An Isolated Spot.

The most isolated spot in the British empire is Tristan da Cunha, a volcanic island 1,750 miles from the Cape of Good Hope and 1,300 away from St. Helena, the nearest point of land. While Napoleon was a prisoner on St. Helena, the British Government maintained a garrison on Tristan. His death made the garrison unnecessary, and the soldiers left, with the exception of Corporal William Glass, his family and two privates. The privates married Glass' daughters, and, according to the last reports brought by the Australian ship Dartford, the present population of 84 people consists mainly of women. It is said that in 1837 the greater part of the male population secretly sailed away one night in the only boat and were never heard of again.

Work of the Indolent.

Indolent men have accomplished many wonderful things. This is especially true as regards literature. The finest description of a sunrise was written by the poet Thompson in bed. Coleridge was one of the most indolent of men, yet his work is, of its kind, unapproached. One of the most important improvements in the steam-engine was due to the indolence of James Watt. It is fairly correct to say that work which is the outcome of meditation or prolonged observation is best performed by people whose natural indolence makes them careless of the strife and bustle in which an active temperament would tend to immerse them.

IT WAS THE WICKED "POLLY."

Patrick Thought It Was the Voice of His Rival and Got Riled at It.

An amusing scene occurred in a quiet up-town street. A young Irishman who is courting a rosy-cheeked servant in one of the houses in the thoroughfare called about his usual time in the evening. Just as he opened the iron gate leading into the basement yard he heard a voice say, "Hullo, Pat!"

"Hullo, yourself," replied Pat.

"Hullo, Pat!" said the strange voice again.

Pat gazed all around him, but could see nobody, and once again he heard the voice say, "Hullo, Pat!"

"Is that all you can say, 'Hullo, Pat!' Where the divil are you, anyhow?" answered Pat.

"Pat you're a fool," said the voice.

"Begorra, you're a liar, whoever ye be," shouted Pat, as he looked blindly around for his insulter.

"Pat, you fool," again uttered the voice.

"I'm no fool, whoever ye are," called out Pat, wild with anger, "an' if yez will show yerself I'll prove it to yez."

"Foolish Pat" came the reply, accompanied by a horse chuckle.

Pat was furious, and thoughts of his rival, McCarthy, immediately came in his mind.

"Show yerself, McCarthy, only show yerself, MrCarthy, an' I'll punch in the face of yez, I will! I will!" he shouted as he danced up and down.

"Pat, you fool! Pat, you fool! ho, ho, ho! ha ha!" shouted Pat's tormenter.

By this time Pat's coat and waistcoat lay on the ground, and he had his sleeves rolled up to his elbows and was tearing around like a hen on a hot griddle. There's no telling what would have happened, as it was nearly the time for the policeman on the beat to pass that way, when the basement door opened and Pat's sweetheart came out. On seeing Pat she uttered a little scream and exclaimed: "Are you crazy, Pat? An' what has came into you the night?" Put your clothes on, man."

"You spalpeen, Pat! Foolish Pat! Ho ho! ha ha! Go home, Pat," said the mysterious voice out of the darkness.

"Do yez hear the blackguard? Oh, if I can lay my hands on him!" foamed Pat, as he continued his war dance.

"Ah, you mustn't mind that, Pat," said his sweetheart. "You're a donkey, surely, to be minding the talk of that crazy bird upstairs. Why, it's only one of the young men's parrots which they brought home with them from over the sea. It's an ill-manner bird, and do swear dreadfully. Mistress won't have it in the house, so the boys hang up the cage out of the window of their room upstairs.

"You're a great gawk, Pat, to be minding the likes of a poor, simple-minded bird like that."

Pat became slowly appeased, and, as he put on his coat, he said: "I don't mind what a burid says, Molly, but begorra, I thought it was that sneak McCarthy hiding furninst ther stoop."—New York Tribune.

Human Inequalities.

