Excellent Record For P.E.I. And Nova Scotia

OTTAWA — None of the 20,406 children in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island between the ages of five and eight who received two or more doses of Salk vaccine by July 1, 1955, contracted paralytic polio, Health Minister Martin reported Thursday.

"Only five cases of paralytic polio were reported in nearly 600,000 vaccinated children," Mr. Martin said in the first report of the results of last year's Canada-wide immunization program.

"These results clearly demonstrate the effectiveness of the Salk vaccine against paralysis from poliomyelitis," he said.

In Nova Scotia, 15,550 children in the age group 5-to-8 received two or more doses of the vaccine. In Prince Edward Island, 4,855 children in the same age group received two or more doses of the vaccine. None of them contracted paralytic polio, the health department report stated.

In the same age group there were 46,600 children in Nova Scotia who were not vaccinated last year. Ten of them contracted paralytic poliomyelitis for a case rate of 21.45 per 100,000.

In Prince Edward Island, 5,400 children in the study group did not receive Salk vaccine. Three of them contracted paralytic polio for a case rate of 55.55 per 100,000.

See Fresh Life Injected Into Senate By New Appointments

OTTAWA (CP) — New members have injected new life into the Senate, sometimes described by its critics as an "old men's home."

If early performances are indicative, the 13 new senators appointed last July will help quicken the Senate's pace and perhaps set a few parliamentary fires burning on questions of national interest.

Already the upper chamber has heard the caustic tongue of Senator Jean-Francois Pouliot, old - time Commons campaigner from Quebec's Temiscouata riding, attacking the CBC.

It has heard the polished oratory of Senators Donald Cameron, University of Alberta professor, and William Wall, Winnipeg educationist, urging federal aid for education at all levels.

It listened as Senator C. G. (Chubby) Power, wartime air minister and Liberal politician for 50 years, declared he does not believe in the "infallibility of the cabinet" and suggested senatorial restraint on "an otherwise omnipotent ministry."

CROLL IS HEARD

Senator David Croll, Toronto Liberal noted for his outspokeness in the Commons, used his first Senate speech to urge that there be no federal tax cuts until a national health insurance plan is launched.

And he has served notice he intends to launch a Senate debate pointing up the need for Canadian penal reform.

Old-time senators agree these men, and others of the new group still to be heard, have brought fresh interest and experience to the upper chamber.

Most of the new appointees are comparatively young. Senator Wall is only 44. Senator Hartland de Montarville Molson, Montreal brewery executive, is 48. Four others are in their fifties.

Awaited with interest are the maiden Senate addresses of Senators Molson, an independent, John T. Hackett of Montreal, a Progressive Conservative, and Calixte F. Savoie, Moncton, N.B., educationist who has given no political affiliation.

The others of the 13 still to be heard from are all Liberals — Senators Donald Smith, a Nova Scotia dentist; Harold Connolly, former Nova Scotia premier; Mrs. Florence Elsie Inman, Montague, P.E.I.; Thomas Leonard, Toronto business executive; and Dr. Fred A. McGrand, one-time New Brunswick healh minister.

Observer At U.S. Conference On Education

Reporting on the White House conference on education recently at Washington, at which American citizens were afforded an opportunity to express themselves on the educational needs of the country, Mrs. Ernest Evans, president, The Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation touched on many subjects dealt with. The Congress provided an appropriation of $900,000 for the project.

Mrs. Evans was an invited observer at the conference which was attended by 1800 delegates elected at the state and territorial conferences. The conference took the form of 180 round table discussion groups of ten, reporting back to the general session. A pyramid system of distilling the sentiments of the conferees was adopted, the final reports on each topic to be presented to President Eisenhower in answer to his invitation to the American people to "Speak to him personally".

"That a similar conference be made available to the Canadian public," said Mrs. Evans, "is most desirable." "Such a conference would convince Canadians that it is their right and privilege to share in the education of their children and responsibility of keeping informed in order that all criticisms are just."

Topics of the White House conference were What should our schools accomplish; In what ways can we organize our school systems more efficiently and economically; What are our school building needs; How can we get enough good teachers and keep them; How can we finance our schools, build and operate them; How can we obtain a continuing public interest in education.

Fire Protection and Street: Commissioner Preston Hillier, Chairman Commissioner Eldon MacLean.

Commissioner Burke reported that a detailed plan showing the location of ten new street lights to be installed would be presented at the next meeting of the Commissioners. He also stated that there would be some delay in installing these lights as the Maritime Electric is using all available manpower to repair and rebuild circuits throughout the Province that were damaged during the recent sleet storm.

The Chairman remarked that this matter should receive immediate attention and would be placed on the agenda for the next monthly meeting of the Commissioners. Last-Minute Polling In Malta Heavy VALLETTA, Malta (Reuters)—Heavy-last-minute polling was reported Sunday night at the end of a two-day referendum on whether Malta and neighboring Gozo island should be integrated with Britain and send representatives to Parliament in London.

A tally shtwed 91,441 persons—60 per cent of the electorate—had voted when the polls closed in this central Mediterranean island and naval base. Results will not be known until tonight or Tuesday.

The comparatively low turnout contrasted with the average of 77 per cent of the voters who cast a ballot in the last five elections. The government of Labor Premier Dom Mintoff had hoped for a 100,000 turnout to give a clear decision on its proposal for integration with Britain. But the Opposition nationalists called for a boycott of the poll.

The campaign closed on a note of bitterness between Mintoff and leaders of the Roman Catholic Church. Islanders were divided sharply in a church-state battle and it was hotly debated whether religious influence would be affected by a new constitution in the overwhelmingly Catholic island.

Archbishop Gonzi, leader of the church in the battle, charged Mintoff with "declaring war on the church." He called for postponement of the vote until guarantees were received that the church's position would always be respected.
