Sydney T. Green Re-elected President Local Gideons

At the annual meeting of the local Gideon Group held recently at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Sydney T. Green was re-elected President. Other officers elected were: Vice-Pres.—Willard Lank. Secretary—Ralph J. Rupert. Treasurer—Blair MacDonald, Chaplain—Thomas D. DeBlois.

At this meeting reports showed that during the past year Testaments had been distributed to the school children in almost every district in P.E.I. William L. Henry, Blair MacDonald, Fulton Flery, and Victor Runtz were inducted as new members of this small but energetic group of laymen who interest themselves in the work of distributing Bibles to hotels, institutions and to the children of the public schools.

The last presentations were made on the day of the annual meeting, when special Testaments were presented to the children of Spring Park and Parkdale schools. These presentations were made by Mr. S. T. Green assisted by Rev. T. H. B. Somers and Rev. J. T. Ibbot.

the man with the mother complex is incurable because he accounts his weakness for righteousness. He has mother-worship bred in his bones because from his very boyhood his mother has impressed upon him his duty to her. So he feels that he is doing nothing more than his duty in not only sacrificing himself to mother but also offering up his wife and children on her altar.

So there you are and you had as well face the facts honestly and courageously before marriage. You will never be able to wean your husband away from his mother, because if a man has not cut his mother's apron strings before he is 29 years old he will never cut them. There is no way in which a wife can combat the mother complex in her husband, because he attributes everything she says to jealousy. There is no arguing with a mother's-boy husband, anyway, because with him Mother is always right and wife is always wrong.

There is just one of two things that the girl can do who is confronted with the problem of marrying a man with the mother complex. She can give him up or else she can make up her mind to be content with a second mortgage on his heart rather than have no place in it at all.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have two beautiful and charming daughters, 22 and 20 years of age. It has been the rule in our household that 1 a.m. is long enough for young men to stay when they come three or four times a week. Parties or dances, of course, make the hours different. Lately two young men have been coming to see the girls who insist on staying until 2 or 2:30, and when my daughters told them of my 1 o'clock rule they were so offended that they have not been back since, and I am being blamed for the unpleasant situation. What do you think is the proper time for a young man to leave when calling upon a girl?

ANXIOUS MOTHER

ANSWER: I should think that 12 o'clock would be the limit of human endurance for both the caller and callee, and that even before that time they must have been yawning in each other's faces. Certainly any young man who thinks that he can keep a girl entertained until 2:30 in the morning must have a superiority complex developed to the nth degree.

If your daughters have nothing else to do but sleep until noon, they can perhaps endure the marathon calls of these never-go-home-Willies, but if they are business girls who have to punch the time clock at 9, they will soon lose their good looks and their youth if they are deprived of their proper amount of sleep.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Do you think if a man were untrue to his first wife he would be untrue to a second wife?

ANXIOUS

ANSWER: Not necessarily. Of course, there are philanderers who are unstable by nature and who are never satisfied with any one woman. But very often a man is unfaithful to his wife because they are not congenial, because she nags, or simply because she does not know how to handle him. But let such a man marry a woman who possesses the qualities he craves in a wife which his first wife did not have, and he will be as faithful to her as a dog.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to her readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.
