Ask Probe Of Alleged Game Act Violations

The Prince County Fish and Game Association last night asked the Dept. of Industry and Natural Resources to look into reports of many alleged game act violations.

Members at the meeting reported an alarming increase in Sunday hunting, and called for action to curb these violations.

Others, while expressing confidence in Magistrate R. S. Hin-ton, felt that not all magistrates were supporting him in game conservation with sufficient penalty to curb violations.

One member reported travelling around the shore line roads in Western Prince County last Sunday and observing at least 20 hunters during his travels.

Discussion among members in regard to the return of live geese and hunting equipment to a party from a Queen's County north shore district, convicted and fined in Charlottetown provoked the protest of members who said the act did not permit the return of such confiscated equipment after a conviction, and claimed that the party had no permit to keep live geese, and that the act stated no permit could be obtained for at least a year following such a conviction.

The meeting approved resolutions requesting government assistance in restoration work at two ponds, one owned by Lyle Livingston, on the Big Pierre Jacques River at Glenwood, known as some as Currie's Pond; and the other owned by Alfred Norring at Cape Traverse.

If the government approved either or both requests the ponds were to be stocked with trout, a guaranteed right of way provided, and open fishing to the public.

The meeting also requested the restocking of a pond at North Truro owned by Sterling Lord, and known to some as live's Pond.

"Of course, I was just a little nipper then. It was just about the time Dad started taking me with him on his trips to the mainland. I used to look forward to the adventure for weeks... we went by the old narrow-gauge railway from here to Summerside... then on a little old steamer to Point du Chêne. Nothing like the 'Abegweit' or the 'P.E.I.', I can tell you!

"But I'm straying. I was talking about the Bank of Montreal in Charlottetown. Well, now, the B of M's first banking office was opened here... let's see - thanks, that's right - 1907... November, I believe it was.

"Started off in rented premises in the old Masonic Building on Grafton Street... that was torn down later to make way for the Prince Edward Theatre. Quite a loss when it was burned out last year.

"A couple of years after opening, the B of M moved to its present building just a block east of the first office. I believe they used P.E.I. freestone when they built it. Of course, the old bank has been kept right up to date, by frequent modernization. It was only a few years back that they had some alterations to make more space. New furniture, fittings and counters were put in at the same time.

"Man, do you know that makes me 50 years that the people of Charlottetown have been dealing with the old bank... it's a long time and we've seen a lot of progress, and shared in it, too, through working together."

Yes, here and throughout the length and breadth of our nation, the Bank of Montreal has grown with the community, sharing in its growing pains as well as in its achievements.

And, in hamlets and villages, towns and cities, the B of M is still pioneering with the men and women who are building the Canada of tomorrow.
