LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ELECTION

Liberal-Conservative Candidate for Charlottetown,

HENRY LONGWORTH, ESQ.

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

OCTOBER 23, 1878.

A Contrast.

THE Dominion Ministers appeal to their constituents at the earliest moment possible. They decline to do any important Ministerial act before the approval of the electors is first obtained.

The HON. THOMAS W. DODD was called to the Local Ministry on the 12th of September last; and he has since been performing the responsible duties appertaining to the office of Provincial Secretary and Treasurer. Yet he has not even had the grace to say "by your leave" to the Legislative Council electors of Charlottetown. Mr. Dodd will go on attaching his signature to all the important public documents that may be set before him, but he will not appeal to his constituents until the 14th November next.

The contrast between the prompt appeal of the Dominion Ministers, and the dilatory, underhanded appeal of the Local Minister, is so glaring that comment is needless.

"That Glass" Again.

No answer has been returned to the oft-repeated question, "What about that glass?" We, therefore, conclude that "that glass"—viz: Chance's No. 1, 26 and 30 oz. glass, is not forthcoming.

Such being the fact, two or three points remain to be noticed :—

1. Though under the contract, "That Glass" was to have been furnished before the first of September, it has not yet been delivered—and the Government have not learned the reason why.

2. The exceeding lowness of the tender of Messrs. Dodd & Rogers, as compared with those of their competitors; and the statements freely made by dealers in glass, that glass of the quality specified could not be obtained at the price set down by Messrs. Dodd & Rogers in their tender.

3. The fact of Chance's No. 2—second quality—glass having actually been deposited upon the Asylum grounds.

4. The fact that none of Chance's No. 1 glass is forthcoming.

5. The Patriot's "bluff" denial of the facts and the Commissioner's equivocations.

THE Times' financial article says: "It looks extremely probable that a call of £500 per share on the shareholders of the Glasgow Bank will be enough. For a majority of the shareholders that means absolute ruin. Some cannot pay anything, and the consequences will be heavy drafts upon the residue who are rich. Those drafts will paralyze business, weaken credit, and prove a source of misery to Scotland for years. Banking credit has received a shock and confidence has been shaken at a time when the condition of trade required it. The peculiarly strong mischief thus done is now only beginning to be revealed. Ultimately, doubtless, good will result from this collapse, but meanwhile it hangs over the country like a nightmare, and nobody can be sure that it may not prove a signal for further disasters. At the same time nothing is more to be deprecated than unreasoning suspicion. We are glad to find that there is in all the banks of London a strong feeling of confidence and readiness to help those requiring it which must go far to prevent extreme danger. The business public is as sensible as most of the London bank managers. The worst that could happen may probably be avoided."

YESTERDAY evening on Dorchester street Officer Bradley fell upon two drunken vagrants named Brogan and Corish who reside at the east side of the city. They were staggering about the street, creating a wild disturbance. The officer immediately captured Corish and placed the steel cuffs upon his left hand, and, catching Brogan, he attempted to handcuff both together. While doing so Corish dealt him a heavy blow on the head, which was followed by a half dozen from Brogan. A lively fight took place; a half dozen citizens came to the officer's rescue, and for ten minutes the street was in a general uproar. Sergeant Cameron appeared on the scene, and when Corish saw his approach he left and sped up Dorchester street, taking the handcuffs with him. The sergeant followed, and caught him in a yard back of King street engine house. Brogan was piled on a vehicle and taken to the police station and Corish shortly followed. Corish was sentenced to two months' imprisonment with hard labor for vagrancy, and Brogan to three months.

Sir John Macdonald in Quebec.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE CONSERVATIVE CLUB CARTIER IN VICTORIA HALL—IMMENSE NUMBERS PRESENT AND UNBOUNDED ENTHUSIASM.

The Conservative Club Cartier, a new young men's society, invited Sir John A. Macdonald and leading Conservatives to address a meeting on the 18th inst. in Quebec. The building was thronged to its utmost capacity, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. When Sir John entered, the applause was tremendous and knew no bounds, the whole audience rising to their feet and cheering the Premier, who was attended on this, the occasion of his first public utterance after receiving the seals of office from Lord Dufferin, by Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Hon. Mr. Langevin, Hon. Mr. Chapleau, Messrs. Vallee, M. P., Garneau, Angers, Caron, M. P., Roleau, M. P., etc. When the president, Mr. Delagrave, introduced Sir John the applause was intense.

