Newsman Makes Return Visit To City By Nazi Murder Camp

By PRESTON GROVER
WEIMAR, East Germany (AP)—Weimar is beautiful city, rich in history, with a tree-lined avenue so quiet a whisper can be heard.
It was that way when I returned here recently on a tour of East Germany. It was the same unwhispering, romantic quiet I had found when I first visited the city in 1940 as a correspondent in Hitler Germany. But the quiet in that early time cloaked one of the most monstrous secrets ever hidden by any city.
Despite our questioning—and we did ask repeatedly—we never got a hint at that time that on a beautiful wooded hill just above the city lay the murder camp of Buchenwald. Correspondents in 1940 got frail intimations now and then that there were camps in Nazi Germany that were more than just places to confine Jews.
Yet without ever mentioning the camp, military officers and officials of the propaganda ministry led us correspondents on sentimental tours around the cafes in Weimar where Goethe had gossiped with the poet Schiller and dabbled in politics. Did they know? They never let on.
The camp now is run as an education centre for Naziism. Scores of German visitors, including many children, were streaming down the hill as I arrived. Two German guides agreed to show me around.
SHOWED HORRORS
One, about 50, unlocked the doors and other, a bit younger, did the talking.
"Here is where the Fascists beat the Jews," he said, pointing to a rack where feet and hands could be fastened, with the body stretched across. By it were heavy whips and some thin, supple canes.
"Six Russians were shot here by the Fascists," he said in the same sort of memorized monotone as he pointed to another concrete cell. The Russians had hung a Soviet flag in the cell.
Then he showed me where men who had worked hard all day were jammed into a concrete cell so tightly they had to stand up all night until work time next morning.
"They had to run all the way to work," he added. "When they fell down, they were taken to the incinerator."
In this single block of cells, says a bronze plaque at the entrance, 600 were killed.
Through the dark, he led the way to an open park once filled with barracks, since removed. "Over there 300 Jews died of cold and hunger. They were left in the open without shelter."
The camp was built for 3,000, but 40,000 at a time were crowded into it.
MANY VISITORS
The clanking keys ahead opened the way to a documentation centre built especially for visitors. Thousands of East Germans course through the camp each week, as well as many from other Communist states. Not many come from the West, but some of the exhibits were clearly prepared for them. Reorganization Of The UN Called For By Red China

TOKYO (AP)—Communist China told Adlai Stevenson today to stop calling the United Nations an organization of peace and international co-operation.
The official newspaper, Peking People's Daily, termed nonsense the U.S. ambassador's defence of the United Nations after Indonesia's withdrawal earlier this month.
Addressing its remarks to Stevenson, the newspaper said in an editorial:
"The blind faith which you have tried to cultivate in the United Nations has been shattered. The United Nations must correct its mistakes and must be thoroughly reorganized."
The 2,000-word editorial commented on conferences last week between Foreign Minister

PICKET STOCK EXCHANGE
NEW YORK (AP)—Civil rights demonstrators picketed the New York Stock Exchange Monday in appeal for a boycott against Mississippi products as an economic weapon against racial segregation in that state. The action was described as the start of a U.S.-wide campaign by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

type along the walls tell of Nazi atrocities. Never was the word "German" used. One sign said 238,900 prisoners passed through the camp between the time it was founded July 6, 1937, and March 31, 1945, when it ended with the approach of U.S. divisions. In that period, 56,545 were killed.
The guide led on to the "shooting gallery," once destroyed but now reconstructed to show how thousands of Russian prisoners were shot. Under guise of giving them physical examinations, Nazi SS (elite) men led them into a narrow room where each was backed up against a device for measuring height. As he stood there, he was shot in the back of the neck through a slot in the wall. A roaring loudspeaker kept the waiting victims from hearing it.
Another building housed a laboratory where experiments were carried out on Jews. Many were simply killed by injections of poison directly into the heart. One room was lined with meat hooks, like a butcher shop.
"Those killed in the laboratory were hung up here waiting for the furnaces," said the guide. "If they were still alive, their skulls were crushed with this." A conveyor took their bodies to the furnaces.
POINTS OUT EFFICIENCY
There, the guide pointed out the diabolic Nazi efficiency. First, there had been only four in a row, each with a chute which flipped the body quickly into the flames. The ashes added into a tank below. Later three oil-burning furnaces were added. Instead of taking 10 minutes, like the coal burners the guide said, the oil burners could destroy a body in 20 minutes.
At the end of the tour I called to the attention of the guide that in none of his prepared talks, nor in any of the explanatory notices around the camp was the word "Fascists" used.
"We never use the word German because Germans are not on the same level as the Fascists," he replied, not with heat, but firmly. "We socialist Germans are not at all the same as they."

Tracking Data on Indonesian Bomb

U.S. Gov't reports that the U.S. reactor is so small it is incapable of producing sufficient material for nuclear weapons manufacture or for generating power on any useful scale.
The director of Indonesia's army arsenal, Brig-Gen. Hartono, said in Jakarta that about 200 scientists are working to make the country's first atom bomb.
He promised a "surprise" at the armed forces' day celebration in October.
Hartono said last November that Indonesia would explode an atomic bomb in 1965 and that it had begun surveying the possibility of producing intercontinental ballistic missiles.
In his latest statement he said that Indonesia this year will produce guided missiles "whose damaging abilities are superior to those of other countries."
