PARNELL'S FUNERAL.
AN IMMENSE PROCESSION.

Parnellites Stand Out Against McCarthy.
THE DEAD LEADER'S LAST WORDS.

DUBLIN, Oct. 12.
The remains of Parnell arrived at Kingstown at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. At Chester large deputations from Liverpool, Manchester, Preston, Newcastle-on-Tyne and other places joined the train. At Kingstown a large crowd collected to receive the remains on Irish soil. The train with the body reached Dublin at 7.39 o'clock. The body was escorted by an immense procession and taken to the City Hall, where it lay in state from 10 till 2 o'clock. Some 40,000 people viewed the remains. At 2.45 o'clock the procession started for the grave. The crowd was so great at the cemetery that the police had great difficulty in keeping the way clear for the procession. A way was finally cleared to the grave, where the clergy recited the rituals of the Church of England. The remains were interred at Glasnevin.

His death was a great surprise. Nobody was aware he had been ailing, and no wonder rumors of suicide took possession of the public mind. It seems that his physicians frequently warned him that and ought to cease public speaking for a time. It was noticed that at all recent meetings he worked himself to a high pitch of nervous tension, which lasted days after. Despite the entreaties of his wife he persisted in talking, although he promised her soon to take a rest. Mrs. Parnell is prostrated with grief and fatigue. She has been nursing her husband constantly since Sunday night, when the cold settled on his lungs. Both were hopeful of recovery until early last night, when death came with terrible suddenness.
HE WAS NOT STRONG,

Russia and England.
A BRITISH OPINION.
LONDON, Oct. 12.
The Standard of Saturday published a communication in regard to the recent so-called aggressive actions of the Russians in Paupur, which says "it is high time for England to unsheath her sword in Asia. The Russian tide of conquest which has flown steadily eastward for fifty years, must be sent sweeping back to the Caspian. Russia has pushed on until she now stands on the very outposts of India."

Fire.
WINTHROP, Me., Oct. 12.
A fire here last night destroyed nearly every building owned by Messrs. C. M. Bailey's Sons & Co., oil cloth manufacturers.

LONDON, Oct. 12.
At the memorial services of the late Hon. W. Henry Smith in Westminster Abbey on Saturday, all the royal family were present.

The attitude of the leading Parnellites put beyond a doubt their determination to maintain the conflict with the followers of Justin McCarthy. The temper of the Parnellites is against any compromise; for they believe that the reaction in Ireland towards Parnell is so strong that they may succeed even where their dead chief failed.
Justin McCarthy said no movement had yet been made by either section of the Irish party towards a reconciliation. He hoped a meeting of the opposing sections of the party would result in a reunion of the Irish forces.
Mr. Shaw may be again heard from. The mention of the name of John Redmond, as sectional leader, arises from Parnell's recently confiding to him the secret of the campaign in Great Britain. Dr. Glover says that during Parnell's delirium, some hours before he died, he talked constantly of Ireland, and told what he would do for her if he lived. In a brief lucid interval, just before death, he said, and they were almost his last words: "Let my love be conveyed to my colleagues and the Irish people."

A London despatch reports: It has been well known that Mr. Parnell has not enjoyed the best of health for years past, and it has been noticed and widely commented upon that, since the O'Shea divorce developments became matters of public notoriety and since political trouble came upon him, the great Irish member of parliament and that he had perceptibly aged in appearance. But nobody expected to hear of his death and no inkling as to his illness had reached the newspapers. Not until this afternoon was it possible to obtain details in regard to the death of Mr. Parnell. He died at his home, Walsingham Terrace, Brighton, at 11.30 o'clock yesterday evening. The report that his death was in reality due to a chill, which he caught last week and which at first was not regarded as being of a serious nature, is confirmed. Mr. Parnell grew worse and very soon a physician was called and the patient ordered to take to his bed. This was on Friday last, and from that time Mr. Parnell lost strength and finally succumbed.
The exact nature of the disease which caused death is not known. From the day he took to his bed, however, the state of Mr. Parnell's health was such as to necessitate the constant attendance of two physicians, but in spite of their incessant and untiring efforts to prolong or save his life, Mr. Parnell gradually sank lower and lower until he expired in the arms of Mrs. Parnell, who is utterly prostrated by the shock experienced through her husband's death.

In this city particularly the news of Parnell's death CAME DOWN LIKE A THUNDERBOLT.
upon the clubs and in political circles. Nobody, so far as at first known, was even aware that he was indisposed, and consequently, when it became known that the Irish leader was dead, naturally, the first idea was that he had committed suicide. As the day wore on, however, it leaked out from statements of his intimate friends that Parnell had complained to them recently of not feeling as well as usual, but it was not thought by anybody that there was anything serious in the symptoms referred to by the late member for Cork city, though he was thinner than he was last year.
While Parnell was speaking at Creggs on Sept. 27th, it was noticed that he was very pale, and that in other respects he was not the same man he had been in the past.
In addition Parnell carried his LEFT ARM IN A SLING.

His friends, upon asking the cause of this, were informed that he was suffering from rheumatism.
Telegrams received here from Dublin and other towns in Ireland, and the principal towns of England, unite in reporting that the death of Parnell has caused the greatest sensation among his supporters, principally on account of the sudden manner in which he died. In Dublin the late Irish leader's supporters are in a state of consternation. A meeting of these friends of Parnell was hastily called as soon as the news of his death became known, and at this meeting which was only a preliminary gathering, it was decided that a meeting of Parnell's followers in that city should be called for this evening. The object is to consider what steps to take in the face of what may be termed a most disastrous event for their party.
The sensation caused by the announcement of the death of Parnell was undoubtedly increased by the general belief that he had committed suicide. This was believed by many in London by whom the suicides of Balgroun, Boulanger and Parnell. This impression kept up some time until details showed that death had resulted from natural causes.

GOT THREE MONTHS.—This morning a man calling himself John Williams belonging to Nova Scotia, was arraigned before R. R. Fitzgerald and H. V. Palmer, J. P.'s, for stealing $2 from the house of Henry Chowan, Esq., Malpeque Road. The evidence showed that Williams visited Mr. Chowan's house on Saturday evening and asked that he be allowed to remain over night, as he was tired. Mr. Chowan acceded to the request, and gave him one of the best rooms in the house, and his breakfast next morning. After Williams' departure it was discovered that the money in question was missing. The theft was saddled upon Williams, and the magistrate gave him three months with hard labor. Williams is engaged in the watch and jewelry peddling business, and is said to be a partner of Davison's, who escaped from the jail at Amherst.
