Let's Talk It Over

by "d"

This alternative voting system used at present in British Columbia is going to be hard on the politician who likes to reward voters (in advance) with a five spot or a quart of spirits. Candidates will have to go round buying second hand mortgages on voters, too, for in British Columbia the second choice are not infrequently deciding the elections.

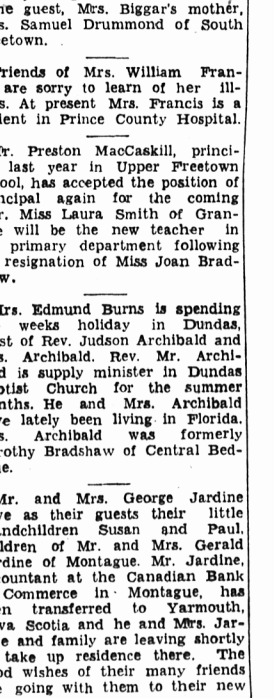

It is encouraging to see that the Summerside Y's Men are going to continue their swimming classes this summer. Their bathing house and facilities on the Government Wharf cannot be utilized this year as the wharf is to undergo major renovation, but the Y's Men are not using this as an excuse to sit back and forget about helping the youth of the town. Like the king's son in the poem, who picked up the craven's broken sword and led his followers to victory, the Y's Men are going to do the best they can with the facilities available. Teaching Summerside children to swim may save lives in the future.

For much the same reason that a first-rate plumber might not make a good carpenter, there is no guarantee that a good soldier will make a good statesman. Eisenhower was an unequalled success as a leader of armies. He might not be such a success as a president. For one reason absolute rule, autocracy is a necessity in the military services. It is a vice in civilian affairs. Democratic principles could not be tolerated in carrying out the affairs of an army, navy, or airforce. The leader of such a body must be a despot. The Duke of Wellington, one of England's greatest heroes, the man who successfully opposed the Napoleonic threat of world domination, was not a striking success as a prime minister. It is said he was opposed to reforms which later were established for the benefit of England's people.

SOUTHERND, England — (CP) — One of the latest entries in the lost property book at the police station here was a swarm of bees. A bee-keeper of nearby Thorpe Bay reported 30,000 bees missing from three hives.
