

MARY HAWORTH

Don't Speak All Your Mind

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband and I are not married for two and very happily married for two and a half years. My problem is in my mother-law, much like a trial common to all new wives. Dave's mother always has considered him a child and treats him as one. And although we've been married good on three years, she still has changed one that score. She refuses to give up the idea that she is her "baby". As you can imagine, this is very annoying to Dave and me.

How to openly tell her Dave's parents to stop treating him as a child. "He's a grown man with a family, and he treats me like a baby," I explained. This provoked an argument from both parents, who claim that I don't love Dave as much as they do, etc. They still want to rule his life and mine too.

I am afraid to open my mouth when Dave's parents are around for fear of offending them. I disagree with anything I say, regardless of what it may have received advice from all sides on this problem. How do you suggest that I cope with the situation? A. T.

HUSBAND THEY KEY

Dear A. T.: The key figure in this drama is Dave himself. It is entirely possible that his parents never will move with the times, but you suggest that Dave should have influence where he is. As matters stand, I think we'd better let Dave take care of his own business. If you are serious about a condition of arrested development, insofar as their own respect, you must be firm. Because they don't want to face the fact, of being middle-aged, and "old-age" as the euphemism is, with their child-rearing history finished, they obstinately cling to the idea that Dave's growth too. Figuratively they're trying to stop the clock.

What he can do is to stand up for Dave's parents—a sort of rigid mind set. You can't do much about it, but you can do something to relieve the pressure upon you, if he will. What he can do is: 1. Treat their mistake with humorous, though not committal, conversation when in their presence. This "cuing" you to avoid arguments with their obstinacy. Do the same time, get ahead with being a man, in the matter of dealing with them. 2. Stand up for Dave's parents in their view, where these views tend to butt into and diminish his relationship to you.

Obviously you are being put on the spot. You must be firm to encourage Dave to develop true self-reliance and social respect, insofar as his age and status in life.

SMOTHER-LOVE Dave's parents don't want him to take any more of their own new status in a relationship that exists outside their dominion. They wish to keep him safe, but for that a place of dominant importance in his scheme of things. He has it generally and that he listens to his wife, rather than to them. But I suppose they mask their meanness from themselves by fancying that they are opposed to your making demands on him.

When they (or Dave's mother) harp on the theme of Dave's being in their baby, and of loving him more than you do, they're probably defending him from your instinctive drive to evoke full strength and initiative from him in dealing with life. Probably they think you're too hard on him, in terms of goals you set for him, therefore they rush in conversationally, to prove you wrong.

Discretion is the better part of valor, we are told. Thus my advice is: don't speak all your mind in the presence of Dave's parents. A fool utters all his mind. Be wise in this sense. Work confidentially for them, with Dave, and let him do the talking during family visits.

Both you and Dave might garner useful insights and saving perspective from Dr. Edward A. Strecker's book, "Their Wives' Sons (Lippincott)—which x-rays the immature psychology of smother-love parents. M.H.

HAPPENINGS

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Parent were at home Tuesday afternoon to the staff of the Experimental Farm at a lovely Christmas party at Ravenwood. There were 53 guests present and the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Pickard. Mr. Pickard's retirement from the Farm took place last June. During the afternoon, Mr. Parent presented a certificate to Mr. Pickard from Ottawa.

The certificate reads as follows: To Cyrus George Pickard, on the occasion of your retirement from the Civil Service of Canada. I desire to express to you my appreciation of the faithful service you have rendered to this department and to your country during the past 12 years and to extend to you my sincere thanks and best wishes. This was signed by D. S. Harkness, Minister, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, June 12, 1957. All this pleasantness at the Farm was taking place on Mrs. Parent's birthday, Tuesday, 17 December, 1957.

Miss Iphigene Arsenault returned from a visit to her home in Toronto where she had been attending Central Council of Canadian Red Cross.

Walton-Auld Wedding Is A Very Lovely Event

A wedding of interest was solemnized at Zion Presbyterian Church, Saturday, October 12th at 1 p.m. when Rev. W. H. Brown united in marriage Edythe Norwood Auld, youngest daughter of Mr. Allison Auld, Charlottetown, and Gordon Stanley Walton, elder son of Mr. William Walton, Truro, N.S.

The church was decorated with seasonal flowers and Mr. John Lea Morgan played the nuptial music.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Robert Mackay, Thompson, Connecticut, was winsome in her bridal gown of ice blue net over white tulle. Her gown was fashioned with a crushed neckline and fitted bodice from which her bouffant skirt fell. The ballroom-length hemline Her chapel veil of illusion was held in place by a white satin tiara ornamented with pearls. She carried a white leather Bible with corage of red roses and showers of red rose buds.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Alvin MacSwain who wore a royal blue gown with matching feather head dress. Her corsage was of white and pink roses and white lilies.

The groomsmen were Mr. Alvin MacSwain, brother-in-law of the bride, and Mr. Robert Mackay, Thompson, Connecticut.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Alvin MacSwain who was in charge of the affair. The bride and groom were accompanied by their parents and other relatives.

Couple Observe Their 60th Wedding Anniversary

Observance of 60 years of married life was celebrated by Rev. and Mrs. Wallace H. Bryenton, 475 Bantler Street, Medina, Ohio, marked that number of years together recently with a family dinner at which all four of their children were present.

Married in Cleveland in 1897, the young couple went to the Methodist parish at Litchfield and during the years following Rev. Mr. Bryenton occupied pulpits in many communities, among them, principal of Wilbur Wright high school, Cleveland, Rev. W. B. Bryenton, pastor of the Methodist church at Conneaut, Mrs. Wynifred Moor of Ashabula and Miss Bertha Bryenton, principal of Corlett Ave. school, Cleveland.

Rev. Mr. Bryenton was born in Medina, where he was located from 1918 until 1924. He also had charge in Brecksville, Glendon, North Rowley, Dalton, Sebring, Pella and Greenwich. Broken Sevard, Bucyrus and Cleveland.

They have five children, three of whom are living. Their youngest child, Mrs. Wynifred Moor of Ashabula, is now in charge of the school at Conneaut, Mrs. Wynifred Moor of Ashabula and Miss Bertha Bryenton, principal of Corlett Ave. school, Cleveland.
