Catarrh in the Head

Is a dangerous disease because it is liable to result in loss of hearing or smell, or develop into consumption. Read the following:
"My wife has been a sufferer from catarrh for the past four years and the disease had gone so far that her eyesight was affected so that for nearly a year she was unable to read for more than five minutes at a time. She suffered severe pains in the head and at times was almost distracted. About Christmas, she commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since that time has steadily improved. She has taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and is on the road to a complete cure. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cheerfully recommend it."

TERRORS OF THE RED SEA.

The Heat is Killing Hot and the French Sick and Wounded From Madagascar Will Have a Hard Time.

"The veritable hell of our earth," remarked the Calcutta representative of a New York firm, home on his biennial vacation, the other day when he saw the dispatch stating that the Indian soldiers of France, who were engaged in a campaign would be returned via the Suez Canal instead of voyaging around the Cape of Good Hope. "It is a sea that is terribly infernal in its heat. It does not look large on the maps, but it stretches for nearly fifteen hundred miles between the incandescent shores of Egypt and Arabia, and its greatest width is less than two hundred miles."

"I have traversed it six times, and I have been on the verge of collapse every trip when we reached Aden or Port Said. The heat is so intense that the French sick and wounded soldiers will not survive the journey."

"The heat is terrible. For nine months in the year the mercury remains at about 85 degrees in the shade, and when there is a breeze from the torrid deserts to the west or east it is hot as the breath of a furnace. A year ago I was in the East, and I have heard the rain falling, and I have heard the desert sands along its banks seem to store up."

"I can never forget to kind to kind the heat of the Red Sea, but an Englishman told me that he put a thermometer in sand once and the mercury slid up to 110 degrees."

"The water of the Red Sea, as may be imagined, is also very warm, and I have heard it asserted that it loses by evaporation each year enough to fill a tank of water twenty-three feet thick. Naturally it is one of the saltiest bodies of water on the globe. It is really a sort of an arm of the Indian Ocean, you know, and it receives no water to speak of from any other source. It has been estimated that if its supply were cut off by closing the Strait of Bab el Mandeb and the Suez Canal, it would take only a few years for the fierce sun to dry it up."

"It takes the P. and O. steamers about a week to run from Aden, at the southern end of Arabia, to Port Said on the canal, and going either way the boats always stay at one end or the other of these two ports to take on a gang of Arab firemen, for no other race has been found to understand the awful heat of the furnace rooms in this torrid climate. These Arabs are thin, muscular fellows, almost as dark as negroes, and it is worth running the risk of fainting to get a glimpse of them when they are at work stark naked down in the boiler room of the steamer, looking like a band of devils feeding the infernal fires."—New York World.

A NOVEL NEWSPAPER.

Six Thousand Subscribers Get Their News by Telephone.

It was Bellamy, who in his fancy sketch of a socialistic paradise had the news of the day distributed by telephones instead of by newspapers. This part of his fancy is already an accomplished fact in Budapest, Hungary. An account of the arrangement is given in Electricity. Here it is: Budapest is the only city in the world that can yet boast of a daily newspaper.

The idea of diffusing unwritten news was originated by the Hungarian, Theodor Albert Puskas, and the Telephone Herald (Herald) has now been working successfully for over two years. The 6,000 subscribers are served by one wire, measuring 168 miles in length, and running along the windows of the subscribers. Each subscriber forms a station, and a separate line is connected with each station by means of a special apparatus, so that the line is not affected by any one there is a block at one of the stations.

The bulletins are carefully edited and arranged in an orderly program. The staff consists of thirty men, who in the morning until 9:30 in the evening, during which time twenty-eight editions are spoken into the transmitter. Ten men with strong voices and clear articulation act as speakers, and their turns in shifts of two at a time. One of these speaks a series of items, but for no longer than eight or ten minutes, and every new item is introduced by the word "new."

Towards evening, when news is growing scarcer, the subscribers are entertained with vocal and instrumental concerts. Connection has been made with the opera house and music halls, so that operas, as well as concerts, given in different parts of the town, are transmitted to the subscribers, who are often lulled to sleep by the strains of some favorite melody. The same arrangement has been made with the principal clubs for Sunday and saints' days, especially for the Easter festival. The Budapest concerts are sometimes listened to throughout the whole dual monarchy, and even beyond its borders.

THE NEWS OF LINCOLN'S DEATH.

Writing upon the subject of "The Romance of Our News Supply," Mr. W. G. Fitzgerald tells a story about the death of President Lincoln which strikingly illustrates the improvement effected in our means of communication during the last thirty years. In those days there was no Atlantic cable working, and news of the shooting of the President and his subsequent death had to come by steamer. All night after the shooting, Mr. Fitzgerald had been waiting for the announcement of Lincoln's death, which was known to be imminent. The President passed away at 7:30 the next morning at the very moment a great steamer was leaving for England. The energetic agent hired a fast tug and pursued the steamer until it was within a few miles of the coast, and then he was able to cast on her deck a tin canister containing the mournful tidings. This was the only intimation of Lincoln's death received in England until the next morning, when the news came by the mail. It was the first time that the news of a man's death had been conveyed by a tin canister.

Orilla's Prominent Furniture Dealer Gives Facts.

ORILLA, Feb. 10th, 1894. EMANSON, BATES & CO., Gentlemen, About three or four weeks ago I had a stack of Heating Pipes, I tried two or three different remedies recommended by druggists as the "best and only cure," etc., but got no relief. About the time I was beginning to despair of finding any relief, with some slight encouragement I bought a box of your pipe cure, which I am pleased to say gave me almost instant relief and permanent cure. I consider your Dr. Chase's Ointment a God-send.

Telephone messages are cheap, and your wife is entitled to notice when you intend bringing a friend home to dinner.

THE NEW WOMAN.

Mrs. Booth's Pertinent Remarks on an Interesting Subject.

Mrs. Ballington Booth lectured on "The New Woman" in New York City last week.

"The New Woman in the newspapers and of the stage doesn't amount to anything," declared Mrs. Booth. "The new woman is a mock man. The true woman is one that stands by the side of a man. The new woman is too mannish. Tenderness is unknown to her. She doesn't love children, and she does not go out to bless and help others. She speaks slightly of marriage and home; she speaks slightly of religion, and goes forth to find a religion of her own.

Let me be understood, I am
