PURITAN DAMES.

We hear a great deal these days of our puritan forefathers, but little concerning the wives and mothers who landed at Plymouth Rock and founded that colony which was destined to play such a large part in our history.

In 1621 Elder Cushman wrote from Plymouth that he would not advise any one to come here who were not content to spend their time, labors and endeavors for the benefit of those who shall come after, quietly contenting themselves with such hardships and difficulties as shall fall upon them.

What self-renunciation and heroic purpose was this! They drowned witches to be sure, but that was no part of their puritanism. It is to the puritan women we owe so much for that spirit in our people which gives them the fortitude to endure hardship and stake life and fortune for their convictions.

The American women of to-day have the spirit of their puritan mothers, but their constitutions are not rugged or able to endure half the hardships of these New England ancestors. Very often they are run-down with weaknesses and irregularities peculiar to their sex, and the constant drain upon their vitality makes them chronic invalids. Many women hesitate to go to their family physician, because they dread the local examinations so generally insisted upon by practitioners.

Such women should write Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., giving a full description of their symptoms, history, etc., so that he can give them the best possible medical advice. If Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription seems to suit the case the Doctor will say so. If not, then he will give medical advice which will put such women on the rapid road to recovery and health.

Thin in flesh? Perhaps it's natural.

If perfectly well, this is probably the case.

But many are suffering from frequent colds, nervous debility, pallor, and a hundred aches and pains, simply because they are not fleshy enough.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites strengthens the digestion, gives new force to the nerves, and makes rich, red blood. It is a food in itself.

Medieval Lych Laws In Bavaria.

It is curious to note that in some parts of Bavaria a method of procedure which is called Haberfeld treiben still prevails and is practiced by the people in case of offenses which do not come within the pale of the ordinary law. Neither person nor property is injured. People assemble with black or masked faces in front of the offender's house and howl, fire rifles and beat pots and kettles. A mock sermon setting forth the offense of the person concerned is then recited in the hearing of the misdemeanant.—Notes and Queries.

The expenses of Great Britain are now about $500,000,000 yearly, or nearly $1,000 per minute, but every tick of the clock represents an inflow of a little over $16 into the British treasury, thus leaving an annual surplus of about $20,000,000.

Austin Dobson.

It is doubtful if we may look in the future for many new poems from Mr. Dobson's pen. "After five and forty," he says, "a writer of familiar verse usually feels that he has said about all he can well say in that form, and, in my judgment, unless he strike out an altogether new line he had far better be silent. No doubt I shall still write pieces occasionally, but certainly the bulk of my verse is done."

Mr. Dobson is a government official. For the last 41 years he has spent his days at the board of trade and for nearly 30 of them given his evenings to literary work. His usual habit after dinner is to read or listen to music until 10 o'clock, when he goes to his study and writes until midnight. He regards this literary work as his recreation.

He has a large and clever family. His eldest son is teaching in China, his eldest daughter, who is a bachelor of music, has been working among the Bombay Parsees under the missionary settlement for university women, and another daughter is studying medicine.—New York Tribune.

Feeding the Angler.

There is just one fish in the aquarium that is actually fed like a child, and it is the very last fish that one would expect to see fed in that manner; it is the angler. The angler is voracious enough naturally, but it rarely feeds in captivity. Its feeding habits are peculiar. It will take in a fish for food, extract from it all the nutriment and then reject the remainder. Taking advantage of its habits in this respect to supply it with sustenance, the angler at the aquarium is lifted to the surface of the water in a big scoop net, its capacious mouth is opened, and a fish, perhaps a herring weighing a pound, is put into it. The angler takes all the nutritive substance from a fish thus fed to it.—New York Sun.

London's Lungs.

"London's lungs," as applied to its open spaces, is a good and picturesque phrase, but it involves the pathetic consequence that on holidays London must suffer from congestion of the lungs.—Pick Me Up.

During the reign of Edward III a fashion was introduced in England of lacing the gowns of a woman at the side, the garments being in two separate pieces.

The thieves of Great Britain steal $8,000,000 worth of property every year.

Curious "Spells" of Southern Negroes.

There are numerous harmless "spells" which are regular observances in the lives of the average southern negroes. Besides the root chewing, the track lifting, etc., they have a love philter of frogs' legs cooked in still water, and the ashes of a bat are powerful enough to keep away a rival or an enemy. To make a dog stay at home they cut off the tip of his tail and bury it under the doorstep. To make a wife obedient they "draw her picture" and hide it in the shingles. Thus, waking or sleeping, there is a constant forcing or counteracting of destiny.—Philadelphia Times.

Salmon.

This brand of salmon is put up by one of our local packers on the Island, and is by far the best Canned Salmon in the market. When you open the can, the fish comes out in one solid cut, and is not all broken up like the imported fish. It is also of very fine flavor.
