

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

AGRICULTURE COURSE

Under Dominion-Provincial Agreement, the Vocational School will provide, if sufficient applications are received, a course in Agriculture for the farmers of the Province beginning on February 5. For convenience of those who may not be able to remain for the full four weeks, the course will be divided into two parts:

- (a) LIVESTOCK FIRST AID—One Week.
- (b) FARM MECHANICS—Three Weeks.

The course is under the leadership of qualified instructors and will be valuable to all those now actively engaged in Agriculture.

Assistance will be offered to those between the ages of 16 and 30 who successfully complete the course up to $6.00 per week.

Applications should be sent direct to the Supervisor of the School, Grafton St., Charlottetown.

MONTREAL, Jan. 26 — (CP) — R.C.A.F. officers at nearby La-Isle said today they are expecting the arrival for hospitalization here of a five-year-old Eskimo boy — named Elisla — who contracted tuberculosis up in lonely Baffin Island. Officers said the boy was flown by R.C.A.F. to Goose Bay in Labrador earlier this week.

TUBERCULOSIS CONTROL FORUM

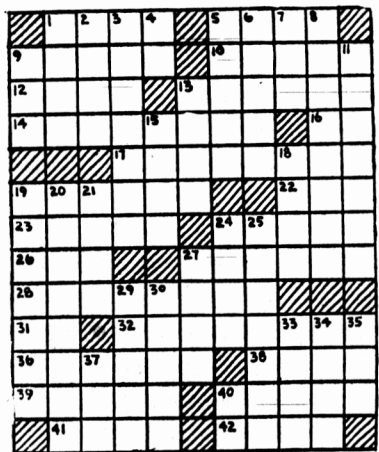

An open Forum on TB control and Health Education is being held in the Auditorium of the Provincial Sanatorium on Thursday and Friday, 1st and 2nd Feb., from 10:00 a.m. to noon and 2:00 to 4:30 p.m. and on Thursday evening from 8:00 to 9:30 p.m.

All nurses, health workers and technicians connected with TB control are invited to attend any of the discussions.

The forum is being conducted jointly by the Division of Tuberculosis Control of the Department of Public Health, the Division of Public Health Nurses and the P. E. I. Tuberculosis League.

L O N G F E L L O W

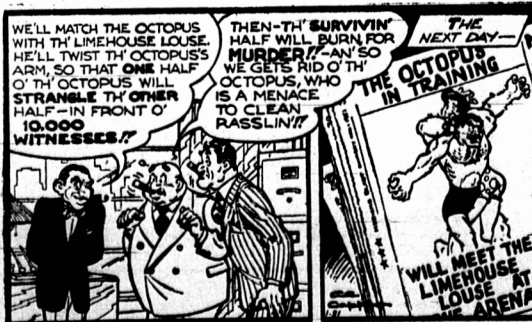

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, length and formation of the words are all hints. The code letters are different.

A FISHING PARTY

One thing you find is true when fishing,
No fish are ever caught by wishing.
—Little Joe Otter

Blacky the Crow had breakfasted well. He had had a small fish and Blacky likes fish. It would have made no difference if Blacky had not liked fish; he would have eaten it just the same. You see he had had no breakfast. His crop had been entirely empty. Then he had found that fish floating in the water close to the ice where he could see.

"Caw, caw, caw!" called Blacky joyously as he took to his black wings and flew down the river. For a long way there was nothing but ice. Then far ahead he saw open water once more. This was where the Big River ran too swiftly to freeze. Blacky had often found food washed against the shore at this particular place. He wondered if now he would find something more there. He didn't really care whether he did or not, but if he found something he would eat it because in cold weather like this, with food as scarce as it was most of the time, he never overlooked any he might find.

There was a certain tree in which he always sat when he visited that place. From it he could look all over that stretch of open water and see all that was going on around it. Almost always there was some one fishing there. There was this time Graywing the Gull was flying back and forth above the water. Graywing and Blacky were old acquaintances. It was from Graywing that Blacky had learned the trick of opening clams. He had seen Graywing carry a clam high in the air and drop it on a big flat rock. Of course that shell had been smashed. Graywing had sailed down and eaten the clam without any trouble at all. Blacky had never forgotten that trick. He had tried it himself when he had found a fresh-water clam where he could get it. Blacky is one of those persons smart enough to learn from others. He isn't one of those who thinks he knows it all. The truly smart never do think that.

"How is the fishing?" asked Blacky.

"Not good," replied Graywing, swooping down close to the water and then coming up so that he almost brushed the branches on which Blacky was perched. "There are too many fishermen this morning," he added.

Blacky looked surprised. Graywing was the only fisherman he had seen. Now he looked this way and that way all over the water and along the edges. He was just about to say that he didn't see any other fishermen when he saw, partly hidden by a big rock, Longlegs the Great Blue Heron. He had thought Longlegs had gone South. So to see him standing there by that big rock was a surprise. He was standing just as Blacky had seen him in the summer when fishing along the Big River or by the Smiling Pool. Not a feather moved. He didn't look to be alive. But he was alive. Even as Blacky looked, Longlegs' long neck shot out and down. His head went under the cold black water. In an instant it was out again and in his long spear-like bill was a fish. He turned so as to hold it in his bill head down. He stretched his long neck upward to its full length and that fish disappeared. It seemed to Blacky that he could almost see it going down that long, long throat. He suddenly began to be hungry again.

Just then there was a harsh rattle. It was the voice of Rattles the Kingfisher. A brown head popped out of the water. Little Joe Otter was fishing too.

EXIT CARDS

When a declarer is considering the use of a hold-up play (i.e., keeping a stopper as long as he can), he should bear in mind the possibility that one of his small cards in the suit might come in handy later as an exit card. For example:

East dealer. Both sides vulnerable. North-South 60 on score.

♠ J 7 6 3
♥ K J 9 5
♦ Q 3
♣ 10 8 4

♠ K 9 4
♥ 6 2
♦ J 9 7
♣ K Q J 5

♠ A 10 5
♥ 8 7 4 3
♦ K 8 6 5
♣ 6 2

♠ Q 8 2
♥ A Q 10
♦ A 10 4 2
♣ A 9 7

The bidding:

East South West North
Pass 1NT Pass Pass

In view of the score, West (as he admitted in post-mortem) almost risked a two-club overall of South's one trump, but restrained himself by imagining what might be the outcome of such rashness.

Naturally, West opened the club king, and when South held up his ace, let clubs until South had to win. Declarer then ran off dummy's four hearts, discarding a diamond, while West gave up one diamond and one spade.

Now South led a spade to his queen. West won with the king, cashed his two good clubs, and then exited with the spade nine. East had saved the A-10 of spades, and when he collected those two cards, the contract was down one.

As it happened, South could have made the contract by ducking the spade lead from dummy and allowing West to win with the nine, but this was pretty much of a guess, and in any event such close card-reading would not have been needed if South had started off correctly. He held up the club ace too long—he should have taken the second trick in order to keep a low club as an exit card. Then, after running hearts, he could throw West in with a club and let him cash his tricks in that suit. After West was through there, he would have to "break" spades or diamonds; and give South the fulfilling trick.
