Canadian Pacific Chairman Addresses Annual Meet

MONTREAL (CP) - N. R. Crump, chairman and chief executive officer of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., said Wednesday that continued expansion without "inflation and the excesses associated with inflation" is Canada's top economic challenge.

"The business expansion which has been going on, uninterrupted for 63 months currently shows no signs of curtailment," Mr. Crump told the annual meeting of CPR shareholders.

"Quite the reverse. The danger lies in an excess of demand in relation to productive resources available."

He said Canada has seen a "notable growth" in recent years. But in that growth, the country "appears to have largely used up her unemployed resources."

Future growth will depend on "gains in our productive resources and particularly in our productivity."

"Service adjustment" in the company's railway passenger service "were made in the case of the Dominion train between Montreal and Vancouver, and these 'culminated in authorization for its abandonment from the Board of Transport Commissioners early this year."

TALKS ABOUT GRAIN - The CPR is the "major grain carrier," he said, and it has had to "bend all its efforts to both its commitments to the (Canadian) wheat board and its obligation to carry other important export commodities and to serve growth in domestic requirements."

He said the initial grain-shipment target accepted by the CPR last year was about 190,000 cars, "or five per cent less than the 200,468 cars loaded during the crop year 1963-64, when the Russian sale of that year created an all-time record of grain exports."

Despite its lower commitment and under extremely adverse weather conditions in the Prairies and British Columbia, the company actually loaded in the first eight months of the current crop year five per cent more cars of grain than in the same months of 1963-64.

Mr. Crump said that in March, 1966, the wheat board revised upward its goals for grain loadings in the remaining four months of the crop year. The crop year runs from Aug. 1 of one year to July 31 of the next.

"The new targets call for your company to better its previous peak performance during the 1963-64 crop year at the same time as it is handling an estimated increase in non-grain

EARNINGS HIGHER - The chairman said the fact that the company's "net railway earnings" were higher in the first quarter of 1966 than in the same period last year was a reflection of "continued growth in the economy and the adoption of new marketing concepts. The company already has said that the first-quarter earnings were $6,620,286, compared with $7,514,928 in that period last year.

Mr. Crump said of the quarter: "Freight revenue was up substantially, reflecting increases in volume in almost all categories of traffic."

He spoke of a "heavy gram movement arising out of the multi-million-bushel sales last year (by Canada) to China and Russia" and said this "coincides with a substantial expansion in other traffic."

Mr. Crump said CPR had had a "passenger train deficit on an out-of-pocket basis in 1965" amounting to $23,500,000. This occurred despite "service adjustments made."

Continued improvement in railway freight revenues was anticipated throughout 1966 but the "rate of increase in net railway earnings is not expected to continue at the rate indicated by the first quarter."

DISCUSSES LABOR DEMAND - Turning to the question of labor relations, Mr. Crump said the CPR along with other Canadian railways "have been served with demands by organized workers in respect of wages and working conditions which could have a most serious effect."

"The wage demands are unrealistically high and bear no relation to competitive forces and economic circumstances of the railway industry."

"Such demands," he said, "simply cannot be sustained by the railways or by the economy generally."

"It is hoped that a sense of responsibility and moderation by the employees will attend efforts now under way through conciliation procedures to reach realistic and equitable settlements."

He said that effective April 1 further revisions were made in the CPR pensions plan following negotiations with employee representatives.

The plan has been "integrated with the Canada and Quebec pension plans to avoid duplication of both benefits and contribution rates."

Ralph Nader States Views

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ralph Nader said here the U.S. casualty insurance industry "has abdicated its role" in the auto safety field because of its close relations with the automobile manufacturers.

The 32-year-old Washington lawyer said that although insurance companies rate drivers, "they have refused to develop a rating system for automobiles."

He also criticized the safety of an expensive imported car, the Rolls Royce, in testimony prepared for the U.S. House of Representatives commerce committee. Nader said:

"The over-rated and over-priced Rolls Royce has poor door latches. According to Derwin Severy of the University of California at Los Angeles, at a 20 m.p.h. impact the Rolls Royce's doors, hood and trunk will come open."

He contended "the auto industry's performance in safety could have been substantially improved if the casualty insurance industry had accepted its responsibilities to its policyholders and the public."

"As reasons, he listed what he called the insurance industry's success in getting rate increases, fear of public criticism of the industry, the fact that the auto companies are large customers of casualty underwriters "and the restraints flowing from interlocking directorates and insurance company holding of auto industry equities."
