The Capture of Arabi.

The news of his defeat had not yet reached Cairo. He himself was the herald of his own ruin. A profound sensation resulted from the intelligence, and all his efforts were unable to stir up a popular outbreak. A feeling of consternation was uppermost in men's minds, mingled with one of relief in the majority that the long reign of anarchy was now about to end. The Notables, Ulemas, and military chiefs at once assembled in great numbers to hear Arabi's statements, and to confer with him on the future. They had hardly begun their deliberations before the cry was raised "The English are here!" It was found to be too true. General Lowe was close on the outskirts of the city at the head of his cavalry. Hardly an hour had elapsed since Arabi had arrived, and in that short time the multitude had—under pressure of the British advent—determined on submission, and to send a deputation to the Khedive to assure him of their peaceful intentions. Arabi stood alone. One by one his staff had abandoned him, and he was left to his fate. Not a soldier did him reverence now; stones and curses were freely hurled at him. As he turned to fly the Prefect of Police arrested him, and lamb-like, he made no resistance, but willingly accompanied his captor to the guardroom set apart for his reception.
Toulba Pasha was made a prisoner at the same time. On Arabi's arrival at his place of incarceration he sat down and penned a letter of abject submission to the Khedive, asking his pardon, and entreating that his life might be spared and the past forgiven. He and his former commandant have been handed over to the British as soon as they entered the city. Arabi's prison house was surrounded by the Bengal cavalry, as Sikhs, and hereditary enemies of the Mohammedans. He and Toulba will be tried on the charge of having incited the popular to incendiarism, plunder, and murder, with the added accusation of mutiny and rebellion against the sovereign.

Great Expectations.

A miserably false position is that of the man whose friends and acquaintances persist in attributing to him excellencies of mind, body or estate which he does not really possess. Great expectations are entertained about him, which he is unable to fulfil. A burden is laid upon him which it is beyond his strength to support. And the hardship of it is, when he breaks down under it (as he must infallibly do, sooner or later), and the error that has been made becomes apparent, then these who overrated him are sure to be just as much disgusted at his failure as though their mistaken estimate of him had been caused by false professions on the part of the victim. They feel virtuously indignant at having been taken in, and forget that they are themselves the authors of the alluring prospectus that has deceived them. Take a man of moderate means who somehow gets the name of being a Croesus.
People think he is bound to keep open house and purse, to subscribe largely to everything under the sun, and to launch out into all manner of extravagances, under penalty of being deemed stingy and a miser if he fall short of these expectations. Another, again, is supposed by others, to be much wiser than he really is, though he himself is well aware that he has no more wit or genius than other people, and has never aspired to be thought clever. As a rule, a man is just what he makes himself; but there is almost sure to be some period or other in his life during which he will be criticised and treated more according to the idea which his friends have formed as to his capabilities than according to his real merits.

Small Savings.

The man who saves something every year is on the road to prosperity. It may not be possible to save much. If not, save a little. Do not think that a dollar or a dime is too small a sum to lay by. Every one knows how expenditures get away with large sums. But few seem to know that the rule is one that works both ways. If a dime spent here and a dollar there soon makes a hole in a man's income, so do dimes and dollars laid away soon become a visible and respectable accumulation. In this country, any man may make himself independent, or keep himself under the harrow for life, according as he wastes or spends his small change. How many things do individuals and families buy that they do not need, or cannot afford.
Think twice before you spend that small coin. Do not be stingy or mean, but also do not be foolishly self-indulgent.
The self-indulgent person is far more likely to become ungenerous than the self-denying one. The money wasted on hurtful things alone—the medicines and drugs we mingle with our diet in the form of tea, tobacco, alcohol, and the like—stand on the very threshold of prosperity, and bar the way of thousands to a home in their old age.

California Canning.

California has become the great canning State. Of salmon and fruit the product thus prepared reached eleven and a half millions of cans. Nearly the whole State is singularly adapted to fruit raising, and at the beginning of the present year 6,000,000 fruit trees were within its borders. From the southern to the northern border, the semi-tropical orange, almond, fig, and lemon, flourish by the side of what we consider our standard fruits. Grapes of the finest varieties, and those suitable to raisin-making are grown in increasing quantities. Berries are easily raised, and last a long time. The strawberry season is from March to January, and commonly the whole year round.

