

Eight National Leaguers Get 'Dream Team' Spots

NEW YORK (AP)—Eight National Leaguers, including World Series stars Sandy Koufax and Maury Wills of the champion Los Angeles Dodgers, were named Monday to the 10-man major league All-Star baseball team for 1966 in the annual Associated Press poll.

Koufax was a near-unanimous choice for left-handed pitcher, missing only one of 332 votes cast by sports writers and broadcasters. Whitey Ford of New York Yankees was named on the one ballot.

Wills earned 166 votes as the outstanding shortstop, 11 more than Minnesota Twins' Zoilo Versalles.

Outfielder Tony Oliva of the pennant-winning Twins and third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore Orioles were the only American League players selected.

The others were outfielder Willie Mays, first baseman Willie McCovey and right-handed pitcher Juan Marichal of San Francisco Giants, outfielder Hank Aaron and catcher Joe Torre of Milwaukee Braves and second baseman Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds. Voting was based on regular season performances.

Mays collected the second highest number of votes, 320. He was followed by Rose with 257, Oliva 230, Robinson 190 and Torre 173.

Marichal won in a close vote, obtaining 88 to 79 for Jim Grant of Minnesota and 77 for Don Drysdale of the Dodgers.

Koufax won 26 games and lost only eight during the regular campaign while establishing a major league record for strikeouts with 338. Wills led both leaguers in stolen bases with 94 and batted .366.

Named to the second All-Star team in addition to pitchers Grant and Ford and shortstop Versalles were Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder Roberto Clemente, first baseman Ernie Banks and outfielder Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs, third baseman Deron Johnson of Cincinnati, outfielder Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox, second baseman Bobby Richardson of the Yankees and catcher Earl Battey, Minnesota.

NFL Action Outshines CFL

By CHRIS ANNETT

Having had an opportunity to see two professional games over the weekend football followers should be wondering how anyone could have the gall to even mention the Canadian and National football leagues in the same sentence.

Granted that the Toronto-Montreal match was one of the more exciting encounters to be seen this season but these two clubs just cannot be compared to the NFLers. First point in case, quarterbacks Sure Faloney can throw the ball and is a smart quarterback but he just does not have to contend with the defenses such as are exhibited in the NFL. Put Faloney in with the real pros and in my opinion he would look like a pee wee quarterback playing against the St. Dunstan's Varsity.

Observers had an opportunity to see real defense on Sunday afternoon as the Giants picked off four interceptions, one of them run back by Morrison for a major. 'Spider' Lockart snared two interceptions and ran both back like an offensive halfback. Even the defensive backs seem to star in the National League. In the Canadian circuit most defensive backs look like a flea that has caught an elephant if they happen to snare a loose pass. What to do? King Hill is an experienced old pro and certainly does not give the ball away free the defense was just brilliant. He has two of the super stars in the league to throw to, Tim Brown and Pete Retzlaff but it was of little use to him Sunday.

BETTER BACKS

Another aspect of the American game which stands out over the Canadian situation is the runners. Now in all fairness to the Canadian clubs there are several outstanding backs in the Canadian game (Dick Shatto, Willie Fleming, Lovell Coleman, etc.) but they really can not be compared to the greats on the American clubs. Jim Brown, Jim Taylor, Paul Hornung, and a host of others are head and shoulders above those in the Canadian game. Your classic example is the combination of Lockett and Batten for the Montreal Als. Lockett is third in the CFL's scoring race but he was only a fourth string back for one of the American clubs.

One begins to wonder how would a NFL super star do in the CFL. No doubt he would show up rather well.

Also the National Football League Clubs have a noticeable edge in physical specimens. A Canadian club does well if it has a defensive line averaging 250 pounds but in the league to the south this is the minimum weight that a club can get by on. Detroit Lions have a line average of close to 285 pounds and that's a lot of meat to push around. Another advantage the NFL clubs have is speed and this was amply demonstrated in Sunday's match by Henry Carr, world record holder in the 220 yard dash. You would expect him to be able to run away from most people on the field but listen to this. It is almost a necessity for any halfback pass receiver or defensive back to be able to run the 100 in less than ten seconds. In comparison the Canadian League looks slow.

Well in ending this comparison I guess I should qualify some of these statements. Of course the American game is better... It can't help but be. If Canadian clubs could afford to pay the prices and salaries that the NFL clubs do then there would probably be some basis for comparison. Who would want to play in the CFL for between five and ten thousand dollars less a year? Then too by sheer mass of numbers the American clubs will be better than the Canadian teams. If as many persons played football in Canada from the time that they were young as do in the U.S. then it is quite likely that at least a few stars would be uncovered. Football is a coming game in Canada and names like Ron Stewart, Ron Lancaster, Rick Black etc. have come to the attention of the average sportsman. With the huge steps forward that the CFL has taken in the past few years it will not be too long before the NFL will be having to take notice of the 'league to the North'.

RAMBLINGS...

Quarterback Bernie Faloney and flanker Terry Evanshen were recently named as the Eastern Football Conference most valuable player and rookie of the year respectively.

Gord Spicer, a RCAF flight Sergeant, who was a well known figure in local curling circles is still in the midst of curling activities, but now in Germany. Curlers will remember Spicer as the Chairman of the Schoolboy Curling Committee in the province and the winning skip in last year's provincial mixed curling competition.

Last weekend Spicer participated in an international competition which featured seventy eight rink, civilian and service from Sweden, Scotland, France and Germany.

Carl Brewster's resignation from the Leafs reminds this observer of rats deserting a sinking ship. About the only redeeming feature of the Toronto club this season has been the play of Orland Kurtenbach. Note that the Leafs have kept all the players obtained in trades on the club. It still won't help.

