MacPhee-Paynter Ceremony Is Solemnized At Lot 16

Lot 16 United Church was the scene of an August wedding when Evelyn Ruby Eva MacPhee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson MacPhee, Southwest Lot 16, was united in marriage with William Leigh Paynter, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Paynter, Burlington, P.E.I. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Cecil R. Webber. Cut flowers decorated the altar, and white satin bows marked the guest pews.

Mrs. Clarence Carr of Miscouche was in charge of the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Marilyn MacLean of Central Lot 16 who sang "O Perfect Love" prior to the ceremony, and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was gowned in a traditional white, floor length gown of nylon sheer over net and satin. Floral applique of pearls and crystal decorated the fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. The gown featured lily point sleeves and a slight train with a bow at centre back waist. Her three tiered veil of nylon tulle flowed waist length from a hair headdress of simulated pearls and sparkling brilliants. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses with white ribbons, and wore the groom's gift, cultured earrings and necklace.

Darlene Baglole of Southwest Lot 16, a cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Diane MacPhee, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Miss Baglole wore a street length dress of deep rose pink nylon over taffeta, and the bridesmaid was gowned in pale pink nylon over taffeta. Both carried pink nosegays. Headdresses of flowers held their shoulder length veils.

Gail MacPhee of Abram's Village, a cousin of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a dress of white organza and carrying a pink nosegay.

Kenneth Carr of Burlington, friend of the bridegroom, was groomsman, and Whyman MacPhee of Abram's Village, uncle of the bride, and Elmer Burt, Kensington, brother-in-law of the groom, were ushers.

A reception for 60 guests was held at Lot 16 Hall where the bride's table was decorated with cut flowers and a three tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Grace was offered by the groom's father and a toast to the bride was proposed by the best man and responded to by the groom. Mrs. Hazel Moase, aunt of the groom was in charge of the wedding gifts, and Olivine Birch, cousin of the bride, circulated the guest book.

The bride's mother wore a floral print dress in blue and white with white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Paynter, mother of the groom, wore a jersey dress in pink coin dot design, with white accessories and a corsage of deep toned pink carnations.

For a honeymoon trip to New Brunswick and Maine, the bride chose a two piece suit of pink nylon lace over taffeta with white accessories, and pinned on a corsage of white carnations.

The newlyweds will reside in Summerside.

MARY HAWORTH

Parents Can't Fathom A Reason For Divorce

Dear Mary Haworth: Our daughter, 22, got married at 18, against our wishes, instead of going to college. Now, four years later and 1500 miles away from us, she is divorcing her husband.

They are both nice people: intelligent, honest, conscientious, kind. Both greatly enjoy music. They met in a Little Theater group. They both have high regard for "family."

Eve says she supposes she could have made "the family" happy by staying with Bart for the rest of her life, but she doesn't love him any more, in fact doesn't even like him and won't live with him again. He is 28, had been married before and has a daughter, now 7.

We have urged Eve to get professional help to try to save the marriage but she refused, though her husband was eagerly willing. (We had given them a pretty church wedding and reception and kept in affectionate touch afterwards.)

With divorce under way, we've suggested various possibilities to Eve: 1. Come home, go to college and, if she desires, get psychiatric counselling. 2. Come home, work part-time and take night classes. 3. If she stays out west, then share an apartment to reduce expenses and stave off loneliness. She rejects them all...

She was here last week to pick up a car which we are letting her have for a song (she will need transportation). When we asked how she was going to meet her September rent, she said she'd manage. But in truth she hadn't the money. We gave her our credit card for gas and oil and urged her to use it; and also gave her a small amount of cash...

I asked our son, 20, if he had a chance to talk with Eve during her visit and he said yes, just once, and got the impression she doesn't like people very well at the moment. This was somewhat the feeling we had.

We think her early marriage may have been due in part to inferiority feelings, as she was overweight in childhood (though very thin in the mid-teens and since) and had an acne condition which left some scars...

Our psychiatric adviser here says all we can do for Eve is tell her she's welcome at home any time. This we have done. But we'd like your comments. —C.Y.

Dear C.Y.: As I get the picture from your very long letter, here condensed, the descriptive word for Eve at the moment is "unstable."

Checking Webster's dictionary for a fuller definition of the word, I find the following: "Not firm, fixed or constant. Fickle, vacilating. Unsteady. Characterized by emotional instability."

I get the impression that she is almost wilfully (or perhaps compulsively) disposed to be a problem- character. As if she gets a sense of power, or perhaps some obscure sense of satisfaction, in taking courses of action in major matters that are directly contrary to the hopes, wishes and anxious concern (for her own welfare) of persons to whom she means most.

Thus in marrying Bart four years ago, she was flying in the face of family (parents primarily, I suppose), who constituted the "emotional ground" of her life up to that time.

