Trade Increase With U.S. Noted

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, April 27.—During March, third month since the Canada-United States trade agreement became operative, business with that country disclosed a marked gain, with a particular increase in treaty products. Total exports to United States in March were valued at $27,809,629, as compared with $22,735,515 in March, 1935, according to figures made public today by revenue minister Isley.

Imports from United States in March amounted to $32,907,000 as compared with $31,332,000 in March 1935.

Following are details of the imports for March last, with figures for the same groups of commodities for March 1935 in brackets:

RECOVERY IN FRANCE NOTED

Economic Improvement Is Reported.

(By George Hambleton) (Canadian Press Staff Writer) (C.P. Cable by Guardian's Special Wire)

PARIS, April 20.—After prodigious efforts France is lifting herself from the economic mire. Unemployment is down. Business returns are improving. Farm prices are higher. Figures issued by Marcel Regnier, Minister of Finance, show that in March, for the first time in five years, receipts from taxes exceed estimates by 35,000,000 francs. The yield from indirect taxes in March 1935—an increase large enough not only to offset the deficit of the two preceding months but to leave a favorable margin of 8,000,000 francs. From these figures, Mr. Regnier draws the conclusion that equilibrium in the ordinary budget for 1936 is solidly established.

Thus France goes to the polls. That, first prize won by Mrs. George Ramsay; consolation, Mrs. Charles Lockhart. A delectable lunch was served by entertainment Committee.—N.

LOSSES FROM CATTLE'S HORNS

Tanners state and show positive proof that thousands of hides from Canadian cattle are received each year showing scores from horns. These injuries are received in the process of being moved from farm or ranch to the knocking pens at abattoirs or to country butchers. It is not uncommon for hides to be so damaged that the whole fact of the section of the leather in the best part of the hide must be split off by the tanner in order to remove the damaged part. The surface thus removed will show long slits as if it had been torn with big pike. Sometimes the damage is not so serious but all such scores deteriorate the value of the hide.

Meat packers have repeatedly stated and shown proof just as positive that bruises by horns on cattle marketed are responsible for the most serious losses by mechanical means in beef. Horn bruises are deep and result in blood clotting deep in the flesh. Small horns on young cattle make a deep prod as well as long scores that are often as bad as the injuries from large horns.

How many farmers have ever associated the low price of Canadian hides with damage from the horns they leave on their cattle? Yet tanners actually import hides from many other countries because they are comparatively clear of the injuries, scores and scars of which horn damage is a very important part.

How many farmers consider that the loss from horn bruises in beef is their loss? Yet it must be so because a piece of meat that has to be cut out or a bruise of clotted blood in an otherwise valuable cut which seriously deteriorates its value cannot be paid for. As there generally is no way of knowing which cattle are bruised until the beef is on the rail, the loss must necessarily be averaged back over the whole cattle kill. The producer inevitably gets less for his cattle because of his own or some other producer's neglect.

Hides should average not less than ten to twelve percent of the value of the live animal. Due to damage from horns, barbed wire, horn bushes, sharp pointed objects, nails and spikes and worst of all grubs (warbles) the value of the hide does not on the average constitute more than five to eight percent. The loss from horn damage may run from twenty-five cents to a dollar per hide.

Recent counts of horns on market cattle indicate that, young and old, (not including calves) horns are present on fifty percent of the kill. About a million cattle are consumed annually. So the loss from horn damage in hides alone may run to a quarter of a million dollars annually.

One packing firm in Toronto conservatively figures the loss in bruised beef in its plants to be $1,000,000 per week. The loss on a million cattle may be half a million dollars annually. Horns are a very important factor in these losses.

Export markets do not want horned cattle. Any market will, of course, take them at a price. Export to British markets or for feeders to go to the feed lots or

BODY IDENTIFIED

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) CALGARY, April 20.—The body of a man chopped out of the ice of the Bow River Sunday was identified today as that of Bernard T. Nichols of Amherst, N.S. A friend made the identification positive at the morgue here today.

Little Chance Of Escaping Gallows

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) TORONTO, April 20.—One lone avenue of possible escape from the gallows lay ahead of Harry O'Donnell tonight, 15 days from the date set for his execution for the ravine murder of Ruth Taylor here nearly six months ago.

