ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 23 — (AP) — The man had an alibi, but the judge said something suspiciously like "Baaaaah!" Police Recorder, Luke Arnold said the man was accused of driving while intoxicated and related this story Monday. "I lost my stomach in an operation several years ago and physicians replaced it with a sheep's stomach. Now every time I pass green grass my stomach pains me something awful and I have to take a dose of paregoric. That's what I had done when police had arrested me on this charge." The judge put him away for three days where no grass grows.

The march of dimes was sponsored in a new way at the Little Flower church last week when the pastor asked the parish people and friends to put their dimes on the communion rail one against the other. It was expected some forty-three dollars would be collected this way for the march of dimes fund, a worthy cause.

Fishermen here have started the work of building new traps and gear for the lobster season that is only three months away. The rap, rap of hammers can be heard in the cellars and work shops daily now. But fishermen are due for a severe slap in the face with the price of rope and twine gone away up sky high.

Pte. Danny Conahan is spending his leave with his mother here on present. He arrived from his station in Montreal last week. Danny was in the navy during the war years and before that was on the staff of R. T. Holman's, Charlottetown store. Army life is real life, he says, and he certainly looks in prime health.

We are hearing a great deal about the two trout ponds here, that we wrote about last week. Considerable work has been done on these ponds, that are the old Bristol Mill pond where thousands of trout were caught long years ago when the Mills were operated by the late W. H. McEwen. Also in the stream that ran from the wastegate to the St. Peter's lake two miles away which winds through the alders and marsh land. The other pond is better known as the starch factory pond that supplied all the water for the Bristol starch mills for years and years. Both these ponds were very deep and the factory pond, like the mill pond, had a winding stream from its wastegate going to the great lake below. The factory pond is not noticed from the highway and its great stream, known as Berrigan's stream for a century, has been leased. Mighty trout and gasperaux came up these streams in great schools, especially in spawning season. The remains of the old mills are still there and many a strange tale is told about them and the many times the dam broke away. There is a man in the city H. W. Davison, who is a former resident of Bristol, who well remembers the old mill pond where he lost a valuable horse many years ago when the animal ran away and tum-

Tuesday, January 23rd and the Georgetown-Lower Montague Ferry still making her regular crossings of the Harbour. There is every indication that the boat will this year surpass the record crossing of January 28th, which is the latest recorded during the past eight or ten years.

Tuesday, January 23rd was nomination day in Georgetown to nominate a Mayor and six Councilors. Mayor P. L. Boudreau, who has filled the office of Chief Magistrate for the past two years, again nominated and was declared elected by acclamation. Councilors' Guy Hemphill, Henry Martell, Emerson Llewellyn and Raymond Solomon, all members of the last Council, re-nominated on Mayor Boudreau's slate and were all elected by acclamation. Two new-comers to the slate, also elected by acclamation, were Andrew McNeill and Patrick Murphy. As an election will not now have to be held, citizens will miss the excitement of a campaign, like the one fought two years ago, when Mayor Boudreau led his slate to a convincing victory at the polls, in a hard fought and well-organized campaign. During the past term Mayor and Council have efficiently carried on all Civic Public Works, plus the outstanding achievement of the erection of the New Recreational Center, in which the Town was assisted by the Community Welfare League. This splendid record of achievement and co-operation with various organizations, no doubt accounted for the absence of any opposition being forthcoming in the Civic political arena.

bled into the pond, wagon, harness and all was lost. Mrs. W. H. McEwen, widow of the long time owner is still living and resides in the city. We in Bristol, are all watching this work and hope the days of good fishing here are just around the corner again.
