CH'TOWN STRAWBERRY EXCHANGE GOING FULL CAPACITY

Luscious strawberries at the rate of 1,000 boxes a day are being processed daily at the Charlottetown Strawberry Exchange. At left a you... is seen dumping the berries into a hulling machine which removes the bud while a continuous stream of water cleans the fruit as it passes through. At right girls keep a close watch for berries still having the hull on and at the same time pick any rotten fruit which would not be suitable for processing. About 20 people are engaged in the processing. A supervisor is always present to process the product and to see that the proper amount of sugar is added. The Charlottetown plant puts the berries up in 24 lb. pails.

Eight lbs. of sugar is added to each pail. The change estimates that about 40 tons of sugar will be required to process the berries it will handle this season. The berries are taken to the Government Cold Storage Plant where they are kept frozen and kept for later consumption. Officials at the plant yesterday stated that the strawberry crop this year is yielding very heavily and if nothing untoward happens it will be a banner year in the history of the Province. Mr. Malcolm Reeves is President of the Strawberry Exchange. Mr. Austin Kennedy is Secretary. Mr. Norman MacLeod is acting in the capacity of supervisor.

Describes Early Days Of Slavery In Jamaica

"The world of luxury is changing," Rev. Dr. Ashford said in speaking at the Rotary luncheon in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. "Ten years ago it was all Florida, now in an expanding reach towards a more exclusive area for winter holidays, Jamaica has developed into the Mecca." Dr. Ashford described the 45,000 square miles area which has been for more than 300 years a part of the British Empire, when the Spaniards abandoned their possessions there, including the slaves. In 1795 the inhabitants were promised peace with honour when they capitulated. However this was not adhered to and as a result hundreds of these coloured folk were sent to various parts of the world including Nova Scotia where, in the area of Trenton, their descendants still live. "Jamaica is the story of slavery. In 1831 when slavery was abolished 300,000 of them, the property of absentee landlords, were released in the midst of fabulous fortunes but they themselves living in the most abject poverty." "The expression 'Black Market' is believed to have been used in Jamaica to describe the sale of commodities stolen by the slaves as they worked and through which many of them eventually raised sufficient money to purchase their freedom," the speaker said. Describing the living conditions in Jamaica, Dr. Ashford dwelt on Nugent, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of agriculture and fisheries, said in a welcoming address. "Dr. Johnson adjured us never to believe in round figures. One has only to look at her to realize that round figures do exist and without the assistance of a by-product of your industry (meaning whalebone), which has helped ladies' figures."

the inherent characteristics which the slave life of their forebears left as a heritage. "Half the children born there are illegitimate. In the slave days, concessions in the matter of manual labour were given slave girls about to become mothers and as a result their conduct was a matter of indifference to the overseers who had as their chief objective, the making of money for the absentee landlords for whom they held their jobs. "Today Jamaica is faced with a social and moral problem as a result of the years of slavery. Marriages between the various gradations from white to black are matters of indifference. "Where do you stand in economics?" is the big question as new ventures and higher standards of living are bringing more wealth to the area." Dr. Ashford described the bell which rang out the message of freedom to the slaves in 1841 which stands in an honoured position opposite the former home of the most severe overseer of slave days. Dr. J. W. P. MacMillan, co-chairman, in thanking the speaker said his talk had been a revelation on the tragedy of slavery in which the great gift of Christian charity had been denied those sufferers in both body and soul. Col. F. I. Andrew, national president of Ayrshire, Breeders of Canada, was introduced as a new member by Bob Parent and welcomed on behalf of the club by the chairman, Gordon Avar. Guests of Rotary were: Sr. Capt. John Carter, Salvation Army, Inspector Martin, R. C. M. P., Lieut. Col. A. H. Peake, of Charlottetown, Jack F. McCallum, Espanola, Ont. and W. E. Fletcher, Lindsay, Ont. Visiting Rotarians were George Stinen, Moncton, Les Stacey, Fredericton, Ernie Ayre, Grand Prairie, Darrel McGuire, Amherst, Richard Ordway, New Orleans, La.

Re-allocation Of Federal, Provincial Powers Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Re-allocation of federal and provincial powers and responsibilities was suggested in the Commons Monday as a solution to the country's fiscal problems.

The proposal came from George Nowlan (PC-Digby - Annapolis-Kings) who said the federal government should call a constitutional conference with the provinces to arrive at permanent solutions.

He spoke in opposition to new tax-sharing arrangements offered by Ottawa to the provinces to replace the present tax rental agreements which expire next March 31.

Mr. Nowlan described the federal formula as "piece-meal." The government had "feudal attitude" in determining what amounts of tax revenue the provinces would need to meet their present responsibilities.

URGES LONG-TERM PLAN The increasing problems of the provinces and the municipalities should be dealt with on a constructive, long-term basis. Then the provinces wouldn't find themselves in a financial straitjacket.

Under the federal proposal, the federal government will make conditional equalization payments to the less-wealthy provinces to bring their per capita income to the average of the two richest — British Columbia and Ontario.

In addition, the federal government would allow the provinces tax yields equal to 50 per cent of succession duties and 10 per cent of personal income and nine per cent of corporate income.

Mr. Nowlan said any fiscal arrangement with the provinces should recognize the taxpayers' ability to pay rather than just the population of the provinces.

With its new proposals, the federal government was placing a foundation of sand under the feet of the provinces. Many had no choice and had to accept the federal offer whether they liked it or not.

DIFFERS WITH LEADER Charlie Gillis (CPC - Cape Breton South) took the view that the new arrangements are a step in the right direction, differing with his party leader, M. J. Coldwell, who indicated earlier a preference for the tax rental system.

Mr. Gillis said Premier Hicks of Nova Scotia had performed a neat bit of bargaining at the federal-provincial fiscal conferences. Under the proposed arrangements, his home province would receive 20.1 per cent more than it did under the tax rental agreement.

In view of that, he would support the new formula so as not to make it tougher for Liberal Premier Hicks to govern. Mr. Hicks was young and learning fast.

"He's coming along," interjected Works Minister Winters, Cabinet representative for Nova Scotia.

NEED INDUSTRY Mr. Gillis said the fiscal arrangements will not solve all the Maritimes problems. What was needed was a decentralization of industry from heavy concentration in central Canada to other parts of the country, especially to the Maritimes.

He said the provinces could not keep making demands on the federal government for assistance without giving it the powers to weld the country together and give the same essential social services to all Canadians, no matter what province they live in.

A. Wesley Stuart (L-Charlotte) supported the new arrangements mainly on the ground that for every dollar the federal government would collect in his home province of New Brunswick, the province would receive almost three in equalization payments.