Unanimous refusal of the Ontario Court of Appeals to grant him a new trial today left the slender young filling station employee with only the hope of executive clemency standing between himself and the noose on May 5. Had there been one dissenter in the court's verdict, he would have been able to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

But there was none. Sir William Mulock, 92-year-old chief justice, found the appeal must be dismissed, and three of his conferees came to the same decision in separate opinions. A fifth—Mr. Justice F. R. Latchford, chief justice in appeal—concurred in that of Mr. Justice C. A. Masten, one of the three.

In 16 words, the aged chief justice announced the court's finding to a tense and crowded courtroom. "Rex vs. O'Donnell," he said slowly. "This is an appeal from a conviction for murder, and it is dismissed." O'Donnell, convicted in February of killing the 20-year-old stenographer after attempting to ravish her, was not in court to hear the words that cut his chances for life down to the possibility of a reprieve from Canada's minister of justice. His counsel, Frank Regan, K. C., sat in a front row, though, and immediately after court announced he would appeal for clemency.

pastures in United States, hornless cattle are much preferred. It is a curious fact that during the past four or five years when comparatively few cattle have been exported, there appears to be a marked tendency to an increase in horned cattle coming to the market. Every producer should see to it that his herd of cattle is hornless. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are involved in this one item of animal husbandry.

ETHIOPIANS DISPLAY STOUT RESISTANCE

ITALIAN GENERAL HEADQUARTERS ON THE SOUTHERN ETHIOPIAN FRONT, April 20.—(By airmail to the Coast)—The menacing Ethiopian army of Ras Nassebu still blocked the path of General Rudolfo Graziani's troops today after the bloodiest battle yet fought on the Somaliland front. Flame throwers and airplanes played a prominent part in the Italian success.

Italian reports indicated about 2,000 Ethiopians fell in the engagement, while the Italians lost about 700 Arab troops as well as 13 white officers, all from the famous Libyan division.

The Ethiopians fought from natural grottoes, using machine guns, modern mounted anti-aircraft pieces and other artillery weapons. They were commanded by Abebe Demtu, brother of Ras Desta Demtu, who was beaten previously in a battle at Neghelli.

The Libyans found themselves in hand-to-hand fighting with an enemy worthy of their praise. The Ethiopians literally passed under the sword without faltering.

Among the few prisoners taken was a woman tied to a machine gun which continued to fire until the very end.

Of 24 airplanes participating in the action on April 16 and 17, none escaped completely from the bullets of Ethiopian riflemen and machine gunners. Some were hit as many as 27 times. Three aviation officials were wounded, and two planes were forced down, but landed behind the Italian lines. All the planes flew very low, firing machine guns at the Ethiopians.

Wants to Pipe as King Coronated

Pipe Major James Douglas, of the first battalion, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who resides in Ottawa, hopes to establish something of a record as a piper when King Edward VIII is crowned next year.

Already Major Douglas has piped in public on the occasion of the coronation of two English kings and he is hoping that when the coronation of King Edward VIII is held that he will again play a humble part in the celebration of that Empire-wide event. On the occasion of the coronation of King Edward VII in 1902, at the close of the South African war, Major Douglas piped at Johannesburg. In 1910 Major Douglas was in Malta, serving, and here again while King George V was being crowned in London he contributed to the celebration with bagpipes. And now he hopes to do it in Canada.

Major Douglas served during the South African war and was wounded at Magersfontein. He saw service during the Great War in France, Greece, Serbia and Bulgaria. At Salonica, during the Great War the regiment was cited by the French G O C and the ribbon of the Croix de Guerre awarded, and placed on the bagpipes of Major Douglas and have been there since.

TEA "is good tea"

— and is its own best recommendation

Charm Begins At Home

There is no place so appropriate for exercising and displaying charm as your own home. Until you have learned to be a gracious, successful hostess and mistress at home, you have not mastered the art of being really alluring. An easy, delightful hospitality is, I believe, charm's greatest achievement.

Not every person can, of course, dispense hospitality with elaborate style. What we can do, however is to display graciousness and consideration for our guests, with cordial sincerity and true hospitality no matter how simple the entertainment may be or how humble our surroundings.

