These people are said to be all Italians, speaking only their own language, and observing foreign customs. It is a rather startling statement, and it is likely to attract fresh attention to the great rush of Italian immigration to the United States of late.

The House devoted this afternoon to the discussion of the Northwest bill reported from the Senate, and of which Hon. Mr. Dewdney moved the second reading. The bill was read a second time, and the House went into committee upon it. Messrs. Charlton, Mills, Blake, O'Brien, and others object to the new name of the western territories of Canada proposed for the Northwest, and this clause was allowed to stand. Sir John Macdonald said the Government could not at this late period of the session debate the whole constitution, and if the discussion was to be continued in this fashion, the Government would have to withdraw the clauses debated, or perhaps withdraw the whole bill for the session. The Committee shortly afterwards rose and reported progress. After recess the bill founded on the tariff resolutions was considered in committee, and several changes were made, mostly of minor importance. Among those worthy of note was the substitution of a duty of two cents per pound for the old duty of 30 per cent ad valorem on live hogs. The mess pork duty of a cent and a half a pound is interpreted to include all pork made from hogs more than 500 pounds in weight cut from the sides after the hams and shoulders have been cut off and requiring not more than sixteen pieces to the barrel. This will admit clear pork made from larger hogs than those raised in Canada. After further discussion the bill was adopted in Committee and the House adjourned at 10.55 p. m. FIRE IN MONTREAL. GREAT LOSS OF LIFE. MONTREAL, May 6. The greatest conflagration that has ever taken place in any one locality on the Island of Montreal occurred to-day at Longue Point, six miles from Montreal, where St. Jean de Dieu Lunatic Asylum, containing 1300 patients, in charge of 70 Providence sisters, was burned to the ground. All the men were saved, but from the closest calculations somewhere near 35 or 40 women perished in the flames. The building cost, with the ground, a million dollars. The fire started apparently in a cupboard in the top of the centre building. Drs. Bourque and Becalet worked like heroes trying to save the unfortunates inside, and the nuns helped them bravely, but like dumb cattle the poor demented creatures rushed towards the flames, which seemed to have a terrible fascination for them. In half an hour all chance for saving those who were upstairs in the middle portion was gone. Most of the men were gotten out, but a number of the women, especially in the violent wards, had to be left to their fate, and an eye witness from the beginning says their cries were heartrending and made one's hair rise. It is said with such fury did the fire rage that even at the beginning nothing could be done to save the building. The building was insured for $300,000. The Bonavista's Heavy Passage. Two masked men entered the back door of the institution, bound the night watchman and made him lead them to the safe, but not being able to open it, they went to Mr. and Mrs. Large's room. While feeling around for the keys, they awakened Mrs. Large, who asked "What is it?" They replied, "We have business." She then made a blow at Mrs. Large. She raised her right hand, when two of her fingers were broken and badly cut and her face bruised. Instantly Mr. Large jumped out of bed and the robbers ran into the hall, where they turned on Mr. Large, who was unarmed. They cut him down with knives and wounded him in thirteen places. The noise awakened the Misses Hart, who went into the hall and saw Mrs. Large bending over the dead body of her husband. They picked him up and carried him into the room. It was three o'clock before a doctor could be secured. He amputated two of Mrs. Large's fingers and sewed up her wounds. DIED.
