Sudden Death Of Mrs. Isobel Dingwell

The death occurred suddenly on Sunday at her home, 86 Edward Street of Mrs. Isobel Dingwell, widow of the late Ralph Dingwell of this City and Morell. She was 59 years old.

Born in Souris, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Leslie. For most of her married life she lived in Charlottetown where her husband was associated with the firm of DeBlois Bros. In 1933 Mr. Dingwell went into business at Morell and a few years later Mrs. Dingwell and family moved to that village. After Mr. Dingwell's death in 1944 she returned to Charlottetown where she has since resided.

Surviving members of her family are Thelma, Mrs. E. D. Reid, Central Royalty; Waldo, student at Ontario Veterinary College, Hope, employed at the Postmaster's office, City; Helen (Mrs. Ross Gardner) Halifax; Athol, Bangor P.E.I.; Bonnie (Mrs. James MacEachern), West Royalty; Davida (Mrs. Robert Hurry Jr.), City; and Harris and John, City. Also surviving are three sisters and four brothers. They are Miss Mary Leslie, R.N., Alberton; Anne (Mrs Claude MacEwen), Alberton; Elspeth (Mrs. Gerald Ryan), Bronte Ontario; Percy and Joseph in Calgary; James and Andrew in Toronto. Two brothers, Howard and John predeceased her.

The funeral will be held Wednesday with a short service at her late residence at 1.00 p.m., followed by service at Marie United Church at 3.00 p.m. Burial will be in Midgell Cemetery.

Restored Life After Heart Stoppage

Dr. J. A. Ritchie

Newmarket, Ont. — Brought back to life after being "dead" for a few minutes last Monday, Annie Foster, nine, of nearby Queensville remained in a critical condition in Newmarket Hospital.

Miss Lillian Thomas, Superintendent at the Hospital, stated the little girl's heart stopped beating while anesthetic was being administered. She was about to be operated on to remove a cyst from her wrist.

Dr. J. A. Ritchie, of Newmarket, who was to have performed the "minor operation", immediately operated to reach the girl's heart, said Miss Thomas. After he had massaged it for a few minutes, the heart resumed pumping, she said.

"The girl has been in a coma since then", she said "she has been given blood and oxygen, but her condition is quite critical."

Miss Thomas has asked hospital doctors to investigate the cause of the stoppage, she stated. "So far, we don't know what could have caused her heart to stop", she said. "I don't think it was fear of the operation.

Dr. Ritchie said a statement explaining the incident will be made public later.

(Dr. Ritchie is a son of Mr and Mrs. G. E. Ritchie, 153 Prince Street, Charlottetown.)

Special Meeting Benevolent Irish Society Held

The members of the Benevolent Irish Society had as their guest last night the Hon. Sean A. Murphy, ambassador of Ireland in Canada. His Excellency, who delivered the address to the graduates of St. Dunstan's earlier in the day, was introduced to the members by Mr. J. Pius Callaghan, a former treasurer of the B.I.S.

Following introductory remarks, president Thomas McAvinn delivered a short address of welcome in behalf of the Society.

He said:

"This evening the Benevolent Irish Society of Charlottetown is indeed honoured by the presence of Erin's representative to our fair Dominion of Canada. For us it is an occasion which we will always cherish — an occasion which has become a reality much sooner than we had ever hoped for. Indeed such an occasion is unique in the annals of our Society's history.

"Your wide experience has unquestionably fitted you for the very important position you now occupy. Your scholastic attainments have indeed been deserving of the high recognition they have received. Here in Charlottetown, Your Excellency, as in all other parts of Canada, you will find many descendants of those who sprang from the "Ould Sod". Their patriotism to their beloved Canada does not deter them from manifesting a great love for the Land of Saints and Scholars and the very noble principle that has been synonymous with the Emerald Isle The rich traditions, that are Ireland's, are treasured by everyone who traces ancestry to the Land of the Shamrock. Her great lore is something that no other country can equal.

"Your visit, Your Excellency, to our Society, will serve to make us more proud of our Irish ancestry and will instill in all of us a determination always to do honour to the Irish race.

"May Divine Providence guide you in all your deliberations. That is the wish of the Benevolent Irish Society of Charlottetown."

At the conclusion of the address, His Excellency spoke briefly. He outlined the course of Irish history to the present day and urged all Canadians, not only the Irish, to visit the "Land of the Shamrock" on their vacation this year.

