"ENCHANTMENT" AT CAPITOL THEATRE, SUMMERSIDE

—Charm and distinction feature "Enchantment," Samuel Goldwyn's newest screen masterpiece for RKO Radio release, which comes to the Capitol Theatre today.

David Niven, Teresa Wright, Evelyn Keyes and Farley Granger have the stellar roles in this delightfully-told tale of two love affairs that take place half a century apart, but both in the same setting—a stately and gracious old London home.

A young British subaltern and his father's pretty ward are the principals in the earlier romance, which never culminates because of family jealousy. But by the time the young officer has become a retired and embittered General, he finds himself an interested spectator of the second romance, between his American grand-niece and the nephew of his old fiancee. At the crucial moment he triumphantly steps in to keep the pair from suffering the same frustration that he did.

Niven and Miss Wright turn in brilliant performances in the earlier episode. Miss Keyes, as the American girl, and Granger, as the nephew, also deliver finely as the modern romantic duo. Jayne Meadows' work at Niven's domineering sister stands out in the supporting cast, which also has excellent portrayals by Leo G. Carroll, Philip Friend, Shepperd Strudwick, Henry Stephenson and little Gigi Perreau, the producer's latest discovery, who plays Miss Wright as a child.
