter who stern-visaged and white-clad loiters now not too far away.

The gray day is gone. Now in its "lambright" the household is gathered indoors. One reads in the old armchair.

"You like jokes, Ellen" he says with a twinkle "then listen to this: Junior handed his report card to his father, who noted the very acceptable grades, also the teacher's comment: 'Junior talks too much.'"

"The father signed the card then impulsively added his own opinion, 'You should hear his mother! he wrote.'"

"Not bad!" James chuckles. He puts aside his reading, yawns a bit wearily.

"Well, I guess we'd better get to bed!" he says. "It looks as though we may get a fine day to work at the turnips tomorrow."

Until tomorrow — — — Diary. Good-night.

GUARD WOMEN SHOPPERS

NICOSIA (Reuters) — One hundred British women went shopping in the southern Cyprus town of Limassol Tuesday and were outnumbered 3 to 1 by their guards. There were no incidents.

It was the first time they had ventured out since Mrs. Catherine Cutcliffe, a serviceman's wife, was shot in the back and killed while doing her family shopping a month ago.