Some curious features are noted in the inequality in size and influence of corresponding parts of the human body. The ears on the same head are probably more alike than any other of the twin organs of the body, nevertheless they vary as regards thickness, length, shape, and position most remarkably in different individuals. If the ear, however, on one side is delicate in size and contour, the other will be the same, while if the one looks like a dried fig, the other duplicates it in form and color. But with the eye it is different. To say nothing of the fact that one eye is generally more open than the other, all oculists agree that the cases where the seeing powers of the two are equal—in the same head—are very rare. Usually men use the right eye the most. Watchmakers, engravers, microscopists and mariners using the telescope, apply their right eye to the instrument, and generally overwork that organ. There is no good reason why both eyes should not be equally strong, but they are not. Tailors agree that the right shoulder is almost always lower than the left. This they account for by the universal habit men have of resting the left elbow on the desk while writing, and to the equally prevalent practice of those who carry heavy burdens resting them on the right shoulder. As regards the arms and legs, there is generally but slight difference. In the size of the hands and feet there is commonly a great variation, and, curiously enough, while it is the right hand that is generally bigger, it is the left foot that often requires a larger size boot or shoe. Glovemakers give the proportion of large right hands as 900 to 1,000, which, by the way, approximates to the proportion of right-handed persons in the community. The size of the hand is generally increased by labor. If ladies are to be trusted as to the size of the gloves they wear, the human hand has grown smaller within the last twenty or thirty years; but glovers tell a different story. They confess to marking all ladies' gloves a half size smaller than they really are. This, they say, is because ladies almost invariably ask for a size smaller glove than they should wear. There is nearly always a difference in the size of the hands. This is so marked that the glove that fits the right hand will wrinkle on the left, looking, in fact, too large. While the right hand and arm are generally better developed and stronger, the opposite legs correspond in these particulars. It is found that in athletic persons the advantage of strength is often with the left foot. That is the foot we habitually stand upon, and it is the left foot that leads off in walking. A man uses the left foot most on the bicycle, and even more so in mounting a horse. While the constant use of the right hand is a matter of training (monkeys use both equally), the more frequent use of the left foot would seem to be a general habit, hence that foot is in so many cases the stronger.

Early Impressions.

Every one must have found how difficult it is to eradicate early impressions, or to overcome prejudices acquired later in life. Our first impressions cling to us with a tenacity which no change of place nor situation can destroy. The home of our childhood, the friends and associations of our youthful days, form images in our remembrance which can never be wholly obliterated. The wanderer from his native country may in his adopted home meet new associations and acquire more wealthy connections and a higher standing in society than he held in the land which gave him birth, still the humble dwelling in which he was reared, the partners of his early joys and sorrows, the habits he was accustomed to in youth, are all "green spots" in his reminiscences continually watered from the fount of never-failing memory.

SKIN DISEASES!

One Remedy Which has Never Failed—Tried and Tested Ointment.

Because other alleged remedies for piles, scrofula, eczematic eruptions, scald head, chafing, black heads, salt rheum and skin diseases generally have proved useless, don't condemn Dr. Chase's Ointment. It has never been known to fail. For instance, Nelson Simmons, Meyersburg, Ont., writes:

"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Itching Piles, and can recommend it highly. Since using it I have had perfect freedom from the disease."

Peter Vanallen, L'Amable, Que., had the eczema for three years. He tried three doctors, but received no benefit. One box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and three boxes of Dr. Chase's Pills cured him completely. Large scales covered his legs and body, but the Ointment soon removed them. He will swear to these facts.

Chase's Ointment may be had from any dealer or from the manufacturers Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard street, Toronto. Price 60 cents.

Mother's greatest remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung affections is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. The medicinal taste is wholly disguised making it pleasant to take. Large bottle 25 cents.

The Prohibition state committee has issued an appeal to the voters of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in which it is stated that "The success of either party means the continuance of 232,000 saloons and the annual waste of $1,300,000 and 60,000 lives.

Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound "re-backs" weak backs and the "re-backed" people "back" up our statements with their testimony, Here's a sample:

For a number of years I have been troubled with a lame back, which at times became so painful that I had to lay off work. Nine months ago I was lucky enough to be advised to try Manley's Celery Nerve Compound, and after taking 2 or 3 bottles the pain entirely left me; and I feel certain that my cure is a permanent one as I have had no return of the pain for eight month now.

EARLY SPRING SNAKE STORY.

The Remarkable Achievements of a Farm Hand in Getting Bitten.

When the editor of the crank department of the Washington Star looked up from his desk to recognize his visitor he failed at first in recognition, but after a minute it came to him all right.

"How are you?" he said heartily. "What's the good word in Loudoun, and what the mischief have you done with your whiskers?"

"Moved 'em," smiled the visitor. "Spring's about here, and I didn't need 'em. But I haven't got any time to waste. I come in on my way to the train to tell you of a queer snake story up our way."

"Isn't it a little early for snake stories?" suggested the editor.

"Yes, for this year's crop, but this one is a last year's one, that I just found out about yesterday."

"Then it must be true. Go ahead with it. Take a chair, won't you?"

"No, I'll stand, so's to be ready to start when I've finished. You see, last year I had a hired hand on the farm that I never seen till the day he asked for work. I needed a hand purty bad, and I took him right in without a word except to tell him that if he got drunk I'd turn him off. He said he wasn't a drinking man and he went right to work in the hay field. He wasn't the best worker I ever hired, but he was steady, and we got along all right till the fourth day he was with me. That day I was in the barn and I heard a yell, and I ran to the door and seen my hired man flying around the field as if the old serpent himself was after him. When he seen me he headed my way, and as he went past me I could see a short, stumpy, mottled snake hanging to his leg at the ankle. He flew around the barn, yelling at every jump, and I took after him and caught him in a clump of woods about 200 yards from the barn, where he dropped, plum tuckered out. When I got to him the snake was gone, but the marks of his teeth were on his leg, and I hustled to the house and got a quart bottle of liquor I keep for snake bites and other household purposes, and soon had him loaded down to the guards. He was sober by next morning and all right, and the day after he went to work again. He stayed with me a month after that and left when I had no work for him, and I tell you that in the four or five weeks I had him that snake caught him the same way six times, and to save our necks we could never find the snake. Sometimes it would nab him by the hand when he was workin' in the weeds, and sometimes in another, but it would always hang on and he would run and yell and me after him.

