CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAV BECKER

QUIZ You are South. Partner bids may be two spades, in which case a raise to three spades would be oversteering the values, while a pass would result in suppressing the spade fit. A free two spade bid, though, reflects pretty accurately the supporting strength held, without committing the partnership to a higher level. 3. Three notrump. The problem to be settled is whether it is better to make a business double or contract for the sure game. This case differs from the first. There are greater defensive values, but there are also greater game possibilities. Against an East who periodically makes unsound overcalls the business double might work out best, but against a sound overcaller the three notrump bid is recommended. Personalities at the table frequently influence a choice of bids. 4. Pass. There is a natural temptation to come in with three clubs, but it should be resisted. A three club bid would compel partner to bid again, and any number of rebids he might make could leave us hanging in midair. A voluntary bid at such a high level represents a very good hand far stronger than the one in question. If partner is unable to take further action after our pass, it is probably best that the opponents play the hand. The singleton spade warns that there may be a misfit.

BEDTIME STORIES

The Investigators

When in doubt the wise will wait; Take time to investigate. —Old Mother Nature. Tubby Bear had found something at the foot of the big tree that was just outside their home under a great pile of brush, called a windfall, deep in the Green Forest. Chubby Bear went to see what Tubby Bear found. It was a small bone. Some tiny scraps of meat were clinging to it. Where had it come from? The two little cubs were puzzled. "It wasn't here yesterday," said Tubby Bear. "It wasn't here early this morning," said Chubby Bear. "Well, I was over here before you came out."

They began looking about everywhere to see if there were any more of those bones. Then, one dropped right in front of Chubby Bear. It must have dropped from up in that tree. It couldn't have dropped from any other place. The two little cubs sat up and tipped their heads back while they tried to look up in a tree? It was a very small bone, but small or big, how could there be bones up in a tree? Chubby Bear, their sister in the brown coat, came out just then. "What are you looking up in the tree for?" she asked. "More bones," said Tubby Bear. Of course that didn't mean anything to little Chubby Bear. She said so. Then Tubby Bear told her how he had found a bone at the foot of the tree and how another had fallen at their feet just a moment ago. "What are you going to do about it?" asked little Chubby Bear. She was smaller than her brothers. Tubby and Chubby were roly-poly little fellows. "What can we do about it?" asked Chubby. "Climb up in that tree and find out if there are any more bones up there. That is what I would do," declared the little brown cub. A hint was all her small brothers needed. Tubby Bear began to climb up the trunk of that big tree on one side and Chubby Bear began to climb up on the other side. Little Bears are good climbers. They soon reached the first branches. Then it was easier. They didn't have to cling so tightly to the trunk of the tree. Sometimes they could take hold of the branches and pull themselves up. Each time they got up on a new branch, they looked to see if there were any bones on it. There never was a single bone. Half way up the tree they stopped to rest. Never had they been so high in a tree before. It was a little bit scary to look down. Should they go any higher? "There isn't anything up here," said Tubby Bear. "Perhaps there is up above," said Chubby Bear. So, after a little the two cubs scrambled still higher, and so at last, they could see a big mass of sticks above them. Right away they began to wonder what that could be. They forgot how high they were. They forgot to be afraid they might fall. What they saw was, of course, the big nets of Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty. "It wasn't here yesterday," said Tubby Bear. "It wasn't here early this morning," said Chubby Bear. "Well, I was over here before you came out."

Uranium Industry Suffers From A "Five-Year Phobia"

By FORBES RHUDE Canadian Press Business Editor TORONTO (CP)—Fears for the Canadian uranium industry after 1962—the year in which present contracts run out—has been described by Franc R. Joubin. Mr. Joubin, whose geological beliefs led to establishment of Ontario's Algoma uranium field, gave his views in an address to the convention of the Prospectors and Developer Association. "It is unfortunate perhaps," he commented, "that all Canadian producers have contracts that terminate together within a period of a few months rather than staggered, say, over a period of a few years. BANKS NOT WORRIED "Those few months between March, 1962, and March, 1963, are regarded by the timid as having the sudden impact of a cataclysm and many of the same timid producers seem reconciled to a nervous five-year wait to see if their worst fears are justified. "Unfortunately, some of them form important links in the uranium industry. They include, principally, government departments at the federal, provincial and municipal level. "One would think that our traditionally conservative banks and financial institutions would be afflicted by the 'five-year phobia' but this is not the case. Most of the Canadian banks, often with
