The House of Hohenzollern.

The Hohenzollern family, to which rapidly succeeding emperors of Germany belong, is an old and distinguished line. More than a thousand years ago the young man who is now known to the world as William II, dwelt in the Saxonian castle of Hohenzollern.
In 1210 a younger branch of the family settled in Franconia, and by successful marriage came into possession of the burgavate of Nuremberg. In 1273 the head of the house was made a prince by Emperor Rudolph. Still ambitious of more territory, the prince bought the margravate of Brandenburg, and shortly afterward was raised to the dignity of elector. In the early part of the sixteenth century the family acquired the duchy of Prussia and its head, George William, became Duke of Prussia as well as elector of Brandenburg and Nuremberg. His son and successor was the "great elector" Frederic William who added to the family possessions and left them at his death in 1688, in control of a million and a half of people. Since then the Hohenzollerns have figured conspicuously in European affairs. The great elector's son was crowned king of Prussia as Frederic II. in 1701, thus giving the family the dignity of royalty. The line has since produced the following sovereigns, first of Prussia, and later kings of Prussia and Emperor's of Germany:— Frederick I. 1701-1713
Frederick William I. 1713-1740 Frederick II. (the Great) 1740-1786 Frederick William II. 1786-1797 Frederick William III. 1797-1840 Frederick William IV. 1840-1861 William I. (first German Emperor) 1861-1888 Frederick III. 1888-1888
William II. 1888

Literary Notes.

The July Century is to contain another article in the series which the Rev. Dr.
Buckley, the editor of the Christian Advocate, has been for some time past contributing occasionally to that periodical. It is entitled "Dreams, Nightmares, and Som-nambulism." It will contain a chapter on "Mysterious Dreams Analyzed." A timely article in the same Magazine is "Disease Germs and how to Combat Them." It will be accompanied by a frontispiece portrait of Pasteur, who has made disinfection and fermentation a longer study than hydrophobia, although it is with the latter that his name is more intimately associated in the public mind.

George Kennan's Siberian paper in the July Century will be called "The Steppes of the Irish," and it will include an account of a long ride in an out-of-the-way part of Siberia, among the Kirghis and the Tartars.

In the American Magazine for July, Wilfred Patterson will have an article descriptive of the Art Collection of Mr. Wm.
T. Walters, of Baltimore. This is one of the very finest of the modern French school, and the article will be profusely illustrated from photographs of the leading pictures, including Meissonier's celebrated "1814" and Alma Tadema's "Sappho."

Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, the eminent specialist on brain diseases, will contribute a forcible paper in the July issue of the American Magazine on "Spiritualism and Like Delusions," in which he will try to show that spiritualism is at best a form of mild insanity. Other features of the paper will be an untechnical description of the scientific means conjuror-mediums have used, including, among other things, the chemicals used in picture painting.

Behorning.

The Rural New Yorker has a correspondent from Massachusetts who says: "I have a small herd of dehorned Jerseys; they are all pedigreed stock, not like the harmless Jerseys that are produced by breeding Aberdeen bulls to Jersey cows.
The horns were removed from the calves when they were from four to eight weeks old, by cutting around them and then lifting them from the skull. I do not see that the operation is as painful as frustration. There is a little bleeding and all know how loose the horns of a calf are. There have been only good results from this practice. The cattle are far more gentle. But one horned animal can drink at a tub at once. Without horns they will fill the tub with their heads and drink without fear." He says that dehorning pays him well. There have been a number of fearful accidents reported in the newspapers of men, women and children being gored to death by bulls and cows, and we take pleasure in spreading the light through our columns on the feasibility of the dehorning process. It is so extremely simple and almost painless, while the horns of a full grown animal are so dangerous to every other animal both brute and human that comes near the horns, that it is simply wonderful that anyone should hesitate to remove the buttons from the calves' heads. Those who own and are breeding blooded and pedigreed stock, may wisely hesitate before putting the knife to their calves, as the prejudice of their customers might interfere with making sales if the horns were removed, but the man who handles native cattle should certainly see that all the horns are removed, even from the old ones with the saw as they are the ones who put their horns to the worst use.
Thus far all the testimony that has been presented leaves but one way, and that is in favor of the dehorning practice. It sweetens the temper and makes the animal more profitable, while it costs nothing but a little trouble and is almost painless. Try it on some of your herd and let us know the result.

From January to May inclusive 35,000 immigrants have settled in Canada, an increase of twenty-five per cent. over the corresponding period of last year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Pedlars' Licenses.

SIR,—I wish, through your valuable journal, to call the attention of the proper authorities to the way in which the law with regard to Pedlars' Licenses is violated.
The country is now literally infested with those commercial gentlemen, called "pedlars," very few of whom can show a license, although having bogus numbers stamped on their wagons; and strange to say, while the proper officer is busily engaged in bringing illicit liquor sellers to justice, another class of law breakers is allowed to go scot free.
I am not finding fault with the Inspector for the way he is using the whiskey-sellers, but there is another law on the statute book which should also be enforced, and as I understand it is the duty of the Inspector to enforce one as well as the other, I trust a word will be sufficient to stir him up to a sense of his duty.

The public do not relish paying a public officer to do work that is never done.

Yours, &c.,
ARGUS.

Queen's Co., June 18, 1888.

Not So Bad After All.

(Moncton Times.)

Hon. L. H. Davies in his speeches in Parliament has represented Prince Edward Island to be in a deplorable condition, Unrestricted Reciprocity being the only thing, in his estimation, that can possibly save the people from wholesale bankruptcy. But the news columns of the Island papers, and other sources of information indicate that the condition of things is not so bad as represented by Mr. Davies. The average Island farmer is a pretty comfortable looking individual and if he has not laid away a snug little sum for a rainy day it is generally his own fault. The towns and villages are also prospering. There is considerable building work in Charlottetown, and at a meeting of St. Paul's congregation the other evening, over eight thousand dollars was subscribed to a fund for the erection of a new stone church, in addition to a fund of six thousand on hand. In Summerside, where a decade ago the sound of the builders' tools was rarely heard, several new buildings are going up, the past two or three seasons have been the liveliest since the completion of the railway. The same is true of Kensington, a small town, a few miles from Summerside, and wholly the creation of the past few years. Charlottetown is getting a system of waterworks, and the telephone line, which we are told is doing a larger business than ever, is being rapidly extended to the different towns and villages likely to give a paying business. These things are not specially important in themselves, but they are necessary to the correct information of those who do not visit the Island Province, and may have read one of Mr. Davies' speeches.

A Little Sermon by Mr. Ruskin.

Whatever we wish to buy, we ought first to consider not only if the thing is fit for us, but if the manufacture of it be a wholesome and a happy one, and if on the whole, the sum we are going to spend on it will do us much good spent in this way as it would if spent in any other way. It may be said that we have not time to consider all this before we make a purchase. But no time could be spent in a more important duty, and God never imposes a duty without giving the time to do it. Let us, however, only acknowledge the principle; once make up your mind to allow the consideration of the effect of your purchases to regulate the kind of your purchase, and you will soon find grounds enough to decide upon. The plea of ignorance will never take away our responsibility. It is