You know large, elaborate parties don't necessarily mean perfect hospitality. A cup of tea with a single friend can be truly hospitable occasion. Small parties, as informal as possible appeal more strongly to many, because the informality lends itself to more individual contact and better enjoyment. They are, I have found, more generally successful.

We have known people of real talent in some other direction who actually dreaded having anyone but their nearest relatives and friends visit them, not because they might find gigantic burrs on the upholstery furniture the next morning, but because they mistrusted their own power and skill as hostess.

Giving a successful party or simply being hostess to a few friends is a simple matter if the few really rudimentary rules of hospitality are observed.

What makes a successful party? The answer is simply the persons who are there—the host and hostess and the guests. So bring together men and women of kindred interests and you have the first essentials of a highly successful party.

Never invite too many of one party. Restrict the guests list to persons who have interests in common or who, if they have a feud with some other guests, can drop their quarrel at the front door and leave it there for the duration of your party. If they are incapable of such civility, don't bring them together. Above all, choose your guest list for congeniality.

Congeniality, however, does not always mean similarity in professional or business interests, or even in mode of life. Society dowagers are sometimes more at home with Bohemians of the art world than with some of their own social set.

Then, and this is just as important as the guest list, keep the atmosphere informal, the refreshments plain but good, distinctive and plentiful.

Real charm begins at home and this goes for both the married and single or our community. And certainly, whether you are a great actress or plain Mrs. Suburban, your husband has as much right to expect you to be charming for his benefit as for the benefit of your friends.

Just because the first blush of wedded bliss is past and you are thoroughly familiar with the general trend of one another's thoughts and reactions is no reason for you to be bored. Exert yourself to be charming to your husband and the other members of your own family. Discuss that new book you've been reading or a concert, or lecture you've heard over the radio, or even the crime news in your daily newspaper. Learn to draw out your family on their interests and activities. Be as sympathetic and interested as you are with other people.

In no place, not even on the stage of a great opera house, will charm yield such big returns in increased happiness and delight in living as in your own home.

MAY SUBSIDIZE

Labor Minister promised, to see employment continues as long as possible for the men. There would be cooperation with employment agencies and an extension of the farm placement scheme which only affected Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in the past.

At one point Premier King entered the discussion to say the government's one policy was to see that men were given a chance to earn an honest living. If they refused, the obligation of the state was ended but in his opinion "every man with true manhood in him will prefer work to relief."

Answering questions from A. A. Heaps (Lab., Winnipeg North) about several thousand single unemployed men in Winnipeg, Mr. Rogers said there was a demand for farm labor in western Canada.

Mr. Heaps said the demand was not equal to the supply and he was sure those unemployed would be glad to go to farms to work if conditions were at all satisfactory.

Bonusing of farmers to keep single men on farms was urged by Harry Leader (Lib., Portage La Prairie).

Objection to men being laid off the Canadian National Railway shops at Truro, Man., was voiced by Dr. J. P. Howden (Lib., St. Boniface). He said that it would be better for the government to see that regular railway employees were kept at work than to make pieces for men now in relief camps.

Prime Minister King said the government had nothing to do with the railway shops and Dr. Howden replied the Canadian National Railway was a government-owned system and the men being thrown out of work felt the government could do something for them.

As the bill was drafted no agreement by the Dominion to assist provinces or corporations in providing employment could be made after parliament was prorogued, said G. C. McGeer, (Lib., Vancouver-Burrard). This meant the government would have no power to meet an emergency which might arise early next winter.

Parliament was tying the government's hand, said Mr. McGeer, and giving it a good excuse for doing nothing.

"Blank Cheque"

Mr. McGeer said a "blank cheque" might not be desirable but the government should have power to meet situations as they would arise.

Hon. H. H. Stevens (Recon., Kootenay East) said the government's hands would be tied this year if Parliament must consider all relief agreements. He believed the government should have power to act on its own initiative this year.

Mr. Woodsworth urged the government distribute free transportation to relief recipients who obtained jobs at a distance.

The government should be empowered to make loans and grants direct to municipalities, said T. L. Church (Cons., Toronto-Broadview). It is proposed to enter agreements with and make grants to provinces, private corporations and even individuals to assist in providing employment and relief. It ignored the municipalities which were bearing the brunt of the crisis.
