Dr. Whitton's Address

Dr. Whitton's address last night at Prince of Wales College was a masterly summing up of the principles and practice of democracy...

As was to be expected, the speaker placed strong emphasis on education as essential to an informed democracy.

Dr. Whitton's address was by no means a pessimistic one, but it was provocative and challenging...

The "Third Force" Theory

It was the stated hope of Prime Minister Nehru of India that the Bandung Conference would stress the "third force" political concept in world affairs...

Mr. Attlee's Speeches

It seems a pity in a way that Mr. Clement Attlee's visit to this country started just before Prime Minister Eden made his announcement regarding the general election next month.

his speeches here have been tinged with more political partisanship than otherwise might have suited the purpose...

If it is not an impertinence to say so, it almost looks as if the Labour chieftain was taken with a little surprise by Sir Anthony's announcement.

Again, Mr. Attlee believes that Red China should be given a seat in the United Nations. That may or may not be a wise recommendation...

Medically Speaking

SOME PAINFUL SYMPTOMS OF AN INFECTIOUS DISEASE

Infectious mononucleosis is distressing to almost everyone who has it. Painful swollen lymph glands, particularly in the neck, is the main symptom in most cases.

Increase in White Cells

In addition to enlarging the lymph glands, it causes an increase in the number of white cells in your blood. The spleen in the upper part of your abdomen is usually enlarged, too.

Other symptoms are weakness, exhaustion, and pain in the legs. You may feel mentally depressed, nervous, have giddy spells and sweat profusely.

Seldom Fatal. Seldom is this disease fatal. It does, however, cause an occasional death. Consult your physician promptly if you suspect you have infectious mononucleosis.

Usually, infectious mononucleosis can be treated satisfactorily with an extract made from the adrenal glands. Ordinarily, this will relieve the symptoms.

General care of your mouth and throat are essential. I think you'll find warm saline solutions particularly helpful as a mouthwash.

New Zealand's Defense Role

New Zealand has abandoned its traditional defence role which prevailed in two world wars. In a future conflict its effort will be confined to the Pacific.

These are the chief features of a major switch in defence policy which is gradually being revealed in government statements.

The full shape of future policy is not yet clear but the pattern now has been indicated in general outline. The changes follow the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers in London and the Seato meeting at Bangkok.

The Second World War showed, however, that New Zealand must look to an area nearer home. Although the undertakings to send a land force to the Middle East in time of war were renewed after 1945, doubts were widely expressed about the wisdom of dividing the defence effort in such a way.

The increasing danger in the Far East made it clear that all the forces New Zealand could muster and more would be needed for the defence of its own theatre and that troops could no longer be spared for more distant zones.

The government has been pressing the view that all Commonwealth consultations for some time, and at the London conference Prime Minister Sidney Holland secured endorsement for a major change.

Accordingly New Zealand has been released from all commitments to send troops to the Middle East or Europe in time of war. Peacetime contributions have also been cancelled and an air squadron stationed in Cyprus has been withdrawn.

Future New Zealand military training and equipment will be based on jungle warfare instead of an open fighting of the type encountered in the Middle East.

In the event of war, New Zealand will make available a division, with armored and ancillary units, for Pacific service. The basis exists for fairly rapid dispatch of a force of this size.

Since 1950, all youths of 18 have undergone three months' compulsory military training, followed by three years' part-time service in territorial force units and a further period in the army reserve.

The increase in peacetime commitments in the Pacific is aimed at relieving Britain of some of the
