

Desolation and destruction and a high-water mark etched in slime in the ruined kitchen of the home of H. J. Murray, Storekeeper of Morris, Manitoba, which bore the full brunt of the flood waters of the Red. Here, Major General Harold J. Riley, Chairman of the Restoration Committee of the Manitoba Flood Relief Fund surveys the wreckage with Mr. Murray's son, Jack, a first-year medical student. Scenes like these are duplicated in thousands of homes throughout Southern Manitoba and Winnipeg. It is to relieve at least a measure of the personal loss that the Manitoba Flood Relief Fund continues its plea for funds. Send your contribution direct to Fund Headquarters in Winnipeg, or to any Chartered bank in Canada. Your donation will be tax exempt.

held high. He was doing just what Little Jim had done when he had met Peter Rabbit, stamping his feet. He stamped hard. He made a little rush toward that Dog, just a few steps. The Dog didn't back up. He showed all his teeth and snarled. Jimmy stamped his feet again. He was warning that Dog to keep away. That Dog opened his mouth and started to rush at Jimmy. Something happened. The little Skunk didn't know just what it was and neither did the big Dog. Jimmy Skunk had suddenly flattened his tail on his back, had pivoted partway around, and had done something he really didn't want to do and never would do unless he had to! He had used his little scent gun. Oh what a smell! The Dog was rolling over and over on the ground and whimpering and yelping and rubbing his face in the dirt.

"Too bad," said Jimmy Skunk, looking down at his small son. "Too bad, but I had to do it in self-defense. Never use your scent gun unless you must. I never do."
