Tired but Sleepless
Is a condition which gradually wears away the strength. Let the blood be purified and enriched by Hood's Sas-saparilla and this condition will cease.
"For two or three years I was subject to poor spells. I always felt tired, could not sleep at night and the little I could eat did not do me any good. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it.
Before I had finished two bottles I began to feel better and in a short time I felt all right and had gained 21 pounds in weight. I am stronger and healthier than I have ever been in my life." JOHN W.
COUGHLIN, Wallaceburg, Ontario.

Isaiah Horne's Famous Remedies.
MR ISAIAH HORNE,
Rustico Road.
Dear Sir, My son strained the muscle of his arm some time ago, and suffered violent pain until treated with a rubbing of your Muscle Remedy, when he was relieved at once.
Also my other son struck his knee against a log and it pained him so that he could not sleep. He got out of bed and rubbed his knee with the remedy and felt relief, and was all right in the morning. I think it a grand remedy.
Yours truly,
WILLIAM NEEL,
Rustico Road.
Mrs Mary Webster, of Bay Fortune, who for ten years past has been lame with rheumatism, reports to Mr. Horne that she is now cured of her complaint by using his Rheumatism Cure. wyl—aug27

SAGE TO YOUNG MEN.
THE GREAT FINANCIER TELLS HOW TO GET AHEAD IN THE WORLD.
Hard, Steady Work Wins—Right Doing Always Pays—The Great Good Accomplishments of the Age Have Worn Themselves Out in Work as Public Benefactors.

There is so much advice given to the young man about to start out in business that one feels as though the scriptural admonition of the evil of "too many counselors" were dangerously nearly being his portion. But in all this great bulk of advice there is, singularly enough, little or no mention at all of the greatest element to be found in any life, business or otherwise—the element of Providence itself.
When a young man starts out in business he has a stout heart, a little capital, good wishes and the world before him. The other possession that he brought to him, but which he does not always claim, are honesty, industry and real worth. With these three factors united to those that he may have his chances for success are a thousand fold greater.
To be more explicit. Suppose a young man starts out in business for himself. Everybody wants to give him a helping hand. No one offers him charity, but if he is in trade people desire to see him, willing to leave the others with him in return for the good, and the honest, and the smile upon him more indulgently at first and offer him more privileges than they would accord those longer in business.
The young man, then, has a fair start.
Now comes the most critical part of his career. If he gives promise as good as he says he is giving in, if he pays fair and square for what he buys, will he tells the exact truth about his wares, giving poor ones to those who cannot afford any better, and receiving the high-priced for the best money, then, people pay him another visit, assured of his honesty, and he continues upon his prosperous path.
He is a regular business man now, with success just as surely ahead of him though a ticket for it was in his hand.
This is Providence! The Lord plans matters in such a way that those who walk uprightly find all the "plums" of the earth and the money with it.
Wrong paths pick up stones and thorns.
Occasionally something good will appear to fall to the lot of those who are dishonest, but mark my words—the voice of a dishonest man, who has world and walked in the world the best part of a century—his success is as ephemeral as the brightness of the spring leaves, or the coldness of the snow. All will fly away before another season has visited it!
It is commonly supposed that to make money in this world a man must be one of two things. Either he must be a genius, or a dishonest man, who must make his money by sparkling brilliance that few can imitate, or he must steal it so slyly that none can find it. An examination of the great fortunes that have been made will show this to be absolutely false. Was the first Rothschild to carve his name upon the world of finance, a genius?
Did he "steal" money in his laboratory of gold and silver, or did he, with the wheels of newly discovered patents to grind it out?
No! He was a hard, steady worker.
A man who had you had intrusted $100,000 you would get back with another hundred. And again! And again!
He kept his friends in finance. He gave them a good return for their money, and he was honest. He was covered and planned ways for investing that money, so that his present-age as a caretaker was worth his while, why so much the better for him, and the more so for those who trusted him.
To particularize. Suppose you take for example, some struggling Western city. Nothing moves in it except the people, and the main thing that and life for a pitance. Their horses are drawn to the bone and their animals are thin from poor food and weather hardships. It is walk, walk, walk, work, work, work, drive, drive, drive!
In that city lives one man, a real man! He says to himself: "We should have steam power here! We should have cars that run themselves. We should have mills to grind our corn! We should have power for little factories to keep our girls and women busy.
Their money now goes away from us when they want dresses and to pay out and pay out! Nobody says anything about it. Oh, Providence, show me a way!" With all his saved capital—not very much—with all his money, he starts himself up. He gets a few thousands together. He builds a little railroad. He puts up a small factory. He starts a mill. He has a horse, and he cheerily goes one place to another—there he buys in this town.
But the man who has done it all! He has worked and worried. He has seen the eye rise over the hills many a night before he has sought sleep. He has seen himself beggared and dishonored a thousand times. But he has not quit. His little wheel has been paying him no. He has paid back what he owed. He has done it all in the business as with him. He has made a palladium of men who never thought of a dollar unearned by thoughts of the morrow. He is the rich man of the town! Now who, of all those who have watched him, will begrudge him one iota of his wealth? But look at all that the man himself sees as a Providence!
He sees Providence as certainly as he sees the fruit of his works. Without having had the Providence to guide him he would have floundered at some point in the race. The temptation to step aside from the right path, when dollars in plenty lay to the left of him, would have been too great for him. His little wheel, this, then, is evidence in business.
If I had to take my choice of beginning again either with a million dollars or with Providence, I would choose the latter. The million would be gone in a day.

