Ray's Recruit

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING, U. S. A.
AUTHOR OF "THE DOG'S DAUGHTER," "FROM THE BANKS," ETC.

Out on the low bank across the narrow stream he could see, outlined against the sky, two dark, shadowy figures go scurrying swiftly by, running from the direction of the old magazine. It stood only a few yards beyond the crest. Again he set up his powerful shout, "Corporal of the guard, No. 6!" and away off to the northeast, although farther than himself from the guard-house, Duffy on No. 5 at the east gate, sure that something was dreadfully amiss, was repeating the cry. Hardly knowing what he should do if he overtook them, Hunter dashed into the shallow stream, in hopes of reaching the opposite bank and overhauling the marauders, but the broken, slippery ice trapped and threw him again. Down he went splash into the chilling waters; up he scrambled, only to slip and go down a second time; then staggered to his feet, breathless, almost exhausted now; tumbled up the opposite bank; clambered on all fours to the crest; gazed hurriedly about in search of friend or foe; peered into the darkness to the south and southwest, but the runners had disappeared; then gazed to the east and sprang to his feet, startled. Not 20 yards away loomed the black bulk of the old brick magazine, and hissing and sputtering, a fiery serpent seemed dancing in front. It bounded to the doorway, now in the ruddy light dimly seen to be open, disappeared within a little cloud of sulphur smoke, and then the heavens lit up with an awful glare. He felt himself hurled violently backward. For one instant he seemed to see a million stars crossing through the skies. His ears were stunned and deafened by a thunderous roar. The air was filled with flying bricks and beams and sheets of flame that scorched and seared and blinded him. Then something crashed upon his skull, and he toppled over the bank and went plunging down to the icy flood beneath.

disposed of and a brief sermon read from the collection of some famous di-

"Among these lay Trooper Hunter," vine the barrack squad and Sudstow people would retire, and she could then devote another hour to lighter reading for the benefit of her patients exclusively, some of whom were still in the ward with the graver cases.

And among these latter, with bandaged eyes and burned and blistered face and hands, an unrecognizable bundle of bandages lay Trooper Hunter, over whose head, unseen, unknown, there was hanging a sword.

For some days and nights concussion of the brain was feared. The magazine had been blown into a thousand fragments, and how many of these, beams or bricks, had felled him, no one ever knew. He was hauled out of the stream, feet first, like poor Pat Shea, bleeding, burned and senseless. He began to mend in a few days, however, and by the 8th of December he was occasionally sitting up in an invalid chair, his eyes and cheeks still under cover. But from the time his convalescence began Trooper Hunter had spent two hours each morning listening to the voice of the pharmacist who charmed so wisely, and there came a day when she bent over his couch and laid her cool soft white hand on his forehead and asked him if there were nothing she could do, no friends or relatives to whom he would like her to write, and he murmured that he couldn't think of any just then, but might if she'd come again to ask him on the morrow. She came, and on the next and the next day, too, marveling not a little at the voice, the intelligence, the language of this particular patient. She strove to study his features, but without success, for when the doctor thought to remove the bandages the patient declared the morning light was altogether too much for his weakened eyes. He would be bandaged in the morning, though the afternoon sunshine was really more brilliant, and he didn't seem to mind it then. Miss Leroy took to sitting by Hunter's bedside as much as 10 minutes at first; then the 10 began to lengthen to 15 and even 20, and other patients waxed impatient and said things about Hunter and thought things about her that proved how jealous is the human heart, even when it beats beneath a flannel shirt. The surgeon said Hunter could soon return to his troop, as far as his health was concerned, but there were reasons to fear his health might suffer after he got there, for Major Mainwaring, now in temporary command of the post, was making frequent and impetuous inquiries. Colonel and Mrs. Atherton had gone east on two months' leave; Major and Mrs. Stannard had gone to Russell for a fortnight to visit old friends in another regiment, and here, to his huge delight, was Mainwaring in command of an eight company post. Then the surgeon asked why Mainwaring was so anxious to have the patient out, and learned something that proved a painful shock.

"Well, major," said he after a solemn silence, "of course you're commanding officer, but I find it mighty hard to believe that story, and I protest against its being made known to him until he is strong enough to bear it, which he isn't now."
There had been much talk at the hospital among the stewards and attendants and patients who could talk at all as to the result of the board of survey promptly convened at Colonel Atherton's request to ascertain the cause of the mysterious explosion which had wrecked the magazine and ruined its contents, and it did not take long for such keen scouts and trailers as Ray, Blake and old Wilkins to make up their minds. Coupled with what had occurred at the south gate that night, just a little while before the explosion, there was no doubt that an extensive robbery had taken place and that the object of the destruction of the magazine was the obliteration with it of evidences of the crime.
It seemed that shortly before 11:30 that night two veteran sergeants of Truscott's troop returning from Butte on pass became aware of a watch driving ahead of them as they left town at soon disappearing out on the prairie east of the road. Now, there was not ranch or house to which it could have gone. Everything of that kind lay farther down the stream, where it swel-

In bold curve, first to the south, the eastward again. Rumors of forage stealing they had heard, and therefore decided to find where the wagon went, but after searching awhile in the gale and the darkness they gave it up, yet warned the sergeant of the guard as the alighted at the south gate, and the hack driver returned with his rig to town.

Captain Blake was notified, and a patrol was ordered out to scour the right bank of the little stream that flowed back of the stables. They hadn't gone 50 yards before they stirred up a squad of troopers that scattered at their approach, but one was captured—Ray's rascalion of a trumpeter, the Kid—and the Kid refused flatly and characteristically to say who the others were. A privileged character was the Kid. He had been ten years or more in the regiment and ten dozen times in scrapes. A better little soldier on campaign or a worse one in garrison couldn't be found in all the —th, and as the regiment had spent more of those ten years in the field than in the fort the Kid had still a small balance to his credit. He had a medal of honor from congress for heroism in fierce, savage battle and a record for deviltry of every conceivable kind. Ray was the only man, except Atherton, he either feared or loved. Grinning from ear to ear, he told Blake that there wasn't any officer in the regiment smart enough to scare him into giving away a fellow soldier, and Blake sent for Ray. Something told him there was mischief afoot, and Ray and the explosion came almost together.

Painful, Fatal Kidney Disease

One of the most common symptoms of kidney disease is the smarting, scalding sensation when passing water, which is likely to come very frequently and at inconvenient times. Then there is the dull, heavy aching in the small of the back and down the limbs. When these pains are accompanied by deposits in the urine after it has stood for twenty-four hours, you may be sure that you are a victim of kidney disease, and should not lose a single day in securing the world's greatest kidney cure—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Don't imagine that you are experimenting when you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are almost as well known as his great Recipe Book, have made some of the most surprising cures of kidney disease on record, and have come to be considered the only absolute cure for kidney disease. Ask your neighbors about them. Nearly everybody can tell of some remarkable cure by their use. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box, at all dealers', or Edman-son, Bates & Co., Toronto.
