IRON ORE

GREAT INDUSTRY IN CANADA

The phenomenal growth of Mining in Canada is well exemplified in its iron ore branch.

Starting from nothing in 1939 the industry has rapidly expanded on the basis of important discoveries and 1955 production will exceed 14 million long tons.

Iron mining in Canada is just starting to roll. By 1960, just five years away, Canadian production should reach 40 MILLION LONG TONS ANNUALLY. This prediction is based on installations now proceeding or definitely planned.

In 1954 the United States consumed 104 million net tons short of iron ore, and of this 17 million tons were imported. U. S. consumption is up very substantially this year, with the amount of imported ore necessarily sharply increased.

Iron ore, and all other branches of the expanding Mining Industry of Canada, are thoroughly covered weekly by The Northern Miner, a paper with the largest mining circulation in the world. Whether it is COPPER, NICKEL, URANIUM, ZINC, or any of the 50 metals and minerals produced so abundantly in Canada, the subscriber receives full company news gathered by a staff of Engineer-Editors and other experts.

Complete statistics, dividend records, latest market quotations, reports and comment, provide an unexampled service to anyone wishing to become informed on the growth and opportunities in Canadian mining.
