MARY HAWORTH

Texas Bachelor Gives Some Very Good Ideas

Dear Mary Haworth—Just recently a young girl wrote to you, asking a solution to her problem of losing boy friends, as soon as she says "No" to their propositions.

You landed on her with great gusto, putting 50 per cent of the blame on her shoulders. Usually your advice is outstanding; but this time I take exception. My own experiences are a counter-part of hers; and I am much older than she.

I'll agree with you that 40 years ago, or more, women set the climate for man's behavior; my own mother corroborates this. And as there are still a few idealists around, who believe it is still the case, a great many men are hiding behind this old bride-and-blaming the women, with a smirk. They get away with it, too.

husband, home and children I am waiting for. And this blueprint is more precious to me than any momentary pleasure to be derived from pastime kissing or necking.

I say Amen to her philosophy of not throwing yourself away in bits and pieces, in the name of love or fun, before you marry. Girls like K. B. can really be an inspiration to us poor guys—help us live up to our ideals, make us men instead of animals.

If there were more girls like her, and if they dressed like ladies in the presence of guys, you may be sure that chivalry would flourish again. I hope that K. B. and other lovely girls like her, won't ever dress in the suggestive fashions that coax us poor males to go astray from our ideals.

DRESS DOES IT
The fashions I mean are, mainly, the shorts and the tight clothes, especially pants, that emphasize rather than conceal; also the low-cut seductive-type dresses and gowns. Girls dressed in such clothes influence an awful lot of guys to immoral behavior that both they and their girls will regret forever after.

ON MEN'S TERMS
Believe me, one doesn't have to act the sophisticated, or anything but one's simple self, to get the world call today. The great majority of men today just won't see a girl a second time if she doesn't surrender. And let's be blunt, men aren't interested in virgins, and they sneer in your face if you stick to your guns. They take it as a personal affront, as disparagement of their man appeal (and so very few do have it!).

You may find it hard to believe; but this is life as it is, today. Your columns are usually marvellous, though; a service to the public! Sincerely, Q. R.

Dear Q. R.—The letter to which you refer, from 22-year-old D. A., who lives in Manhattan (as you do), plainly said she didn't want anything "so simple" as advice or condolences from me. Rather, she wanted light from the source. She asked for "comments from men, as to the whys and wherefores of their wolf-type behavior."

Well, it happens that in today's mail, along with your letter, I have a statement from a Texas bachelor, who writes about the influence that girls have on men. His contribution follows here.

M. H.
Dear Mary Haworth—Thank you for printing that letter from 17-year-old K. B., the girl who is still unknissed. Her attitude is beautiful.

Among other things she says: "I cherish the vivid hope of the beat heat by cooking enough for two meals

"Plan menus ahead," the chef advised, "and, when possible, cook enough food for two meals at once. This not only saves cooking time but helps to keep one out of a hot kitchen."

"This plan is followed by all good chefs."
"It does not mean the family will be eating leftovers," he continued. "Ah no! It is simply good food prepared in advance."

LOIN OF PORK
"For example, take a roast fresh loin of pork. Serve it hot with a cooling relish the first day. Wrap the remainder in aluminum foil and refrigerate."

"Next time, slice it thin and present as a cold platter with a hearty potato or red bean salad. Chop up any oddsments, blend with horse-radish mustard and make into sandwiches with rye bread, sliced tomato and lettuce. Excellent!"

Tomorrow's Dinner: Chilled tomato cocktail; roast stuffed loin of pork, pan-roast potatoes, summer squash, pineapple minto relish, buttermilk crumb cake, hot or iced coffee or tea, milk.

All measurements are level; recipes proportioned to serve 4 to 6.

Roast Stuffed Loin of Pork: Prepare 2 c. moist sage bread stuffing. Stuff into the rib side of a 4 to 1 loin of pork (bones in, bones cracked for carving). Tie with string.

Place stuffing-side down in an oiled roasting pan. Dust pork with 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper and 1 t. flour.

Roast 15 min. in hot oven, 450 degrees F., or until beginning to brown. Reduce heat to 350 degrees F. Continue to roast 25 min. to the pound from 2 to 2½ hrs. (or 185 degrees by a meat thermometer.)

An hour before completion, add peeled white or sweet potatoes. Turn twice while cooking to brown evenly.

Buttermilk Crumb Cake: With a pastry blender, chop together in mixing bowl ½ c. shortening, 1 c. light brown sugar, ¼ tsp. salt, 2 c. presifted flour, ¾ tsp. cinnamon.

Prior to her marriage the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower at the home of her parents. She was the recipient of a great many attractive and useful gifts.
