We ask the public to remember that we sell Watches as cheap as anyone.

We warn the public against those who offer Watches for sale and take very much less than asked.

An instance came to our notice the other day where $35 had been asked and $20 accepted for a Watch that we and other regular Watchmakers sell for less than $15. Since then, several similar cases have been brought to our notice.

Our object is not only to sell goods but to supply articles, whether Watches or Jewelry, that will best answer the purpose required by our customers and to sell at such a price that it will pay them to buy from us.

CHAPTER X.

"Good Norna," said Mordaunt, and paused, scarce knowing what to say that might console the unhappy woman—"Good Norna," he again resumed, "if there be aught in your mind that troubles it, were you not best to go to the worthy minister at Dunrossness? Men say you have not for many years been in a Christian congregation—that cannot be well or right. You are yourself well known as a healer of bodily disease; but when the mind is sick, we should draw to the Physician of our souls."

Norna had raised her person slowly from the stooping posture in which she sat; but at length she started up on her feet, threw back her mantle, extended her arm, and while her lip foamed, and her eye sparkled, exclaimed in a tone resembling a scream,—"Me did you speak—me did you bid seek out a priest!—Would you kill the good man with horror? Me in a Christian congregation! Would you have the roof to fall on the sackless assembly, and mingle their blood with their worship? I—I seek to the good Physician!—Would you have the fiend openly claim his prey before God and man?"

The extreme agitation of the unhappy speaker naturally led Mordaunt to the conclusion, which was generally adopted and accredited in that superstitious country and period. "Wretched woman," he said, "if indeed thou hast leagued thyself with the Powers of Evil, why should you not seek even yet for repentance? But do as thou wilt, I cannot, dare not, as a Christian, abide longer with you; and take again your gift," he said, offering back the chain, "good can never come of it, if indeed evil hath not come already."

"Be still and hear me, thou foolish boy," said Norna, calmly, as if she had been restored to reason by the alarm and horror which she perceived in Mordaunt's countenance; "hear me, I say. I am not of those who have leagued themselves with the Enemy of Mankind, or derive skill or power from his ministry. And although the unearthly powers were propitiated by a sacrifice which human tongue can never utter, yet, God knows, my guilt in that offering was no more than that of the blind man who falls from the precipice which he could neither see nor shun. Oh, leave me not—shun me not—in this hour of weakness! Remain with me till the temptation be passed, or I will plunge myself into that lake, and rid myself at once of my power and my wretchedness!"

Mordaunt, who had always looked up to this singular woman with a sort of affection, occasioned no doubt by the early kindness and distinction which she had shown to him, was readily induced to resume his seat, and listen to what she had farther to say, in hopes that she would gradually overcome the violence of her agitation. It was not long ere she seemed to have gained the victory her companion expected, for she addressed him in her usual steady and authorative manner.

"It was not of myself, Mordaunt, that I purposed to speak, when I beheld you from the summit of yonder gray rock, and came down the path to meet with you. My fortunes are fixed beyond change, be it for weal or for woe. For myself I have ceased to feel much; but for those whom she loves, Norna of the Fitful-head has still those feelings which link her to her kind. Mark me. There is an eagle, the noblest that build in these airy precipices, and into that eagle's nest there has crept an adder—wilt thou lend thy aid to crush the reptile, and to save the noble of the lord of the north sky?"

"You must speak more plainly, Norna," said Mordaunt, "if you would have me understand or answer you. I am no guesser of riddles."

"In plain language, then, you know well the family of Burgh-Westra—the lovely daughters of the generous old Udaller, Magnus Troil—Minna and Brenda, I mean? You know them, and you love them?"

"I have known them, mother," replied Mordaunt, "and I have loved them—none knows it better than yourself."

"To know them once," said Norna, emphatically, "is to know them always. To love them once, is to love them for ever."

"To have loved them once, is to wish them well for ever," replied the youth; "but it is nothing more. To be plain with you, Norna, the family at Burgh-Westra have of late totally neglected me. But show me the means of serving them, I will convince you how much I have remembered old kindness, how little I resent late coldness."

"It is well spoken, and I will put your purpose to the proof," replied Norna. "Magnus Troil has taken a serpent into his bosom—his lovely daughters are delivered up to the machinations of a villian."

"You mean the stranger, Cleveland?" said Mordaunt.

"The stranger who so calls himself," replied Norna—"the same whom we found flung ashore, like a waste-heap of sea-weed, at the foot of the Samburgh-cape. I felt that within me, that would have prompted me to let him lie till the tide floated him off, as it had floated him on shore. I repent me I gave not way to it."