Sir John A. Macdonald expressed his regrets that he could not address the meeting in the French language, the language of his great friend, his alter ego, who had been called his "Siamese twin"—Sir G. E. Cartier. He considered himself an English speaking Frenchman when he thought how his government had, for a length of time, to depend for existence upon the French majority that stood at the back of Sir G. E. Cartier. He felt that sectionalism should be forgotten, and the interests of Canada considered as a whole. Many a time he had been told by his enemies in Ontario that he had sold himself to Lower Canada, while he knew that those who had opposed the great party which tried to make of Canada a great nation, had blamed Sir George Cartier for selling himself to Ontario. Despite this he had now the gratification of telling them that in this stronghold of Gallicanism, the people of Ontario greeted them and joined hands with them around the banner upon which had been enrolled the single word "Canada." Not Quebec, or Ontario, or Nova Scotia, but simply and entirely Canada. It was by this impartial and national policy that his friends had succeeded, while taking 29 majority in the Province of Quebec, to secure 38 majority in the Grit Province of Ontario. After the date of the last elections it would have been impossible to find a Grit in Ontario or a Rouge in Quebec, even if a reward was offered for them. So complete was the victory that the Grits were, like the Dodo, extinct. A story was told in Toronto of two Grits or Rouges (for the two were as much alike as a crocodile and an alligator) who met on the 18th of September; one said to the other:—"Didn't you Grits get a good licking?" and his companion, replying, "Yes, didn't they?" The hon. gentleman said Grits might be known by wearing longer faces than anybody else. It was said that Hon. Geo. Brown, editor of the Globe, of whom they might have heard (laughter) had gone three times a week to the same barber, for 20 years, to be shaved, always paying him 10 c. On the morning of the 18th of September, however, the barber demanded 15 c. instead 10 c., saying that he had never seen Mr. Brown's face so long (loud applause.) In 1874 the Government had fallen under a load of undeserved obloquy, called the Pacific Scandal. Though the radical Grit had compared him with a jack-in-the-box, which jumped up directly it was pushed down, notwithstanding the undeserved storm of obloquy, they handed over the country to their successors prosperous and hopeful, having from 1867 to 1873 reduced the taxes by two millions, and having had in surpluses during that time thirteen million dollars, which were expended on public improvements, building post offices, custom houses, &c. In spite of this, he said that people were not then taxed as they were now. The Rogues said that Sir John was the most fortunate man that ever lived, that he resigned when times were good, leaving them to govern in hard times, and was now back just when times were once more good. (Applause.) He alluded again to the undeserved abuse heaped upon himself and Sir Geo. Cartier, blows at whom he accepted as blows at himself. He knew what would be the result of a new trial, and had looked in confidence for the sober second thought of the people, which was the reverse of the former verdict, and which had given them such a victory as was never known before—a majority of 84 to 86 in the House, who would vote, not from interest, but because they were elected to support the National Policy. He ridiculed the pretension that their large majority was dangerous, except when led by inexperienced men like the late Ministers, who lost their heads when appointed to office. It was the old story: put a beggar on horseback, and he'll ride to the devil. The late Government, with their majority of 80 to 90, laughed at public opinion, and defied the Opposition to move for whitewashing commissions. His friends were not such fools as to submit to such a trial; they chose to submit their case to the calm consideration of the people, and now they had their verdict. He trusted that he had been a Minister long enough not to be unduly elated by a large majority, nor to sneer at public opinion as expressed by the Press. The Right Hon. gentleman commended the objects of the Club, and said that Canada's hope was in her young men. In the last election, when old men had refused to desert their party, though it was no longer worthy or deserving of their support, the young men had severed all such ties, and thrown themselves into the contest in support of the policy nailed by himself and party to the mast:—"Canada for the Canadians." He concluded by asserting that so long as he remained in the Government, the National Policy would be put in force, and spoke at length in favor of protection and encouragement for all the great industries of the country.

Suspension of the Merchants Bank of P. E. I.

(From the Monetary Times.)

It is somewhat surprising that when the principles of legitimate banking are so well understood, the Merchants Bank should have trampled upon some of its best known safeguards. An institution which would blindly lock up the greater portion of its resources in any one enterprise such as shipbuilding, during a period of depression could not reasonably expect much outside assistance, especially on personal security, and as it had nothing else to offer it had to close its doors. The management, it appears, did not realize the position of the bank until it found the drafts of the firm to which it had made such extraordinary advances, refused in Britain. So great was this shock that it at once brought the board to its senses, and a vigorous effort was put forth by the President, who is considered one of the most honorable men on the Island, to extricate the bank from its difficulties, but it was too late. When the firm whose drafts were refused, was known to be in trouble, some of its wealthiest depositors withdrew their funds; and this drain upon the resources of the bank continued to increase from day to day. Failing to get the needed outside assistance, the only course left was to suspend payment until such arrangements shall be made as will enable it to resume business. To do this, the shareholders must put their hands in their pockets and make good the deficiency. A contribution of ten dollars per share would probably effect this, and it is the straightforward course to pursue. The directors are culpable in permitting one of their number, who, although a clever, is a bold and self-willed man, to have all the money desired by the firm of which he was a ruling spirit, to lock up in ships. Indeed the shareholders threaten to hold the board responsible for the result. In doing this, the board blindly violated one of the principal safeguards of its charter, which provides that "The aggregate of all the debts due to the said bank from the directors thereof as principals, endorsers or sureties, shall not at any one time exceed twenty per centum of the capital stock."

The result of the failure of Jas. Duncan & Co. and the suspension of the bank is not likely to prove so disastrous to the Island as was as first expected. The Merchants is, we think, the youngest bank in the Province, and those who were in a position to watch its operations never considered it very strong. Judging from transactions that have come to light its management must have been of a reckless character.