PARIS' GAYEST HOUR.
The Climax of Adventure and Excitement is Reached on the Day of the Grand Prix.
The spirit of adventure and excitement that has been growing and feeding upon itself throughout the day of Grand Prix reaches its climax at the dinner hour, and finds an outlet among the trees and Chinese lanterns of the Jardin de Paris. There you will see all Paris. It is the great of the hardest wave of pleasure that rears its head and breaks there.
You will see on that night, and only on that night, all of the most celebrated women of Paris, racing with linked arms about the asphalt pavement, who circles around the band stand, if for them there one night of freedom in public, when they are permitted to conduct themselves as do their less fortunate sisters, when, instead of reclining in the arms of the Bois, they eyes demurely fixed ahead of them, they can throw off restraint, and mix with all the men of Paris, and show their diamonds, and romp and chaff and laugh as they did when they were not so famous. The French women who are their equals have cut down Chinese lanterns with their sticks and stuck the candles inside of them on the top of their high hats with the burning tallow, and have living torches of themselves. So they are dressed by—first a youth in evening dress, dripping with candle grease, and then a cockney girl in a dinner gown with her silk and velvet open, close slipping from her shoulders—all singing to the music of the band, sweeping the circle, tracing and strengthening it, and around some stately and elderly, and waltzing furiously past him to prevent his escape. Sometimes one party will steal the hand-stead, and size the musicians' instruments, while another evades the state of the little theatre, or overpowers the woman in charge of the shooting gallery, or institutes a hurdle race over the iron tables, and the wicker chairs.
Or you will see Ambassadors and men of title from the Jockey Club jostling cockney cooks and an English nobleman to look at a little girl in a linen dress and a flat straw hat, who is dancing in the same circle of shining shirt-fronts and ties to the most talked of person in Paris, who wears diamonds in her ropes, and who rode herself into no-riety by winning a steeplechase against a bold French officer. The first is a hired dancer, who will kick off some gentleman's hat, when she wants it, and pass it round for money, and the second is the companion of a man who has probably never been permitted to enter the Jardin de Paris before; but she is both of the same class, and when the music stops for a moment they approach each other smiling, each on her guard against possible condescension or familiarity; and the hired dancer who is as famous in her way as the young girl with the ropes of diamonds is in hers, compliments madame on her dancing, and madame calls the other "madame," and says, "How very warm it is!" and the circle of men around them, who are leaning on each other's shoulders and standing on benches or tables to look, smile and talk to the spectacle. They consider it very chic, this combination. It is like a meeting between Madame Bernhardt and Yvette Guilbert.
But the climax of the night was reached last year when the band of a hundred pieces struck buoyantly into the most reckless and mad of dances of marches and comic songs. "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." The symbols clashed, and the big guns emphasized the high note in such a brass blared out boastfully with a confidence and swagger that showed how sure the musicians were of pleasing that particular audience in such a particular time. And they were not disappointed. The three thousand men and women hailed the first lars of the new dance with a yell of rapture, and then, dancing and strutting to the rhythm of the tune, and singing and shouting in French and English, they raised their voices in such a chorus as high above their heads as they could without losing control of that high note, and every one stood on tiptoe, and many on one foot, all holding on to that highest note as long as they could lasted. It was a triumphant, reckless yell of defiance and delight. It was the first of that class of Parisians of which one always reads and hears so much, and which are used in making point you.—Richard Harding Davis, in Harper's Magazine for June.

GIVES YOU COURAGE AND STRENGTH
A good wine needs no bush, and the Bordeaux Claret Company, need not the laudatory words of the Claret, Sauternes, and Burgundies that are now selling at $3, and $4, the case of a dozen quarts, have an intrinsic merit which recommends them to the palate and judgment of critics. The label, however high-sounding, no longer deceives. The result is a worth in the article itself. The Bordeaux Claret Co's wine has a stimulating, bracing and strengthening effect.
They are less than half the price asked for other wines which are no better. You need no longer pay a long price for a good wine. Imports direct from the historic soil-generous vines within the reach of all.