"But," said Mordaunt, "I cannot repent that I did my duty as a Christian man. And what right have I to wish otherwise? If Minna, Brenda, Magnus and the rest like that stranger better than me I have no title to be offended; nay, I might well be laughed at for bringing myself into comparison."

"It is well, and I trust they merit thy unselfish friendship."

"But I cannot perceive," said Mordaunt, "in what you can propose that I should serve them. I have but just learned by Bryce the jaggar, that this Captain Cleveland is all in all with the ladies at Burgh-Westra, and with the Udaller himself. I would like ill to intrude myself where I am not welcome, or to place my home-bred merit in comparison with Captain Cleveland's. He can tell them of battles, when I can only speak of birds' nests—can speak of shooting Frenchmen, when I can only tell of shooting seals—he wears gay clothes, and bears a brave countenance; I am plainly dressed, and plainly nurtured. Such gay gallants as he can noose the hearts of those he lives with, as the fowler nooses the guillemot with the rod and line."

The Gloucester View.

WHY THEY DON'T WANT ANY FISHERY COMMISSION—GLOUCESTER URGED TO BE UP AND DOING.

The work which has been accomplished in the past two years by the American fish bureau of this city and the American fishery union, in behalf of the fisheries, both on the coast and lakes, the statistics obtained and the able presentation of the case through the columns of the press, has awakened an interest in the subject which his borne good fruits. Now that a commission has been appointed and endeavors are being made to have the question settled, there is urgent need that these efforts should be continued, and the fisheries be ably defended at Washington, before the commission, It is a matter of momentous issue, not only to the country at large, but to New England fishing ports especially, that the question shall be so adjudicated as to prevent any such harrassment to American fishermen while pursuing their vocation as has disgraced the past two years. A free market in the United States is the end and aim of those who have the Canadian side of the question in charge. This means an injurious competition having for its object the crippling of the American fisheries, and then will follow a monopoly, which will build up their fisheries at the expense of ours, and prove a death blow to a very important American industry. This has been presented so often in these columns that it is entirely unnecessary to recapitulate. It is full time that our people were on the alert, and with others interested in the fisheries, preparing themselves to present the American side of the case. We must depend upon ourselves to meet this issue, and it must be championed by those who will use every effort to win. We have a subtle foe to contend with. English gold, unsparingly, and English influence will be brought to bear in every possible manner for the accomplishment of the desired ends, and able men on our side will be required to present the case before the commission when it meets. A meeting of the fishing owners in all the seaports and lake cities should be called, and there should be a unity of purpose exhibited and a zealousness manifested which will convince congress that no commission is needed to settle the fishery question. We can get along without Canada in the fisheries, much better than she can get along without us, and the present year has done much to demonstrate the fact. Let us then be up and doing, by securing signers to petitions against any commissioners, and getting ready for any contingency, thus assuring congress that we are interested, and demanding of them a unity of action in our behalf.—Gloucester Advertizer.

The Bustle Must Go.

The bustle must go! The doctors have pronounced it unhealthy—the Custom Inspectoresses are daily confiscating them as they come stuffed with costly laces and jewels from Europe, and now, lo and behold, the greedy burglar is also after them. The latter fact a certain Mrs. Harwick, of Memphis, has found out to her cost. She, like the majority of ladies in this broad and happy land of ours, wore a bustle—a really handsome bustle, if such things can be termed handsome by even the greatest stretch of the imagination. Within its deep and mysterious recesses she had sewed $7,000 in greenbacks, the savings of her honest husband. Somebody coveted the bustle, and the other night, while its owner slept, somebody took it. That bustle is now gone and in all probability gone forever. The other bustles, sooner or later, must go, too. Yes! the fates decree it, the doctors desire it, the various Customs officers sigh for it—yes, the bustle must go.

Shot in the Legs.

On Saturday afternoon George T. and Lewis, sons of B. A. Smith, went across the North West Arm on a shooting expedition. George is a young man in the business with his father, Lewis is 16 years old. About half-past five o'clock when near Jones' refinery an accident occurred by which the gun carried by George was discharged and the load of buckshot was lodged in the legs of his brother, the calf of his right leg being very much shattered. George managed to get him removed to the residence of Mrs. John Taylor, and medical assistance was obtained. Yesterday afternoon the wounded youth was removed to the city and taken to his father's residence, where everything possible is being done to alleviate his sufferings.—Halifax Herald.
