National Guardsmen Told To Get Tough With Rioters

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — National guardsmen who stared at a mob of 1,500 anti-integration demonstrators Sunday night were ordered Monday to get tough and see that no further crowds get a chance to form.

State Adjutant - General Joe Henry, commanding 633 national guardsmen, issued orders banning all assemblies, congregations of individuals, public speaking and use of public address systems outdoors and prohibited parking in the downtown area.

Meanwhile the Tennessee Supreme Court re-used at Nashville to try to halt Clinton High School's integration, put into effect under federal court order last Monday when 12 Negroes were among 500 pupils enrolled.

PLEA TURNED DOWN

The state's high court said the U.S. Supreme Court had already decided the questions brought up by the Tennessee Federation for Constitutional Government in an "emergency" plea Monday.

Gen. Henry said his troops would not allow anybody on the courthouse lawn after 8 p.m. The lawn and courthouse square have been the gathering point for the leaderless unruly mobs which have shaken the town nightly for a week.

In another move aimed at head-threatened to overwhelm local police and vigilantes using tear gas.

NEGROES RETURN TODAY

Looking forward to today when Clinton High School reopens after the long Labor Day weekend, Gen. Henry said he planned to ask the state attorney-general's office if the guard has jurisdiction to enforce a federal court order issued by Judge Robert L. Taylor at Knoxville last Wednesday prohibiting anyone from interfering with peaceful integration.

He reiterated, however, that "we are here only to help local authorities maintain law and order."

Mayor Everett W. Lewallen said he expects the 12 Negroes to be brought to school by their parents, but that there was a possibility they might be escorted by guardsmen.

The Negroes indicated they would return to school today without any back down from their five-year court battle for admission to the school.
