Vice-President For 1973 Suggested For Business

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Business, to cope with the changes facing it, needs a "vice-president in charge of 1973" and "a committee for 1983," says H. J. Barnum Jr., executive vice-president of Salada - Shirriff-Horsey Ltd.

Speaking to the management seminar of the Toronto chapter of the American Marketing Association, he stated:

"As the wheels of business turn those which squeak the loudest get the grease—the hourly problem, the daily crisis, the weekly worry, the seasonal adjustment.

"Many executives may ponder the years ahead in a general way but we wonder if very many businesses have executives specifically assigned to thinking 10, 25 or 50 years ahead in an organized way."

This lack of forward planning exists, Mr. Barnum added, despite the fact that business is in the hands of a "rampant technology," in which each great new advance comes even before the significance of its technical precursor had been weighed.

Changes in people's living habits, he continued, breathlessly pursue advancing technology and some major industries now find that up to 90 per cent of their volumes are in products and services unknown as little as 10 years ago.

And "we have every expectation of continued change at an accelerated pace."

KEEP PACE

Mr. Barnum advised business not only to keep pace with current tactical problems, but to plot strategic courses for 1973, 1983 and beyond. Failure to properly assess the future capabilities of technology and demands of population, might amount to corporate suicide.

The first step should be a "committee on 1983" which could be made up of a company's top talent in production, research, marketing and administration—with composition depending on the nature of the business.

Such a committee would meet for a few uninterrupted hours every week, or every month, or as often as the daily crisis could spare its victims.

"Perhaps," said Mr. Barnum, "the key man is the research director. His task is to anticipate the wonders looming on the horizons or science."

"The production man describes the significance of automation in his concept of plant operations in 1963, 1973 ro 1983. The marketing man is a student of trends in human habits of living. The administrator tells us how we can anticipate new and totally different problems in taxation, labor relations, government controls and related fields.

GUIDE CONSTRUCTION

"The chairman of this committee is our 'vice—president in charge of 1973.' He must guide construction of a sensible whole from the parts submitted, but his responsibility does not end there because he is, of course, concerned with 1983.

"You can say that this is crystal gazing. However, unless the committee for 1983 and the vice-president in charge of 1973 are prepared to do a little crystal gazing, they cannot hope to attain their objectives in 1983.

"Mapping the uncharted shores of Canada's tomorrow, at best an inexact science, has become an indispensable task for corporate planners.

"It is a perilous occupation, since it carries with it the possibility of gross error. The alternative, however, is the blind aimless wandering that may leave today's industry leader in the position of a buggy - whip manufacturer in Windsor or Oshawa."

The marketing seminar addressed by Mr. Barnum—held in Toronto Friday—was attended by some 160 business representatives.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

Charity Is A Virtue, Even In An Atomic Age

"Faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity," the Bible says. Charity covers a wide range of virtues, and the greatest of these virtues seems to be tolerance. As we hear about what is happening in our world today, this fact stands out clear: misunderstanding, distrust, and intolerance are the "unholy three" that are driving us on to the brink of world catastrophe.

Supposing you lived in an area with only one neighbour. You were rich and he was poor, and you had reason to believe he might attack you and rob you of some of your wealth. So you spend $2.000 yearly to erect and mantain fortifications to keep your neighbour at bay. But if you had spent $1,000 per year to help your poor neighbour and make him more prosperous, he would probably be your friend and you wouldn't need those fortifications. You would be in pocket and everyone would be happy.

At the dawn of this Atomic Age it would seem there are resources to satisfy everyone if equitably distributed. Resources to make all nations "have" nations, and to eliminate the "have nots". If the billions spent for defence were used to raise the economic standards of all nations, economic discontent which is at the root of much of our international friction would be eliminated. All this seems very simple and logical to the ordinary man, but the politcians n high places would probably laugh at it. It would never find a place on the agenda of top-level talks. So it must be that it is not in the nature of man to achieve peace in such a straightforward manner.

SPORT ECHOES

Summerside Looks Good Against Ch'town Royals

The Summerside Aces have piled up a total of 7 points in a possible 8 in the last four games against Charlottetown Royals. They have amassed the grant total of zero points out of a possible 8 in their last four games against Amherst. Yet Amherst does not show any superiority over Charlottetown in their games. Just one of those peculiar contradictions that often appear in the realm of sports.

The Summersde defence which looked good in the games with the Royals looked anything but good in the games with Amherst. The Royals scored 15 goals in the four games with us. Amherst potted 47 in the same number of games. What is there about the Amherst attack which makes the Aces defence suddenly spring so many leaks?

We haven't seen all the games of the league, of course, but from what we did see, we nominate Boss of Amherst as the best offensive forward in the circuit to date. When this fast, tricky, rugged Rambler is on the ice he shows the opposition who's boss. (Terrible! we, who can never understand why they jail people for grand larceny and let punsters walk the streets unmolested, admit it)

Directions to hockey players who want to avoid roughing penalties in the M.S.H.L. when an opponent hits you, drop immediately to your knees and beg for mercy. Then get up and holler for police protection. If possible, have a white flag tucked in your sweater and wave it madly, you may get off scott free, but we're not guaranteeing anything. The ref may figure you had no right to stick your nose in the other fellow's fist in the first place.

Grand Manan's Regional High School basketball team visited Summerside and gave our high school boys the worst trouncing of their brief career. We saw the first quarter which ended 8-6 for the visitors. We were sorry to leave, believing it was going to be a thrilling, evenly-fought contest. It ended 54-11. We can't imagine what happened unless the home boys were waiting for their second wind, and a 2-mile an hour breeze came along instead.
