NURSE SAVED MISS LELAND

Heroic Conduct of a Lady Well Known in Charlottetown.

During the late disastrous fire at the Windsor Hotel, in New York City, many heroic actions were performed. Among those who distinguished themselves on that occasion was Miss Frances Troup, a niece of Mrs. Fenton T. Newbury, who visited Charlottetown a few years ago and made many friends during her stay. Here is the story of Miss Troup's heroism as told by the New York correspondent of the Boston Record:—

The fire had its heroine who saved life. Her name is Miss Frances Troup, and to her courage, devotion and presence of mind Miss Frances Leland, the youngest daughter of the proprietor of the hotel, owes her life.

Miss Troup is a trained nurse, and so accustomed to think first of others. Miss Frances Leland is an invalid, a victim of epilepsy. She is also lame. She was in her room in the hotel, No. 520, on the fifth floor of the Fifth ave. side, when the two young women heard the alarm.

Miss Troup opened the door. Flame and smoke burst upon her. Miss Leland screamed and fell fainting. The nurse realized that she must act quickly. She tried to arouse Miss Leland, and succeeded partly. She placed a handkerchief about her charge's face to protect her from the smoke, and then started for a fire-escape.

They reached the fire escape. Then the smoke grew thicker and more suffocating. They could hear the crackling of the flames. The sick woman did not dare trust to the fire escape. She could not go down alone, and they were five stories above the street.

Miss Troup thought and acted quickly. She told Miss Leland to throw her arms about her neck and hold on with all her might. Miss Troup placed Miss Leland partly in front of her and partly to one side, so she could place her arm about her burden and still grasp the rounds of the iron ladder.

Then came the descent. People who saw them through the smoke shuddered. It seemed impossible for the nurse to carry that burden to the street. But there was no thought of failure in her own mind. She knew that her skirt might trip her, wherefore she was careful, and that meant slower progress. And the burden upon her was so great that she felt that the skin was being torn from her hands. She forgot her own agony in cheering and comforting the sick woman.

Story after story was descended in safety. Miss Troup felt her strength waning, but her pluck was greater than her physical power. There was one more story. She could hear the shouts of the firemen, the hoarse cries of encouragement above the roar.

The last platform was reached and Miss Troup sank fainting into the arms of a fireman who had raised a ladder. She and Miss Leland were carried to the street, and the former was taken immediately to Miss Gould's house, across the way. In the confusion Miss Troup lost Miss Leland, and it was ten minutes or more before she learned where the invalid had been taken. Then she joined Miss Leland.

With Invalids.

Yes? with invalids the appetite is capricious and needs coaxing, that is just the reason they improve so rapidly under Scott's Emulsion, which is as palatable as cream.

The presentation will be under the auspices of the League of the Cross.

KELLY'S CROSS HALL.—On a later Monday night there will be presented in the hall at Kelly's Cross the splendid drama, "Captain Jack, or the Irish Outlaw." The characters in the play are all in excellent hands, and the details of the production will be carefully attended to. James McGuigan, charged on complaint of his wife, with beating and otherwise ill-treating her, failed to appear on the summons and a warrant for his arrest was ordered to issue. The hearing of the case stands adjourned until he is apprehended.

A FINE HALL.—Rev. P. P. Arsenault, of Mount Carmel, Fifteen Point, did not rest on his oars with the erection of the magnificent church at that place, but has also provided the people of his parish with a very fine hall. Under his superintendence, the old church has been transformed into a spacious hall, 75x30 feet, with end and side galleries, and an excellent stage, which is fitted with curtains, side entrances, etc. The walls are nicely frescoed, and the whole interior of the hall, which is one of the best in the province, is very attractive, and a model of arrangement and convenience. The hall will be opened Easter Monday night, with a French drama, "La Retour de la Crime," a play dealing with the return of the French army from the siege of Sebastopol. This piece will be produced by local talent, under the management and direction of Father Arsenault, who was a most successful instructor and stage manager for the dramatic organization to which he belonged in college.—Summerside Journal