Farm Notes.

Bull calves of the Polled breed are being picked up in England for America.
Captain Mann has sold 11 of his bull calves to Mr. Leonard, of Missouri, U. S.
The name of a Mammoth bullock recently imported to Christchurch has reached Victoria, and his dimensions here are quoted from the Australasian:
"Height, 7 ft. 2 in.; length, 12 ft. 6 in.; girth, 10 ft. 3 in. He measures 5 ft. 4 in.
from the wither to the brisket, and turns the scale at 3,200 lbs.
Two enterprising Americans, Rufus Hatch and Jerome Lawrence, in connection with London capitalists, are said to have purchased 750,000 acres of rich grazing land on the Yellowstone in Dakota, of which 50,000 head of young cattle will be turned loose.
Mr. Middleton, Chemist, of Uitenage, South Africa, has in his shop an ostrich with one head, two bodies, four wings, and four legs. The head is perfectly formed, and well feathered, and the wings and legs well developed. The neck, however, is short.
The present month is a good time to get out a supply of swamp muck. It is impossible to answer the question as to the exact value of this material as applied to land. The quality of muck varies greatly, some of it not being worth the expense of removing it from the beds, even when this can be done with ease. The fertilizing value of most mucks depends largely upon the nitrogen they contain, and that this element may be available, the muck needs to undergo a process of decomposition.
The nitrogen must be liberated from its insoluble, organic compounds, and form soluble substances, as the nitrates, and ammonia compounds. To secure this, muck should be either placed in a heap and subjected to the influence of freezing and thawing—weathering as it is termed, or be mixed with manure in a compost heap, and there undergo a decomposition, to fit it for use as a fertilizer. At this season, the muck beds are usually filled with water, but by beginning at one side, a boat of scow may be used to advantage.

The report of the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. J. H. Pope) for the year 1881 is now published. Considerable attention is being given in the Dominion to the improvement of the cattle raised in the country, and a large number of high-priced pedigree stock (718 bulls and cows) passed through the quarantine at Quebec last year. One thousand, one hundred and seventy-nine pure-bred sheep were also imported, and fifty-three pigs. No contagious disease manifested itself among these animals, and the only deaths reported were two cows, two calves, and four sheep, all from gastric or enteric diseases. The exportation of cattle through Canadian ports, principally to Great Britain, were 45,535 cattle, and 62,401 sheep. Seven thousand nine hundred and fifty-five cattle, and 9,465 sheep were also shipped from Canadian ports.
The cattle district in the North-West Territory near the Rocky Mountains is attracting much attention, and the herds there are increasing rapidly. A large importation of Clydesdales has been taking place, and it may be stated that the first prize horse of this class at the recent Reading show has been forwarded to Canada. The export of phosphate of lime also increased from 12,000 tons in 1880 to 15,601 last year, the value being $239,493. The total emigration to Canada during the year was 47,991. Of these the settlers in Manitoba numbered 22,001—3,758 of the latter being citizens of the United States. The rapid extension of railways, particularly in Manitoba, and the North-West and the prosperous condition of the country generally, are also subjects of comment.

On Sir Garnet reaching Cairo one of his first acts was to send a strong body of Coldstreams to the palace in which mid-shipman De Chair was confined, and see to his being at once set free. The lad who seemed none the worse for his confinement, was overjoyed at the sight of his countrymen. He said that if the English had not come up as they did, so quickly on Arabi's heels, his life and the lives of all the Europeans in the place would not have been worth a moment's purchase. This he gathered from the conversation of his guards. Sir Garnet greeted the boy with real affection and at once sent him back to Alexandria, where he will rejoin his ship.

"TWENTY-FOUR YEARS' EXPERIENCE," says an eminent physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used, Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all our Druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of an order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their "written guarantee" to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. See advt. in sibber column.