4 Double Wins In Racing Action

Four double dash winners highlighted the eight dash racing card held under perfect weather conditions at the Charlottetown Driving Park last evening. To put the icing on the cake for bettors, it was not too hard to pick the second place finishers either as in three of the four dashes the same horse took second both times out.

Amigo Mike went to the gate at five-one the first time out but finished strong to take the first of two wins. Teamed by Stanley White the pacer came back to take the fifth dash in the same time as it had won the first 2:17. Jolly May chased the gelding to the wire in both dashes and this combination in the fifth returned $5.10 for the second Quinella feature of the night.

Nimble Knight, owned, trained and driven by Sid Stead of Charlottetown, won both ends of the second double feature in times of 2:12 and 2:12. The latter time was the fastest recorded on the card. The combination of Amigo Mike and Nimble Knight paid $31.10 in the first double.

Dixie Lou teamed by Tony Palmer came up with the biggest pay of the night as it led the pack to the wire in the third heat. A win ticket on the horse paid $8.10 and the first quinella was worth $108.80. Times for the two miles were 2:17.1 and 2:16.3.

The final double dash winner on the card proved to be Rollomatic, owned by C. Sherren of Charlottetown and teamed by J. Campbell. The first place finishes of Dixie Lou in the seventh and Rollomatic in the eighth allowed bettors to collect $10.70 for a ticket on the second daily double.

A record at the track was established last evening when Miss Jo Jo, owned, trained and driven by Claude Murphy was entered in four dashes. The mare came up with three thirds and a fourth for a very creditable showing.

Rollomatic (J. Campbell) 2.4
Miss Fleming (E. Carr) 2.4
Miss Jo Jo (C. Murphy) 3.3
Denis Herbert (E. Ferguson) 4.2
Wick's Ace (G. MacLeod) 5.5

OHA To Study Minor Roughness

TORONTO (CP)—Sgt Apps told officials of the Ontario Hockey Association Monday they should take a long look at unnecessary roughness that has developed in minor hockey.

As chairman of the Ontario legislature's select committee on youth, Apps' words bore the weight not only of a former National Hockey League all-star centre but of an influential politician.

Representatives of the OHA, the Ontario Minor Hockey Association and the Toronto Hockey League appeared before the committee to spell out hockey activities for youth in Ontario.

The discussion on roughness started when Don Ewen (PC—Westworth) said sometimes it would be better if referees would just let the kids fight it out instead of separating them. William Hanley, business manager of the OHA, said he agreed with Mr. Ewen to some extent, but the referees were in a touchy position.

"At what point do you consider fighting a part of hockey?" Apps asked. Allowing the kids to fight would be condoning fighting as part of the game, he said.

Russel Rowe (PC—Northumberland) went even further. "It's too rough," he said. "Hockey is a game of skill. I don't watch it any more."

P. MacWilliams Is Highly Rated

HALIFAX (CP)—Coach Leo Bossy of Halifax Junior Canadiens said Monday the club now has a roster of 25 players following completion of a 10-day training camp at Truro Monday.

"There'll still be a lot of changes," said Bossy. "We don't have to trim to our final 19 players until Jan. 15th. There are at least two additional players we're interested in from Prince Edward Island and two or three in New Brunswick."

Bossy named four players from the camp of 68 hopefuls that impressed him most.

They are Paul MacWilliams, 18, right wing, of Summerside, P.E.I., a standout the last two seasons with Summerside Juniors; defenceman Brian O'Bryne, 19, of Amherst who played the last two seasons with Montreal Junior Canadiens of the OHA; Robert Gaudet, 17, of Kentville, N.S., centre; and Centre Norman Guimond, 16, of Saint John, N.B., formerly a high school player.

Bossy said the average age of the club is 17. Nine players are from the Halifax-Dartmouth area, and four from other centres in Nova Scotia. There are five from the Montreal organization, four from New Brunswick and three from Prince Edward Island.

Canadiens, outfitted by Montreal Canadiens of the national hockey league, will play 24 exhibition games with teams from the Montreal Metropolitan Junior "A" League this season.

Most will be weekend contests at the Halifax Forum.

The team begins a two-week exhibition tour of the Maritimes in Charlottetown Nov. 8, playing against an all-star P.E.I. junior team. They play Lachine Maroons here Nov. 27-28.

Bossy, coach of Notre Dame de Gras of the Montreal Metro League last season, said any player sowing well with the Halifax team will be given an opportunity to move up to the Montreal Junior Canadiens.

"At least six of the boys on the team could play in the OHA junior 'A' series," Bossy said. "I've been amazed at the talent of some of these players."

Other players on the roster are: goalies: Pierre Remillard, 18, of Montreal, last season with Victoriaville of the Montreal Metro League; Bill Marcus, 17, of Dartmouth, N.S.; and Mike Anty, 18, of Halifax.

Defence: Bob Shannon, 16, of Saint John, N.B.; Kevin Smith, 18, of Charlottetown; Bob Dawson, 17, of Dartmouth, N.S.; Graham Inson, 18, of Enfield, N.S.; Camille Caisse, 19, of Montreal, last season with Victoriaville; and Bill Bishop, 17, of Dartmouth, N.S.

Centre: Bruce Blyth, 16, last season with Montreal Junior Canadiens; Roy Bossy, 17, last season with Notre Dame de Gras of the Montreal Metro League; and Mike Hornby, 19, of Dartmouth, N.S.

Right wing: Mike Kinsman, 16, of Berwick, N.S.; John Cruickshank, 17, of Halifax; Paul Boswick, 17, of Halifax; and Denis Murphy, 16, of Dartmouth.
