Slight Fire At Montague Cold Storage Plant

The Montague Fire Department was called out yesterday at 1 p.m. to extinguish a slight blaze which occurred at the plant of the Montague Cold Storage Ltd. The fire was caused by a short circuit on the blower of an oil furnace, and in a few moments the engine room was filled with smoke. Mr. Lowell Poole, employee, poured on water from a hose which soon extinguished the blaze. The Fire Department, however, was right on hand with the chemical in case it spread any farther, and were commended for their prompt answer to the call. This was their second call within three weeks, the last being the Masonic Temple fire when their quick action saved the building from total destruction.