"Now for the queer part," said the visitor, taking a final spurt. "The other day I was grubbin' out that clump of bushes, and, by hokey, I seen a snake, and before it could move I stuck my grubbin' hoe through it and dragged it out, and durn my buttons, come to look at it, it wasn't nothin' but a rag snake, painted. I carried it up to the house, and as soon as my boy seen it he whooped and said it was the same snake that had been feedin' on my hired man all last harvest, and I reckon the boy was right."

The editor gave the visitor a gentle haw haw.

"That's all right," said the visitor, moving away, "but just let that chap try to git work with me this year; if he don't wish that that was a genuine sapperhead, then I ain't no judge of what I'll do to him."

Sins of the Toilet.

Fraulein Payer, a Swiss, who has recently obtained her degree as Doctor of Medicine, is lecturing her fellow-country women on the unsanitary enormities of modern female fashion.

Recently, when the Society of Swiss Schoolmistresses was holding its yearly session in Aarau, Dr. Payer was invited to address them. She took for her subject "The Sins of the Toilet," and delivered a militant oration against the wearing of corsets, against gloves, and against long skirts. Her reasoning was so effective that at the end of her lecture no fewer than 100 women came forward and subscribed their names to a pledge to renounce the corset, to wear gloves only upon "ceremonial occasions," and to have their dresses made a foot short of the ground.

House Pictured by Lightning.

A remarkable circumstance occurred at Wakelee, Cass County, Mich., recently, during an electrical storm. The lightning photographed a house, much resembling the work of X rays. A farm house was struck by lightning, and in an upper front room was a blank, upper white wall, opposite two windows that faced the road. The first visitors to the scene were astonished to find on the blank wall an exact picture of the outside front of the house, just as it appeared from the road. The picture was perfect and distinct as a negative. After nine days it gradually disappeared from the wall without even being copied.—Chicago Tribune.

A Time for Discretion.

The two girls were on a shopping tour.

"You didn't speak very courteously to the clerk," said one of them.

"I'm sure I didn't mean to be inconsiderate," was the reply. "I don't see that there was any occasion to be elaborately deferential."

"Well, it's just as well to be very careful indeed at this time of year. There isn't any telling who is going to be the only man at the summer resort your father insists on visiting."—Washington Star.

Novel Wheelmarking Scheme.

Many plans for secret marking, various locks and such like have been devised to prevent wheel stealing or to convict the thief after he has been caught. It seems strange that no one has thought of the very simple device of placing the photograph of the machine's owner upon the wheel itself. Since the electrical exhibition of May the art of photographing through the medium of the electric current upon metals has made great progress. A negative of the object to be photographed is first necessary. It is placed upon the metallic surface, and by the aid of a powerful electric current the picture is transferred. By the same process it can be tinted all colors. The entire metallic surface is subjected to a coating of black, bronze or silver, which makes the picture complete. As a thief proof wheel, one with its owner's likeness securely incorporated in its make up would seem to be almost perfect.—New York Sun.

That

Extreme tired feeling afflicts nearly everybody at this season. The hustlers cease to push, the tireless grow weary, the energetic become enervated. You know just what we mean. Some men and women endeavor temporarily to overcome that

Tired

Feeling by great force of will. But this is unsafe, as it pulls powerfully upon the nervous system, which will not long stand such strain. Too many people "work on their nerves," and the result is seen in unfortunate wrecks marked "nervous prostration," in every direction. That tired

Feel-

ing is a positive proof of thin, weak, impure blood; for, if the blood is rich, red, vitalized and vigorous, it imparts life and energy to every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. The necessity of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for that tired feeling is, therefore, apparent to every one, and the good it will do you is equally beyond question. Remember that

Wedding Rings

"WELL, SAM, since the engagement ring wears so well these long eight years you bought from G. G. Jury, I accept your proposal if you promise to buy the Wedding Ring from him also. My friend Nell was married a few days ago, and you should see the beautiful ring she has, and oh, so cheap. Sue says Mr. G. G. Jury has a fine assortment from 14k to 18k, and he buys them from the largest establishment in Canada, and they will last a lifetime; and you know one wedding ring must do these hard times."

"Agreed, I will go and buy the ring from G. G. JURY, Watchmaker and Jeweler, Charlottetown."