Now in divorcing Bart, against his wishes and "the family's" counsel, she is including him in her special category of background key figures to flout, baffle and put at naught in their would-be cooperative relationships with her.

As to why this door slamming, radically defiant, obstinately hostile rejecting bias, clearly emerging in her unstudied impulsive design for disorderly living (as an adult-age free agent), I would surmise that, unconsciously, she simply finds it easier to spend her emotional energies in hate, rather than love. Or if not in hate patterns pure and simple, at least in diffuse, indirect taunting expressions of unreachable isolation from "family" key figures.

This might explain why she elects, poker-face, to live alone without financial foresight, as a prospectus that worries "the family" who see her in possible jeopardy, in a situation where they can't intervene effectively to keep her safe. Surely a set-up designed (perhaps unconsciously) to frazzle "the family's" peace of mind!

As for what you can do, leave the latchstring out, to your heart and home, as your psychiatric counselor says. Also you might send Eve a clipping of this article, as a spur to her to enlist analytic help, in getting on the beam of positively integrated emotional health.—M.H.

August Vows Exchanged At St. Dunstan's Basilica

An August wedding at St. Dunstan's Basilica united in marriage Linda Anne Arsenault, daughter of Mrs. Robert Arsenault of Charlottetown and the late Mr. Arsenault, and Sig. James Reginald Arsenault, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Arsenault of Tignish. Rev. Clarence Roche performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass.

Given in marriage by her brother, Robert the bride wore a floor length gown of nylon lace and net over satin. The lace bodice was decorated with simulated pearls and sequins, and featured long, lily point sleeves. The bouffant skirt was net with lace inserts over satin. Her elbow length veil was held in place by a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of American beauty roses.

Maid of honor, Gail Arsenault, sister of the bride wore a blue nylon sheer over taffeta street length dress with matching headdress of net held in place with a rose. She carried pink tinted mums.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Ivan Arsenault of Charlottetown, sister - in - law of the bride, and June Maillette of Tignish, cousin of the groom. They wore street length dresses of yellow nylon sheer over taffeta with matching headdresses and carried blue tinted mums.

The groom was attended by Sig. Bernard Boucher.

Joyce Ann Butler, niece of the bride was flower girl. She wore a white frock of nylon over taffeta. Her headdress was a band of white roses. She carried a basket of mums in assorted colors.

Roger Arsenault, brother of the groom was ring bearer.

Ivan Arsenault brother of the bride and Terry Arsenault brother of the groom ushered the guests to pews marked with white orchids in tiny baskets, and white satin bows.

The bride's mother chose a blue crepe dress with beige accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The groom's mother chose a two piece dress of toast and beige rayon with beige accessories and corsage of bronze rosebuds.

Mrs. Joseph Dougan was organist and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Bernadette Roberts.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at The Charlottetown Hotel for 80 guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by the bride's uncle, Ivan Gallant and was responded to by the groom, who in turn proposed a toast to the maid of honor and bridesmaids. This was responded to by the best man.

Following their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Arsenault are residing in Charlottetown.

STRONG BABY

A new-born chimpanzee is as helpless as a human baby, but soon gains great strength in its hands and feet, enabling it to cling to its mother's hair as she travels about.

ATTENTION - SCHOOL TEACHERS

It is noted at this date that many teachers have neglected to forward their Notices of Engagement for the school year 1964-65. In order that the first instalment of monthly grants towards the salaries of teachers may be forwarded to school secretaries before the end of September it is imperative that Notices of Engagement be received at the Department of Education not later than September 11.

If a teacher anticipates a change in status of teaching certificate or license he or she should complete the required application form and send it to the Registrar without delay. As soon as the new license is received a Notice of Engagement should be completed indicating the change in license and any change in district supplement.

Notices of Engagement should be forwarded to the Department of Education by the date indicated so that pay lists may be finalized for processing by the Provincial Treasury before the end of September.

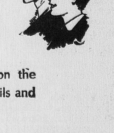
QUESTIONS about the CANADA STUDENT LOANS PLAN?

...talk to the B of M NOW

Details of the new Canada Student Loans Plan have been released. And your local branch of the Bank of Montreal has the information on how to apply.

The Plan will provide bank loans to students who need financial help for full-time studies towards a degree or diploma at universities or other educational institutions above high school level. No security is required and repayment will not begin until six months after you graduate, or discontinue your studies. Up to that time, all interest will be paid by the Federal Government.

In a recent statement on the Plan, G. Arnold Hart, President of the Bank of Montreal said, "Support of education has long been an established principle of the B of M... Any practical measure that extends the educational horizons of young Canadians will always find a ready, sympathetic response from Canada's first bank".



If you'd like to learn more about this new Plan, call on the Manager of your local branch of the B of M. He has all the details and he can give you a folder on the subject. Why not see him now?