The president, Thomas McAvinn, following the conclusion of His Excellency's remarks, introduced Bro. Wilfred Smith, who directed a short program. The meeting then closed.

REPORTS CONFIRMED

The return of Genevieve finally bore out Communist reports current for several days that she was to be released. A Vietminh spokesman at the Geneva conference announced last Wednesday that she was to be freed that day, but some hitch developed.

In Paris Genevieve's mother, Mrs. Roger de Galard Terraube, wept when the news came from Geneva, saying "That is wonderful."

The nurse accompanied a group of reinforcements sent into Dien Bien Phu by air March 27 and was caught there when Vietminh advances and shelling deprived the French forces of the use of their airport.

Molotov Proposes

of the five-week Far East conference—as encouraging. The powers will meet again today.

Less encouraging was the outlook for future 19-country Korean negotiations. American delegates spent the day trying to persuade non-Communist nations to support a proposal to break off the talks unless the Communists agree to United Nations supervision of all-Korean elections.

Conference sources said the French Indo-China plan does not remove the main obstacle to a cease-fire since it continues to treat Viet Nam—largest of the three states and the main battle field—on a different basis from Laos and Cambodia.

The Communists want Indo-China considered as a whole, while the French say all that is needed in Laos and Cambodia is withdrawal of Vietminh rebel troops invading from Viet Nam.

The five principles suggested by Molotov, and considered in the new French plan, call for a cease-fire, zonal regrouping of forces, prevention of reinforcement, armistice control and international guarantees against any violation.

BASED ON COMPROMISE

The new French plan embraces the five principles and puts forward suggestions for implementing them based on a compromise between the original French and Vietminh proposals offered earlier in the conference.

Conference sources said Bidault's new plan included sections on the disarming of irregular forces and the release of prisoners of war.

Powers attending the Indo-China talks are Britain, the United States, Russia, France, Communist China, the three Indo-Chinese states and the Vietminh regime.

American sources said the U.S. view on the Korean part of the Far East conference is that the talks are hopelessly deadlocked and the Communists should be challenged on the direct issue of accepting UN supervision of the all-Korean elections.

RESIST PROPOSAL

The Communists have rejected the UN as an overseer in Korea on the ground it was a belligerent in the Korean War. They want neutral supervision.

Conference sources said the American move to call off the talks unless the Communist accept the United Nations as electoral overseer met with resistance from a number of other non-Communist delegations, who considered it ill-advised.

The American "strategy for folding the talks" — as delegates frankly describe it—is likely to be launched officially by Gen. Walter Bedell Smith at the 12th full session of the Korean talks, arranged for Wednesday.

Graduates Warned of the last century. As the firs step Cardinal Cullen, Archbishop of Dublin, invited Father Newman in 1954 to give a series of lectures.

That priest then became the first rector of the Catholic university in Dublin. Mr. Murphy told the gathering that although he did not remain long he left a mark for which universatarians the world over were grateful, his book "The Idea of A University."

The speaker also told of the great contributions to education and culture made by the Irish in the early and middle ages and how the burden of keeping European civilization and propagating the Christian faith was borne by Irish monks who went to every part of the then known world.

On the subject of St. Dunstan's he said, "We are celebrating today 100 years of achievement. During that period the road was not always smooth and there were times when it looked as if the journey would have to be abandoned, but due to the energy, determination and enthusiasm of Bishop MacIntyre and his colleagues, the difficulties were overcome."

A Rare Distinction

In dealing with the achievements of the College, Ambassador Murphy told the class "It is a rare distinction for any college to be able to number amongst its graduates a prince of the church and numerous members of the hierarchy of Canada. Again we Irish are proud that amongst these distinguished sons of St. Dunstan's College are many bearing Irish names."

Speaking directly to the graduating class he was sure they had been reminded that in life there is a scale of values that must be respected if one is to fulfill one's destiny in time and eternity. "You have learned that the love of God and country should be a vital force in the life of every Christian man and woman".

The Ambassador continued, "You are thus starting the new phase of your life fortified with the splendid code which, in simple language, amounts to this:—That in your dealings with your fellowmen you should be honest and fair; that you should be conscientious and reliable; that you should be charitable, and respect properly constituted authority and be ready as you say in this country, to give the other fellow a fair break; in a word, that you should be good Christians."

A Great Advantage

He told the graduates they should never forget the enormous advantage to them of having such a code and they should never forget the loyalties that they owe to their country and their Alma Mater. He said they were going into the world market to offer their professional and academic qualifications with the splendid trademark "produced in Canada at St Dunstan's College". But he reminded them that the description carried with it great responsibilities.

"Apart from the discharge o your professional or other duties you will have to play your part in discharging your obligations as citizens of this great country." H added, "You, and your fellow graduates from other Canadian universities, will be looked to as the leaders of Canada in the future, and it will be your responsibility to leave to those who follow you a condition of affairs which is as free and democratic as those you enjoy today."

Mr. Murphy told them they could not all expect to be Members of Parliament or civic administrators, but they could play their part in seeing that their locality and country were properly administered and run in such a way as to ensure that the Christian way of life is respected. He told them to take an active interest in the social and economic development of the country and its relationships with other countries.

"If we are to succeed in stopping the spread of Communism in the Western world and of preventing it from engulfing the Eastern world, we must be able to show to the world at large, and particularly to the less favored areas of the world, that the Christian way of life has something bigger and better than Communism has to offer."

In closing Ambassador Murphy offered his sincere congratulations to the graduates and his best wishes for their future success and expressed the hope that when St Dunstan's next Centenary comes around "that there will be some Irish left to assist at the celebrations."

Would Tighten Up On Handing Yanks Authority

OTTAWA, (CP)—The Canadian government should stop handing blanket authority to the United States in this country, Howard Green (PC—Vancouver Quadra) said Monday in the Commons.

Mr. Green was speaking on a government bill aimed particularly at empowering the cabinet to allow Americans to operate U. S. government radio stations in Canada.

This authority now is granted in the Emergency Powers Act, which expires May 31 .

Under the Federal Radio Act—which Monday's bill would amend —only British subjects may operate radio stations in Canada. The government has had the power of making certain exceptions, and the new legislation would widen these to include operators of stations owned by the government of another country.

"HAND OVER KEYS"

Speaking as the amending bill came up for second reading, Transport Minister Chevrier said it will apply particularly to operators of U. S. radar and loran air navigation stations.

It also would widen exemptions to include foreign aircraft radio operators and immigrants who have not yet become Canadians who operate taxis and other vehicles using radio.

Mr. Green said the government is proposing to "hand over some Canadians keys to the U.S."

"It is time," he said, "that the government stopped bending over blanket authority to the U.S., which in effect is what is being done in this bill."

Any such rights should be reciprocal. If Canada did not have similar rights in the U.S., the government should try to get them.

OTHER BUSINESS

The Radio Act amendment was discussed as the House, holding its regular sitting on the Queen's birthday holiday, dealt with miscellaneous legislation.

It gave second reading-approval in principle—to a government measure setting up provisions for compensating federal civil servants for inventions developed on the government's time, which normally became the property of the government.

State Secretary Pickersgill said procedure will be worked out by a government committee.

The House approval a resolution —and later gave first reading to a bill—for having government employees carry their pension rights with them when they transfer to Crown agencies.

CCF members said the same provision should be extended to persons in private industry moving from one job to another.

Rector's Report At Commencement Exercises Reviews Active S. D. U. Year

The following report of Rt. Rev. R. V. MacKenzie, Rector of St. Dunstan's University, was presented yesterday at the annual commencement exercises. Due to illness of the Rector, the report was read by Rev. Father Sullivan.

RECTOR'S REPORT

Today, as we assemble for the one hundredth time to observe the simple exercises which mark the close of our academic year, the fact of having reached such a milestone dominates our minds to the exclusion of ideas which might be more pregnant of academic interest. The fact of survival for 100 years may involve somewhat of a miracle; it could not be attained, however, without at least some progress. And although that progress and advancement may not be so conspicuous as in the case of many institutions of similar age, we console ourselves, probably a bit complacently, in the fact that our geographic, economic, and above all our financial conditions did not contribute to the maximum of progress.

We could here be introspective and dwell upon the changes and events that have marked the life of St. Dunstan's in the past century. In broad outline, however, they have been stressed at other times. It would be interesting, had we time here, to place the history of the College against the background of the age—the political, economic, social, scientific, and educational development of that hundred years. Canada has advanced from a group of disjointed colonies to the status of a nation of considerable importance in world affairs today. Her development has evolved in the spirit of democratic freedom which we believe can be favorably compared to that existing anywhere in the world. Some dark spots shade the panorama, but they lose significance in the brilliance of glorious light which generally characterizes the century's political growth.

Epic Development

The story of economic development in that century approaches epic proportions from the scattered fur trading and wooden ship-
